STATE OF TENNESSEE
102nd General Assembly

SENATE REGULAR CALENDAR

Wednesday, March 27, 2002

Summary of General Bills

Published by the Office of the Chief Clerk

1. *SB 2130 by *Cooper J, *Dixon (HB2115 by Cole (Dyer)).

Claims Commission, Tennessee - Extends term of office for persons serving on commission from six years to eight years. - Amends TCA Title 9, Chapter 8, Part 3.

S. S&L Govt. Comm. 9-0-0

Summary: Under present law, the Tennessee claims commission consists of three commissioners, one from each grand division of the state. Each is appointed by the governor and confirmed by both houses of the general assembly. Commissioners serve six-year terms, with the initial terms staggered to prevent simultaneous expiration. This bill would increase the term of commissioners to eight years. It would retain the staggered terms by filling the term expiring on June 30, 2003, with an eight-year appointment and extending the terms of the remaining two commissioners by two years.

2. *SB 2184 by *McNally (HB2877 by Goins).

Home Improvement Contractors - Increases annual licensing fee from $125 to $150; revises amount of bond required for licensing from $10,000 to amount of contractor's license. - Amends TCA Section 62-37-106 and Section 62-37-108. The Abstract summarizes SB2184 as introduced.

S. C,L&A Comm. 9-0-0, with amendment.

3. SB 2366 by *Williams, Sen. (*HB2219 by Dunn).

Administrative Procedure (UAPA) - Permits petition for judicial review of final decision of department of children's services in contested case to be filed in county in which one or more petitioners reside as well as in county of residence of commissioner. - Amends TCA Title 4, Chapter 5. The Abstract summarizes SB2366 as introduced.

S.GW,H&HR Comm. 8-0-0

4. *SB 2418 by *Haynes (HB2778 by Odom).

Appeal and Review - Requires circuit court to grant writ of certiorari to hear appeal from decision of board or commission revoking, suspending, or denying license or permit that is required prior to engaging in conduct protected by First Amendment. - Amends TCA Title 27, Chapter 9. The Abstract summarizes SB2418 as introduced.

5. *SB 2801 by *Rochelle (HB3193 by Hargrove).

Election Laws - Creates Class E felony for person who is not employee of election commission to give unsolicited request for application for absentee ballot; increases ratio for registered voters per voting machine from 650 to 750; makes other revisions to election laws. - Amends TCA Section 2-2-109; Section 2-2-116; Section 2-3-104 and Section 2-6-202.

S. S&L Govt. Comm. 9-0-0, with amendment.

Summary: Under present law, a person who is not an employee of an election commission commits a Class E felony if such person gives an application for an absentee ballot to any person.

This bill would maintain the above felony and create an additional Class E felony for giving an unsolicited request for an application for an absentee ballot to any person.

Under present law, when voting machines are used, there must be, as nearly as practicable, a maximum of 650 voters per machine at any polling place.

This bill would increase the target number per machine to 750.

Under present law, a mailed voter registration must be postmarked or submitted at least 30 days before an election. If the 30th day before an election falls on a Saturday, Sunday, or state holiday, a mailed registration form must be postmarked by the last business day of such weekend or holiday.

This bill would delete the postmark requirement concerning weekends and holidays.

Under present law, registration forms are required to be kept in a permanent record. The record must contain various information concerning the person registered to vote. If a registrant signs a mark or is unable to sign the application, information concerning the applicant's height, color of eyes, color of hair, and distinguishing marks or features must be noted under the signature line.

This bill would abolish the requirement that information concerning personal characteristics be included for those unable to sign or legibly sign the application.

ON MARCH 11, 2002, THE SENATE ADOPTED AMENDMENT #1 AND RESET SENATE BILL 2801, AS AMENDED.

AMENDMENT #1 makes it a Class A misdemeanor instead of a Class E felony for a person who is not an employee of the election commission to give an unsolicited request for application for absentee ballot to any person.

6. SB 2263 by *Fowler (*HB2246 by Sharp).

Highways, Roads and Bridges - Requires department of transportation to minimize noise impact from highway traffic on certain noise sensitive areas. - Amends TCA Title 54.

S. Trans Comm. 8-0-0, with amendment.

Summary: This bill would require the department of transportation to minimize the impacts from highway traffic noise in noise-sensitive areas. Residences, schools, churches, hospitals, libraries, and assisted-living facilities would be considered noise-sensitive areas if they had a valid building permit at the time of the department's noise analysis.

The department would consider highway traffic noise impacts during the planning, location, design, and construction phases of highway project developments. These impacts would occur when predicted noise levels equal or exceed the federal highway administration's noise abatement criteria. In such a case, the department would take reasonable measures that are fiscally prudent and engineering-appropriate to abate the noise. Public input on proposed noise abatement measures would be solicited and received before the final design of a highway, road, or bridge project.

7. *SB 0324 by *Clabough (HB1901 by Sands, *Maddox, *Odom, *Kisher).

Commerce and Insurance, Dept. of - Makes confidentiality provisions concerning entities in receivership or supervision inapplicable to certain insurers that participate in medical assistance program. - Amends TCA Title 56.

S. C,L&A Comm. 9-0-0, with amendment.

Summary: Present law requires all records submitted by a domestic insurance company in a delinquency proceeding to be kept confidential unless ordered otherwise by the chancellor. Present law also requires confidentiality of insurance company records that are held by the commissioner of commerce and insurance in connection with the administrative supervision of an insurance company unless the commissioner determines that releasing such records is in the public's best interest.

This bill would exempt the records of domestic insurers who derived at least 51 percent of their revenue in the past year from contracts with a governmental entity to provide health care services to enrollees in a publicly funded medical assistance program from the confidentiality requirements. This bill would require such records to be open for public inspection unless otherwise prohibited by state or federal law.

8. *SB 1298 by *Cooper J (HB1246 by Fowlkes).

Motor Vehicles, Titling and Registration - Authorizes issuance of cultural license plates for Public Transportation. - Amends TCA Title 54 and Title 55.

S. Trans Comm. 7-0-0, with amendment.

Summary: ON MAY 3, 2001, THE HOUSE ADOPTED AMENDMENT #1 AND PASSED HOUSE BILL 1246, AS AMENDED.

AMENDMENT #1 rewrites this bill.

Present law requires motor vehicle operators to merge for approaching emergency vehicles making audible or visual signals. Present law does not relieve the operator of an emergency vehicle from the duty to operate the vehicle with due regard for other drivers' safety.

This amendment would require motor vehicle operators to merge or slow down when approaching a stationary authorized emergency vehicle, recovery vehicle or highway maintenance vehicle. A person that fails to merge or

HOUSE REGULAR CALENDAR

Summary of General Bills

Wednesday, April 24, 2002 at 1:00 p.m.

Published by the Office of the Chief Clerk

(Asterisked number indicates which bill is printed in your file.)

1. *HB 2992 by *Head, *Langster, *Davidson, *Jones, S., *Pruitt, *Arriola, *Briley, *Turner (Dav) (SB3126 by Rochelle).

State Employees - Changes minimum state contribution to state employees' health insurance from 60 percent of premiums to 80 percent. - Amends TCA Section 8-27-201. The Abstract summarizes HB2992 as introduced.

2. *HB 2247 by *Sharp (SB2309 by Fowler).

Employees, Employers - Reduces maximum maternity leave under statute from four months to 17 work weeks. - Amends TCA Section 4-21-408. The Abstract summarizes HB2247 as introduced.

3. HB 3193 by *Hargrove (*SB2801 by Rochelle).

Election Laws - Creates Class E felony for person who is not employee of election commission to give unsolicited request for application for absentee ballot; increases ratio for registered voters per voting machine from 650 to 750; makes other revisions to election laws. - Amends TCA Section 2-2-109; Section 2-2-116; Section 2-3-104 and Section 2-6-202.

Summary: Under present law, a person who is not an employee of an election commission commits a Class E felony if such person gives an application for an absentee ballot to any person.

This bill would maintain the above felony and create an additional Class E felony for giving an unsolicited request for an application for an absentee ballot to any person.

Under present law, when voting machines are used, there must be, as nearly as practicable, a maximum of 650 voters per machine at any polling place.

This bill would increase the target number per machine to 750.

Under present law, a mailed voter registration must be postmarked or submitted at least 30 days before an election. If the 30th day before an election falls on a Saturday, Sunday, or state holiday, a mailed registration form must be postmarked by the last business day of such weekend or holiday.

This bill would delete the postmark requirement concerning weekends and holidays.

Under present law, registration forms are required to be kept in a permanent record. The record must contain various information concerning the person registered to vote. If a registrant signs a mark or is unable to sign the application, information concerning the applicant's height, color of eyes, color of hair, and distinguishing marks or features must be noted under the signature line.

This bill would abolish the requirement that information concerning personal characteristics be included for those unable to sign or legibly sign the application.

ON MARCH 11, 2002, THE SENATE ADOPTED AMENDMENT #1 AND RESET SENATE BILL 2801, AS AMENDED.

AMENDMENT #1 makes it a Class A misdemeanor instead of a Class E felony for a person who is not an employee of the election commission to give an unsolicited request for application for absentee ballot to any person.

ON MARCH 27, 2002, THE SENATE FURTHER CONSIDERED SENATE BILL 2801, AS AMENDED BY AMENDMENT #1, AND PASSED SENATE BILL 2801, AS AMENDED.

ON APRIL 10, 2002, THE HOUSE SUBSTITUTED SENATE BILL 2801 FOR HOUSE BILL 3193 AND RESET SENATE BILL 2801.

4. *HB 2893 by *Sargent (SB2940 by Atchley).

Securities - Authorizes Canadian broker-dealer to transact business in state without registering with commissioner of commerce and insurance in certain circumstances. - Amends TCA Title 48, Chapter 2, Part 1.

Summary: The Tennessee Securities Act regulates securities and broker-dealers in securities. The Act provides for registration with the commissioner of commerce and insurance for securities and broker-dealers and their agents. There are a number of exemptions to the registration requirements relative to securities and brokers.

This bill would provide an exemption from registration of certain Canadian securities. Such securities would be granted an exemption from registration requirements so long as the sale or offer is effected by a Canadian broker dealer or its agents qualified for exemption from registration with the commissioner of commerce and insurance.

The following establishes the circumstances under which a Canadian broker, who is a resident of Canada and has no office or other physical presence in the U.S. and is unaffiliated with a registered broker in the U.S., may transact business in Tennessee without registering with the commissioner.

(1) The business transacted in state must be limited to effecting of securities:

(a) With a natural person who regularly resides in Canada and who is temporarily in state and with whom the broker had a bona fide customer relationship before the customer entered the U.S.;

(b) With or for a natural person who is a resident of Tennessee, or is temporarily present in this state, who contributes to or is entitled to funds from a Canadian retirement account; and

(2) The broker files the following with the commissioner:

(a) An annual notice in the form prescribed by the commissioner;

(b) A consent to service of process; and

(c) An annual fee of $200; and

(3) The broker is a member of a self regulatory organization or stock exchange in Canada;

(4) The broker maintains its provincial registration and its membership in a self regulatory organization or stock exchange in good standing; and

(5) The broker discloses to its customers in this state that the broker is not subject to the full requirements of the Tennessee Securities Act; and

(6) The broker is not in violation of any law involving fraudulent acts.

This bill would allow a Canadian agent representing a Canadian broker-dealer transacting business in this state to act without registering with the commissioner provided such person is registered in good standing in the appropriate Canadian jurisdiction.

5. *SJR 0555 by *Haynes, *Cohen, *Dixon.

Constitutional Amendments - Proposes amendment to Article VI, Section 14 of Tennessee Constitution, relative to general assembly prescribing maximum fine to be assessed without jury. -

Summary: ON MARCH 18, 2002, SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 555 PASSED FIRST READING, FIRST VOTE, IN THE SENATE.

ON MARCH 27, 2002, SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 555 PASSED SECOND READING, SECOND VOTE, IN THE SENATE.

Tennessee Mail-In Application For Voter Registration

You can use this form to:

- ☞ register to vote in Tennessee or to change your name and/or address.

To register to vote:

- ☞ you must be a U.S. citizen, AND
- ☞ you must be a resident of Tennessee, AND
- ☞ you must be at least 18 years old on/or before the next election, AND
- ☞ you must not have been convicted of a felony, or if you have, your voting rights must have been restored.

☞ If you register by mail, you must vote in person the first time you vote after registering.

MAIL OR HAND DELIVER THIS FORM TO YOUR COUNTY ELECTION COMMISSION.

Go to: http://tnsos.org/elections/election_commissions.php to find your County Election Commission address.

Instructions / checklist:

- ☐ Please PRINT with a blue or black INK pen (not felt tip).
- ☐ Provide the information in boxes 1-10 below, read and answer the VOTER DECLARATION in box 11, and sign by the "X" in box 12.
- ☐ An application for voter registration must be postmarked or hand delivered to the proper county election commission office at least 30 days before an election.
- ☐ Voter registration records are public records, open to inspection by any citizen of Tennessee, excluding social security numbers.
- ☐ To ensure a more confidential mailing process of this form, the applicant is encouraged to place the voter registration application in an envelope addressed to the county election commission.

Names of persons selected for jury service in state court are not chosen from permanent voter registration records.

If you are qualified and the information on your form is complete, we will add your name to the county's voter rolls.

We will then mail you a voter registration card. This card will tell you where to vote.

Federal or Tennessee State Government Issued Photo ID Is Required To Vote Unless Exception Applies.

RESPONSE IN OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFFS’ REQUEST FOR A TEMPORARY INJUNCTION

Defendants, Tre Hargett, Mark Goins, William Lee, and Herbert Slatery III, in their official capacities, submit this Response in Opposition to Plaintiffs’ Request for a Temporary Injunction.

INTRODUCTION AND BACKGROUND

The right to vote can be found in the Tennessee Constitution and has been a settled part of Tennessee law for well over a century. See Tenn. Const. art. IV, § 1; see also State v. Staten, 46 Tenn. 233, 243 (1869). And for nearly that long, courts have recognized that the right is not unlimited. See, e.g., Cook v. State, 16 S.W. 471, 473 (Tenn. 1891). Rather, the Constitution “surrounded the right of suffrage with some inconveniences, and authorized the legislature to attach more.” Id Indeed, “the same constitutional provisions that guarantee the right to vote also charge the state with ensuring that elections are free and equal.” See City of Memphis v. Hargett, 414 S.W.3d 88, 103 (Tenn. 2013). And those same provisions further authorize the General Assembly to enact laws to protect “the purity of the ballot box.” See id.

Tennessee, then, must engage in a balancing act—it must balance its compelling interest in protecting the “purity of the ballot box” against its citizens’ right to vote. Like many states, Tennessee strikes this balance by providing ample opportunity for its 4,164,482 registered voters to cast their votes in person at various locations across the state. (See Goins Decl., ¶ 4.) And, also like many other states, Tennessee permits certain voters—those who are ill, hospitalized, disabled, away from their homes, or beyond a certain age—to cast their votes by mail. See Tenn. Code Ann. § 2-6-201. Even so, the vast majority—nearly 98%—of Tennesseans choose to vote in person each election season. (See Ex. 1 to Goins Decl., 14; Goins Decl., ¶ 5.) For that reason, Tennessee’s approach is designed to serve those voters.

The COVID-19 pandemic, however, has upended nearly every facet of American life. And elections are no exception. For that reason, Tennessee has quickly taken steps to ensure that its elections may proceed safely and securely. On April 23, 2020, the Secretary of State’s Division of Elections released its Tennessee Election COVID-19 Contingency Plan (the “Plan”) that implements numerous safeguards for in-person voters and poll workers and also accounts for increased mail-in voting for eligible voters. (See Ex. 1 to Goins Decl.; Goins Decl., ¶¶ 3–4.) This Plan is a result of “research regarding not only elections[,] but the current state of healthcare.” (See id. at 1.) In crafting this Plan, the Division of Elections worked with county, state, and federal election officials both in Tennessee and across the country. (See id.) As a result, the Plan accounts for the risks of COVID-19 in the election context while also recognizing the historical preference for in-person voting. The Plan also acknowledges the logistical hurdles—or impossibilities—of rapidly implementing statewide absentee voting.

In light of these realities, the Plan has been designed to protect the interest of voters in having their votes count while also furthering the State's interests in the integrity and efficiency of the election process. The Plan does this in two main ways. First, it establishes safety guidelines for polling places. Polling places, for example, are instructed to: keep doors open to minimize the need to touch handles or knobs; post signs advising voters to wear masks and gloves whenever possible; comply with CDC guidelines by maintaining six feet of separation at all times; spread out voting machines to facilitate social distancing; place plexiglass barriers between poll workers and voters; regularly sanitize voting machines; and screen polling workers for symptoms before election and early voting days. (See Ex. 1 to Goins Decl., 30–35; Goins Decl., ¶¶ 9–10, 27–33.)

And second, the Plan accounts for a dramatic increase in absentee voting. The Plan contemplates absentee voting by every registered voter over the age of 60—a group of about 1.4 million, or approximately 36% of the State's registered voters. (See id. at 10; see generally Goins Decl., ¶¶ 11–13, 16–17, 20–22); see also Tennessee Secretary of State, Election Statistics, Voter Registration December 2019, <https://sos-tn-gov-files.tnsosfiles.com/RptSixMonthSumDec2019.pdf?bwg.F1B6O64zPY8baFShlOjro1wu1OvP>. In the last presidential election, by contrast, fewer than 3% of Tennessee voters cast their votes by mail. (See Ex. 1 to Goins Decl., 14.) This unprecedented increase in absentee ballots requires a similar increase in the State's capacity to process those ballots. (See generally Roberts Decl., ¶¶ 3, 9; Phillips Decl., ¶ 4; Davis Decl., ¶ 4; Sweat Decl., ¶ 4; Pulley Decl., ¶ 4.) This means that, in addition to the cost of purchasing the ballots themselves, county election commissions across the state will need to hire additional workers and may need to rent larger facilities. (See Roberts Decl., ¶ 9; Phillips Decl., ¶ 4; Davis Decl., ¶ 4; Sweat Decl., ¶ 4; Pulley Decl., ¶ 4.)

But Plaintiffs want more. On May 8, 2020, Plaintiffs filed a complaint in which they allege that Tennessee’s longstanding requirement that votes must generally be cast in person is an unconstitutional limitation on the right to vote. (See Compl., ¶¶ 1, 43–45.) Plaintiffs ask this Court to issue injunctive relief requiring Tennessee to permit every registered voter to cast their vote by mail. (See generally Compl., ¶ 53.)

ARGUMENT

Tennessee Courts have long recognized that a temporary injunction is an “extraordinary” remedy that should be granted “with great caution.” See, e.g., Hall v. Britton, 292 S.W.2d 524, 531 (1953); Galyon v. First Tennessee Bank Nat. Ass’n, No. 03A01-9106CH00219, 1991 WL 259473, at *1 (Tenn. Ct. App. Dec. 11, 1991) (noting that “injunctive relief” is “an extraordinary equitable remedy”). For that reason, “the decision to grant an injunction should not be a perfunctory one.” Alexandria-Williams v. Goins, No. W2018-01024-COA-R10-CV, 2018 WL 3198799, at *2 (Tenn. Ct. App. June 26, 2018). Indeed, “there is no power the exercise of which is more delicate, which requires greater caution, deliberation and sound discretion or is more dangerous in a doubtful case.” Id. (quoting Mabry v. Ross, 48 Tenn. 769, 774 (1870)).

In light of these principles, the Tennessee Rules of Civil Procedure permit awards of injunctive relief only where “it is clearly shown by verified complaint, affidavit or other evidence that the movant’s rights are being or will be violated by an adverse party” and that “the movant will suffer immediate and irreparable injury, loss or damage pending a final judgment in the action, or that the acts or omissions of the adverse party will tend to render such final judgment ineffectual.” Tenn. R. Civ. P. 65.04. When considering requests for injunctive relief under this rule, Tennessee trial courts—like their federal counterparts—consider four factors: “(1) the threat of irreparable harm to the plaintiff if the injunction is not granted; (2) the balance between this harm and the injury that granting the injunction would inflict on defendant; (3) the probability that plaintiff will succeed on the merits; and (4) the public interest.” Moody v. Hutchison, 247 S.W.3d 187, 199–200 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2007); see also S. Cent. Tennessee R.R. Auth. v. Harakas, 44 S.W.3d 912, 919 n.6 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2000) (recognizing that this “four-factor test” is “[t]he most common description of the standard for preliminary injunction in federal and state courts”). Here, all four factors weigh against granting Plaintiffs’ requested relief.

I. Plaintiffs are Unlikely to Succeed on the Merits.

Plaintiffs cannot demonstrate that they are likely to succeed on the merits of their claims. In their complaint, Plaintiffs contend that Tennessee’s existing election requirements impose “unreasonably burdensome” conditions on the right to vote, (see Compl., ¶ 43), and deprive Plaintiffs of equal protection (see id. at ¶¶ 44–45). For these reasons, Plaintiffs argue, the challenged laws violate the Tennessee Constitution. Plaintiffs are unlikely to succeed on the merits of these claims. First, because Plaintiffs’ claims do not present a justiciable case or controversy. And second, because Plaintiffs’ constitutional claims fail under the standards set out by the Tennessee and United States Supreme Courts.

A. Plaintiffs’ claims do not present a justiciable case or controversy.

Tennessee Courts have “long recognized that the province of a court is to decide, not advise, and to settle rights, not to give abstract opinions.” See West v. Schofield, 468 S.W.3d 482, 490 (Tenn. 2015) (quoting Norma Faye Pyles Lynch Family Purpose LLC v. Putnam Cty., 301 S.W.3d 196, 203 (Tenn. 2009)) (internal quotation marks omitted). Put another way, “Tennessee Courts decide only legal controversies.” Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). To determine whether a legal controversy exists, Tennessee courts employ several related “justiciability doctrines,” including, for example, the prohibition against advisory opinions, standing, ripeness, and mootness. See id. These doctrines ensure that courts are not “called upon to decide abstract questions of wide public significance even though other governmental institutions may be more competent to address the questions and even though judicial intervention may be unnecessary to protect individual rights.” Id. (quoting Am. Civil Liberties Union of Tenn. v. Darnell, 195 S.W.3d 612, 620 (Tenn. 2006)). Here, two of these justiciability doctrines—standing and ripeness—render Plaintiffs’ claims nonjusticiable.

1. Plaintiffs lack standing.

It is well settled that a plaintiff’s standing is a “threshold determination” in any case. See Tubbs v. Long, No. M2019-00627-COA-R3-CV, 2020 WL 2046057, at *9 (Tenn. Ct. App. Apr. 28, 2020). To establish standing, a plaintiff must “show three indispensable elements by the same degree of evidence as other matters on which the plaintiff bears the burden of proof.” See Darnell, 195 S.W.3d at 620 (citing Petty v. Daimler/Chrysler Corp., 91 S.W.3d 765, 767 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2002)) (internal quotation marks omitted). First, “a plaintiff must show a distinct and palpable injury”; second, a plaintiff must show “a causal connection between the claimed injury and the challenged conduct”; and third, a plaintiff must show that “the alleged injury is capable of being redressed by a favorable decision of the court.” See id. at 620. Plaintiffs here have not made these necessary showings.

Plaintiffs have not shown a “distinct and palpable injury.” See id. In their complaint, Plaintiffs allege a range of possible harms that may occur if Tennessee’s existing election laws are enforced. Plaintiffs, for example, contend that “[v]oters standing in line close to each other, handling ballots, and using touch screens make for a potentially toxic stew of community transmission of [COVID-19].” (See Compl., ¶ 30.) Similarly, they allege that enforcement of Tennessee’s current voting requirements increases the risk that voters and poll workers will “contract [COVID-19] through election-related contact and thereafter increase the reach of community spread.” (See id. at ¶ 33.) And finally, Plaintiffs suggest that requiring voters to remain at least six feet apart “would physically elongate voter lines at polling locations, likely forcing certain voters to stand in line to vote” far enough from the polling locations that they cannot be “shield[ed] [] from unwanted campaign advertisements and solicitations.” (See id. at ¶ 40.)

But these “conjectural” and “hypothetical” injuries are insufficient to establish standing for any Plaintiff. See, e.g., Darnell, 195 S.W.3d at 620, 622–25 (Tenn. 2006). Indeed, Plaintiffs offer little more than speculation and abstract concerns about the risks of COVID-19 transmission during elections that are months in the future. Plaintiffs cannot show that COVID-19 will be a danger at polling locations when these elections take place. Nor can they provide any evidence to support their fears of contracting COVID-19. Not only that, but Plaintiffs do not allege any facts that suggest that their fears are real—nowhere in the complaint do they allege that they have taken any steps to protect themselves from COVID-19. They do not allege that they have been self-quarantining, social-distancing, wearing masks, or indeed taking any precautions to avoid exposure.¹ And even if they could, none of the Plaintiffs can show that they will lose access to the right to vote—the purported basis of their suit.

What is more, several individual Plaintiffs cannot show injury for additional, independent reasons. Three Plaintiffs allege that autoimmune diseases or other conditions render them especially vulnerable to COVID-19. (See Compl., ¶¶ 7–8, 10.) These Plaintiffs contend that they will be harmed if they are required to cast their votes in person. But nowhere do these Plaintiffs allege that they have applied for and been denied permission to vote absentee. Instead, they simply assume that their applications will be denied. These assumed denials, however, are not injuries sufficient to establish standing. See Darnell, 195 S.W.3d at 620 (noting that standing requires a “distinct and palpable injury”). And a third Plaintiff—Jeff Bullard—alleges that he will be harmed if he is required to vote in person. (See Compl., ¶ 9.) Mr. Bullard, however, is not registered to vote at all. (See Goins Decl., ¶ 38.) At this point, then, he cannot show any impairment of his right to vote resulting from Tennessee’s in-person voting requirement.

Nor have Plaintiffs established “a causal connection between the claimed injury and the challenged conduct.” See Darnell, 195 S.W.3d at 620. As discussed above, Plaintiffs’ claimed injuries focus on the potential risk of contracting COVID-19. They allege that these risks naturally follow from the enforcement of Tennessee’s existing in-person voting requirements. But the requirement to vote in person does not equate to a requirement to stand in close proximity to others without any protective equipment. In other words, Plaintiffs’ request for relief is premised entirely on a hypothetical worst-case scenario for the upcoming elections—one that the State is actively working to prevent. In fact, the State’s newly developed Plan addresses many of Plaintiffs’ concerns by implementing social distancing, sanitation, and other measures at polling places to further the safety of voters and polling workers. (See Goins Decl., ¶¶ 9–10; 26–35; see also Ex. 1 to Goins Decl., 30–35.) Thus, even if Plaintiffs’ concerns about contracting COVID-19 were sufficient to confer standing in the abstract, the “line of causation between” those concerns and the challenged State laws is far “too attenuated” to establish standing here. See Darnell, 195 S.W.3d at 621.

And for several specific Plaintiffs, there is no “line of causation” at all. As discussed above, three Plaintiffs allege that they have autoimmune diseases or other conditions that render them especially vulnerable to COVID-19. (See Compl., ¶ 7–8, 10.) But they have not applied to vote absentee because they assume their applications would be denied. That assumption, however, cannot serve as the “line of causation” between the harms they allege and Tennessee’s in-person voting requirement. See Darnell, 195 S.W.3d at 621; see also id. at 620 (explaining that “[a] plaintiff may satisfy [the causation] element by establishing the existence of a ‘fairly traceable’ connection between the alleged injury in fact and the defendant's challenged conduct”). And another Plaintiff—Jeff Bullard—is not registered to vote at all. Thus, to the extent that he is unable to vote in the coming elections, that inability results from his failure to register—not from the challenged Tennessee law. In other words, he too has failed to show any “line of causation.”

In sum, Plaintiffs have failed to make their “threshold” showing of standing. The injuries they allege are speculative and they cannot show a causal link between the challenged laws and their alleged injuries. These failures deprive them of standing and are fatal to their claims.

2. Plaintiffs’ claims are not ripe.

Much like standing, the doctrine of ripeness exists to “prevent the courts, through avoidance of premature adjudication, from entangling themselves in abstract disagreements.” See West, 468 S.W.3d at 490 (quoting Abbott Labs. v. Gardner, 387 U.S. 136, 148 (1967)). The “central concern of the ripeness doctrine,” then, “is whether the case involves uncertain or contingent future events that may or may not occur as anticipated or, indeed, may not occur at all.” Id. at 491 (quoting B & B Enters. of Wilson Cty., LLC v. City of Lebanon, 318 S.W.3d 839, 848 (Tenn. 2010)). To determine whether a case is ripe, Tennessee courts engage in a two-pronged analysis. See id. The first prong considers “the fitness of the issues for judicial decision.” Id.

(quoting Abbott Labs., 387 U.S. at 149). And the second prong considers the “hardship to the parties of withholding court consideration.” Id. Here, application of these prongs reveals that Plaintiffs’ claims—particularly relating to the November election—are not ripe.

First, Plaintiffs’ claims are not fit for judicial decision. See id. Generally, Plaintiffs allege that they will be harmed if Tennessee’s existing in-person voting requirements are enforced in the upcoming elections. Plaintiffs, for example suggest that the enforcement of these requirements increases the risk that voters and poll workers will “contract [COVID-19] through election-related contact and thereafter increase the reach of community spread.” (See Compl., ¶ 33.) Several individual Plaintiffs allege that, because of their existing medical conditions, they are especially concerned about the risk of contracting COVID-19. (See id. at ¶¶ 7–8, 10.) And others, while not alleging any special vulnerabilities themselves, allege that they worry they will transmit the disease to others in their homes or communities. (See id. at ¶¶ 5–6, 9.) These allegations, however, are not “based on an existing legal controversy.” See West, 468 S.W.3d at 491. Rather, they are based on “hypothetical and contingent future events that may never occur.” See id. No part of Plaintiffs’ complaint demonstrates that they are “presently subject” to the harms they allege. Nor could it—the harms Plaintiffs allege can occur only if the State fails to take any action to protect voters and polling workers. But the State is taking substantial action—based on recommended guidelines—to protect voters and polling workers. As a result, Plaintiffs’ alleged harms are “hypothetical,” “contingent,” and “may never occur.” See id.

Second, Plaintiffs will not suffer “meaningful hardship” if this Court declines to consider their claims. See id. at 492. Plaintiffs claim that they will suffer harm if Tennessee’s in-person voting requirements are enforced in the upcoming elections. The “prototypical case of hardship” is one where a plaintiff “faces a choice between immediately complying with a burdensome law or risking serious penalties.” See id. (quoting Warshak v. United States, 532 F.3d 521, 531 (6th Cir. 2008)) (internal alteration and quotation marks omitted). Plaintiffs cannot allege anything resembling this “prototypical hardship” here. As discussed above, the harms Plaintiffs allege are speculative and hinge on a range of contingent future events—none of which are certain to occur. Not only that, but to the extent that Plaintiffs will ever “face a choice” between complying with Tennessee’s in-person voting requirements and risking exposure to COVID-19, that choice would be months in the future and the lack of judicial relief now will not impose any meaningful hardship.

In sum, Plaintiffs have not shown that their claims are fit for judicial resolution. Nor have they demonstrated that they will suffer any meaningful hardship if this Court declines to review their claims. Put simply, Plaintiffs’ claims are not ripe.

B. Plaintiffs’ constitutional claims fail as a matter of law.

Even if this Court determines that Plaintiffs’ claims are justiciable, Plaintiffs are not entitled to relief. Plaintiffs contend that Tennessee’s existing in-person voting requirement is unconstitutional. More specifically, Plaintiffs allege that the challenged law “unreasonably burdens” their right to vote and that it deprives them of equal protection. It is well settled that when “evaluating the constitutionality of a statute,” courts “begin with the presumption that an act of the General Assembly is constitutional.” See Waters v. Farr, 291 S.W.3d 873, 882 (Tenn. 2009) (quoting Gallaher v. Elam, 104 S.W.3d 455, 459 (Tenn. 2003)). This presumption is strongest when “a party brings a facial challenge to the validity of a statute.” Id. A facial challenge, “involves a claim that the statute fails an applicable constitutional test and should be found invalid in all applications.” Id. at 921. An as-applied challenge, by contrast, “presumes that the [the challenged] statute is generally valid,” but “asserts that specific applications of the statute are unconstitutional.” Id. at 923.

Plaintiffs purport to challenge this law as-applied to them. (See Compl., ¶ 17.) But Plaintiffs’ challenge is as-applied in name only. Plaintiffs ask this Court not simply to invalidate Tennessee’s in-person voting requirement for them—but to enjoin the State from relying on the challenged statute as a basis for “[d]enying any written or in-person absentee ballot request” for the upcoming elections or from “[r]ejecting any absentee ballot” cast in those elections. (See Compl., ¶ 53 (emphasis added).) This is a facial challenge. As a result, Plaintiffs bear a heavy burden. See Waters, 291 S.W.3d at 921 (“[a] facial challenge to a statute is the most difficult challenge to mount successfully.”).

Plaintiffs have not carried this burden and this Court should reject their constitutional claims. First, because the challenged laws are permissible exercises of the State’s authority to regulate elections and do not unreasonably burden the right to vote. And second, because the challenged laws do not deprive Plaintiffs of equal protection under the law.

1. The challenged laws are not “unreasonably burdensome.”

Plaintiffs argue that Tennessee’s in-person voting requirement “unreasonably burdens” their right to vote. This argument fails. It is true, of course, that the right to vote is fundamental. See May v. Carlton, 245 S.W.3d 340, 349 (Tenn. 2008). It is equally true, however, that the right to vote is not without limits. See City of Memphis, 414 S.W.3d at 114 (Koch, J. concurring) (recognizing that while “[t]here can be little debate that the right to vote” is “a fundamental right,” it is “not absolute”). Indeed, more than a century ago, the Tennessee Supreme Court recognized that our “constitution surrounded the right of suffrage with some inconveniences, and authorized the legislature to attach more.” Cook, 16 S.W. at 473. Stated differently, our constitution “entrusts the General Assembly with both the duty and the authority” to ensure the “purity of the ballot box.” See City of Memphis, 414 S.W.3d at 104 (citing Tenn. Const. art. IV, § 1).

When exercising its duty and authority to protect the integrity of the election process, the General Assembly “must be reasonable and just, not imposing impossible or oppressive conditions, else its legislation be void.” See Cook, 16 S.W. at 473. These principles, recognized by the Tennessee Supreme Court, also underlie the standard for analyzing voting regulations developed by the United States Supreme Court. See City of Memphis, 414 S.W.3d at 115 (Koch, J. concurring) (recognizing that the standard set out in Cook “bears a strong resemblance to the United States Supreme Court’s ‘excessively burdensome requirements’ standard”). Under that standard, courts must weigh the character and magnitude of the injury to the plaintiff against the State’s interests in justifying the requirements imposed by its election laws. See, e.g., Anderson v. Celebrezze, 460 U.S. 780, 789 (1983). The level of scrutiny applied to the State’s requirements depends on the extent to which the challenged regulation burdens the plaintiff’s rights. See Burdick v. Takushi, 504 U.S. 428, 434 (1992). If the State’s requirements severely restrict those rights, then the requirements may be upheld only if they are narrowly tailored to advance a compelling State interest. Id. If, however, state law imposes only “reasonable,” “nondiscriminatory” restrictions, the State’s important regulatory interests are generally sufficient to justify the restrictions imposed. Id.; see also Anderson, 460 U.S. at 788.

Here, Tennessee’s in-person voting requirement is a “reasonable” and “nondiscriminatory” means of ensuring the purity of the election process that does not “impos[e] impossible or oppressive conditions” on the right to vote. See Burdick, 504 U.S. at 434; see also Cook, 16 S.W. at 473. As a result, Tennessee’s “important regulatory interests” mean that the challenged laws should be upheld. See Burdick, 504 U.S. at 434; see also Anderson, 460 U.S. at 788.

The challenged provision—Tenn. Code Ann. § 2-6-201—is a reasonable and nondiscriminatory means of furthering the State’s compelling interest in preventing fraud. The provision is an exception to the general rule that votes must be cast in person. It permits certain registered voters to vote by mail, including: voters who will be outside of the county in which they are required to vote; voters who are more than 60 years old, hospitalized, ill, disabled, or their caretakers; and voters who cannot appear because they are observing a religious holiday. See generally Tenn. Code Ann. § 2-6-201. Voters who do not fall within one of the categories enumerated in this statute must cast their votes in person. See Foust v. May, 660 S.W.2d 487, 488 (Tenn. 1983) (recognizing that “absentee voting statutes require strict construction, unlike other election laws which are construed liberally in favor of the voter”). An explicit purpose of this provision—and indeed the chapter as a whole—is “[t]o prevent fraud in an election.” See Tenn. Code Ann. § 2-6-101(c); see also Foust, 660 S.W.2d at 488 (listing prevention of fraud as “the purpose of the chapter”). And it is well settled that the State has compelling interests “in the integrity of the election process” and preventing voter fraud. See City of Memphis, 414 S.W.3d at 104 (recognizing that the State’s interest in “the integrity of the election process empowers the [it] to enact laws to prevent voter fraud before it occurs, rather than only allowing the [it] to remedy fraud after it has become a problem”).

The challenged provision also furthers the State’s interest in the efficient and responsible use of its resources. Given the overwhelming historical preference of Tennessee voters to vote in person, (See Ex. 1 to Goins Decl., 14), and the extraordinary amount of money, space, and staff necessary to provide for the possibility of up to 100% in person voting and 100% voting by mail, (See Roberts Decl., ¶¶ 3, 9; Phillips Decl., ¶¶ 4, 6–7, 9; Davis Decl., ¶¶ 4, 6–7, 9; Sweat Decl., ¶¶ 4–6, 8; Pulley Decl., ¶¶ 4, 6–7, 9), Tennessee’s interest in not expending vast resources for a non-preferred method of voting is equally compelling.

What is more, the challenged provision does not impose impossible or oppressive conditions on the right to vote. Plaintiffs claim that enforcement of Tennessee’s in-person voting requirement in August and November will unconstitutionally burden their right to vote. Specifically, they contend that enforcement of Tennessee’s current voting requirements increases the risk that voters and poll workers will “contract [COVID-19] through election-related contact and thereafter increase the reach of community spread.” (See id. at ¶ 33.) Plaintiffs also suggest that requiring voters to remain at least six feet apart “would physically elongate voter lines at polling locations, likely forcing certain voters to stand in line to vote” far enough from the polling locations that they will be exposed to “unwanted campaign advertisements and solicitations.” (See id. at ¶ 40.) But none of the alleged harms—even if they did occur—would prevent someone from exercising their right to vote. The State has implemented a comprehensive Plan approved by the Tennessee Department of Health and following applicable CDC recommendations to ensure safe and easy access to early voting, absentee voting for those who are statutorily eligible, and voting on election day for those who choose to wait.

To summarize: Tennessee’s in-person voting requirement reflects the most efficient use of resources to provide the method of voting preferred by the vast majority of Tennesseans and is a longstanding and reasonable means of ensuring the integrity of the election process that does not unreasonably burden the right to vote. As a result, under the standards set out by the United States and Tennessee Supreme Courts, the challenged provisions are constitutional. See Burdick, 504 U.S. at 434; see also Cook, 16 S.W. at 473.

Even if Tennessee’s in-person voting requirement were subject to strict scrutiny, this result would not change. Strict scrutiny is a stringent standard of review and is reserved for laws that impose “severe restrictions” on constitutional rights. See City of Memphis, 414 S.W.3d at 102 (Tenn. 2013) (quoting Burdick, 504 U.S. at 434). To “satisfy strict scrutiny” in the voting-rights context, the proponent of the law must “demonstrate that any burden on the right to vote is justified by a compelling state interest.” See id. The proponent must also “show that the regulation at issue is narrowly tailored to achieve [that] compelling state interest.” Id. A regulation will be viewed as “narrowly tailored” only if there are no “alternative means of achieving the state interest that would be less intrusive and comparably effective.” Id. But this standard, while stringent, is not impossible to meet. See generally id. at 102–06 (concluding that a challenged election law survived strict scrutiny).

Here, Tennessee’s existing in-person voting requirement meets this standard. As discussed above, there can be no doubt that the State has compelling interests “in the integrity of the election process” and preventing voter fraud. See City of Memphis, 414 S.W.3d at 104. Nor can there be any doubt that the State’s interest in “the integrity of the election process empowers the state to enact laws to prevent voter fraud before it occurs, rather than only allowing the state to remedy fraud after it has become a problem.” Id. And because absentee voting is particularly ripe for fraud, these compelling interests authorize the State to place limitations on that method of voting. See Hilliard v. Park, 370 S.W.2d 829, 832 (Tenn. 1963) (observing that because the “purity of the ballot is more difficult to preserve when voting absent than when voting in person,” absentee voting laws “should be strictly construed.”), overruled in part on other grounds by Southall v. Billings, 375 S.W.2d 844 (Tenn. 1963).

The State’s in-person requirement is narrowly tailored to further these compelling interests. Limiting absentee voting is a “logical method of protecting the integrity of elections by combating [absentee] voter fraud.” See City of Memphis, 414 S.W.3d at 104 (concluding that a photo ID requirement was a “logical method of protecting the integrity of elections by combating in person voter fraud”). Under Tennessee’s current law, absentee voting is available to those over the age of 60, those who are ill, hospitalized, or disabled and those who are away from home and cannot appear to vote in person. See Tenn. Code Ann. § 2-6-201. In other words, absentee voting is available for those who are likely to be most burdened by being required to cast their votes in person and those who would most likely be disenfranchised if they could not vote absentee. Plaintiffs do not offer—and it is difficult to imagine—a more narrowly tailored means of furthering the State’s interests in preventing absentee voting fraud. Nor can Plaintiffs escape the fact that there is no constitutional right to absentee voting at all. Cf. McDonald v. Bd. of Election Comm’rs of Chicago, 394 U.S. 802, 808 (1969)

Plaintiffs, then, cannot show that Tennessee’s in-person voting requirement unconstitutionally limits their right to vote. This is true whether that requirement is analyzed under the United States Supreme Court’s Anderson-Burdick framework or under the more stringent strict scrutiny analysis.

2. The challenged provision does not deprive Plaintiffs of equal protection under the law.

Plaintiffs also argue that Tennessee’s in-person voting requirement violates the equal protection clause. Again, Plaintiffs’ argument fails. It is well settled that the equal protection provisions of the Tennessee Constitution confer “essentially the same protections” as the equal protection clause of the United States Constitution. McClay v. Airport Mgmt. Servs., LLC, 596 S.W.3d 686, 695 (Tenn. 2020) (citing Tenn. Small Sch. Sys. v. McWherter, 851 S.W.2d 139, 152 (Tenn. 1993)). Tennessee’s provisions, like their federal counterpart, require that “persons similarly situated be treated the same under the law,” or, put another way, that “the state treat persons under like circumstances the same.” Henderson v. Bates, No. W2005-01506-COA-R3-CV, 2006 WL 360844, at *2 (Tenn. Ct. App. Feb. 17, 2006) (citing Genesco, Inc. v. Woods, 578

S.W.2d 639, 641 (Tenn. 1979)). Tennessee’s equal protection provisions, then, guarantee “equal laws, not equal results.” See id. (quoting Pers. Adm’r of Massachusetts v. Feeney, 442 U.S. 256, 273 (1979)).

Because of the similarity between the Tennessee and United States Constitutional provisions, Tennessee has “adopted an analytical framework similar to that used by the United States Supreme Court in analyzing equal protection challenges.” Gallaher, 104 S.W.3d at 460 (citing State v. Robinson, 29 S.W.3d 476, 481 (Tenn. 2000)). Under this framework, courts apply one of three standards of scrutiny, “depending upon the nature of the right asserted or the class of persons affected: (1) strict scrutiny; (2) heightened scrutiny; or (3) reduced scrutiny, applying the rational basis test.” Id. Strict scrutiny applies only when the classification at issue: “(1) operates to the peculiar disadvantage of a suspect class; or (2) interferes with the exercise of a fundamental right.” See id.

But while voting is a fundamental right, it not analyzed under these traditional levels of scrutiny. Instead, as discussed above, voting-rights claims are analyzed under the Supreme Court’s Anderson-Burdick framework. See, e.g., Mays v. LaRose, 951 F.3d 775, 783 (6th Cir. 2020) (recognizing that “when a plaintiff alleges that a state has burdened voting rights through the disparate treatment of voters, this court’s precedent requires us to apply the Anderson-Burdick framework” (internal quotation marks omitted)). Under Anderson-Burdick, courts “first look to the burden the State’s regulation imposes on the right to vote.” See id. (citing Burdick, 504 U.S. at 434). If the State’s regulations are “reasonable [and] nondiscriminatory,” courts apply rational basis review and “the State’s important regulatory interests are generally sufficient to justify the restrictions.” Id. (internal quotation marks omitted). But where the State regulations “impose severe restrictions on the right to vote, such as poll taxes or limiting access to the ballot, strict scrutiny applies.” Id. Here, the challenged regulations are reasonable and do not impose a substantial burden on the right to vote.

Begin with the burdens. Plaintiffs contend that enforcement of Tennessee’s in-person voting requirement will increase the risk that voters and poll workers will “contract [COVID-19] through election-related contact and thereafter increase the reach of community spread.” (See id. at ¶ 33.) But nowhere do Plaintiffs allege that they will lose access to the right to vote. At most, they allege that they will be harmed by lack of access to their preferred method of voting: absentee voting by mail. The Supreme Court, however, has recognized that there is no constitutional right to vote absentee. See McDonald, 394 U.S. at 808 (upholding an Illinois law which limited absentee ballots to specific enumerated groups against an equal protection challenge because “there [was] nothing in the record to indicate that the [law] [had] an impact on appellants’ ability to exercise the fundamental right to vote”). As a result, Plaintiffs’ alleged burden—the inability to vote absentee—is minimal.

Now consider the State’s interests. There is no question that Tennessee’s interest in the integrity of the election process is compelling. See, e.g., City of Memphis, 414 S.W.3d at 103 (Tenn. 2013); see also Bemis Pentecostal Church v. State, 731 S.W.2d 897, 901 (Tenn. 1987) (“[t]he authority of the Tennessee Legislature to control the conduct of elections held in this State is manifest”). Indeed, “the same constitutional provisions that guarantee the right to vote also charge the state with ensuring that elections are free and equal.” See City of Memphis, 414 S.W.3d at 103 (citing Tenn. Const. art. I, § 5) (internal quotation marks omitted). And those same provisions further “authorize the General Assembly to enact laws to protect “the purity of the ballot box.” See id. (citing Tenn. Const. art. IV, § 1). These compelling interests recognized by Tennessee Courts and acknowledged in the Tennessee Constitution “empower[] the state to enact laws to prevent voter fraud before it occurs, rather than only allowing the state to remedy fraud after it has become a problem.” See id. at 104 (citing Munro v. Socialist Workers Party, 479 U.S. 189, 195–96 (1986)). And Tennessee courts have recognized that absentee voting is especially susceptible to fraud.² See, e.g., Hilliard, 370 S.W.2d at 832 (Tenn. 1963), (observing that “that purity of the ballot is more difficult to preserve when voting absent than when voting in person”); Emery v. Robertson Cty. Election Comm’n, 586 S.W.2d 103, 109 (Tenn. 1979) (noting that violations of “statutes, such as the absentee voting statutes, present the opportunity for fraud, whether committed or intended”). And again, given Tennesseans’ overwhelming historical preference for in-person voting, (see Ex. 1 to Goins Decl., 14), and the extraordinary amount of money, space, and staff needed to provide for the possibility of up to 100% in-person voting and 100% by-mail voting, (see Roberts Decl., ¶¶ 3, 9; Phillips Decl., ¶¶ 4, 9; Davis Decl., ¶¶ 4, 6–7, 9; Sweat Decl., ¶¶ 4–6, 8; Pulley Decl., ¶¶ 4, 6–7, 9), Tennessee’s interest in not expending resources for a non-preferred method of voting is equally compelling.

At bottom, Plaintiffs allege only the inability to vote by mail—not the loss of access to the right to vote. This minimal burden cannot outweigh the State’s long-recognized and compelling interests in preventing fraud and protecting the integrity of the election process—interests that carry even greater weight in the absentee-voting context. Nor can it outweigh the State’s interests in the efficient allocation and responsible use of its resources. As a result, Plaintiffs are unlikely to prevail on their equal protection claims.

² Tennessee courts are not alone in recognizing the risks associated with absentee voting. See, e.g., Crawford v. Marion Cty. Election Bd., 553 U.S. 181, 225 (2008) (observing that “absentee-ballot fraud” was “a documented problem in Indiana”); Griffin v. Roupas, 385 F.3d 1128, 1130–31 (7th Cir. 2004) (recognizing that “[v]oting fraud is a serious problem in U.S. elections generally” and that “it is facilitated by absentee voting”); Feldman v. Arizona Sec’y of State’s Office, 208 F. Supp. 3d 1074, 1091 (D. Ariz.), aff’d, 840 F.3d 1057 (9th Cir. 2016) (noting that “[m]any courts” have “recognized that absentee voting presents a greater opportunity for fraud”); Qualkinbush v. Skubisz, 826 N.E.2d 1181, 1197 (Ill. App. 2004) (“[i]t is evident that the integrity of the vote is even more susceptible to influence and manipulation when done by absentee ballot.”).

II. Plaintiffs Cannot Demonstrate Irreparable Harm.

Plaintiffs have not demonstrated irreparable harm—a prerequisite to injunctive relief. See Moody, 247 S.W.3d at 199 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2007) (explaining that a temporary injunction may be issued only “if it is clearly shown . . . that the movant’s rights are being or will be violated by an adverse party and the movant will suffer immediate and irreparable injury, loss or damage pending a final judgment in the action”). To merit an award of injunctive relief, the irreparable injury “must be real and practically unavoidable and certain.” See State ex rel. Agee v. Chapman, 922 S.W.2d 516, 519 (Tenn. Ct. App. 1995) (citing J.W. Kelly & Co. v. Conner, 123 S.W. 622 (Tenn. 1909)). Put another way, “[a]n injunction of course, will not be granted unless the injury is threatened or imminent and, in all probability, about to be inflicted.” State ex rel. Baird v. Wilson Cty., 371 S.W.2d 434, 439 (Tenn. 1963). Nor may an injunction be issued “merely to relieve the fears or apprehensions of an applicant.” Id.

Yet “fears [and] apprehension” are all that Plaintiffs offer here. They ask this Court to issue sweeping injunctive relief based on little more than speculation and abstract concerns about the risks of COVID-19 transmission during elections that are months in the future. Plaintiffs, for example, suggest that enforcement of Tennessee’s current voting requirements unreasonably increases the risk that voters and poll workers will “contract [COVID-19] through election-related contact and thereafter increase the reach of community spread.” (See id. at ¶ 33.) Plaintiffs also claim that requiring voters to remain at least six feet apart “would physically elongate voter lines at polling locations, likely forcing certain voters to stand in line to vote” far enough from the polling locations that they cannot be “shield[ed] from unwanted campaign advertisements and solicitations.” (See id. at ¶ 40.) These speculative injuries—occurring, if at all, months in the future—are hardly “imminent.” See Baird, 371 S.W.2d at 439. Nor are they “practically unavoidable and certain.” See Agee, 922 S.W.2d at 519. And the Court cannot accept Plaintiffs’ assumptions without proof that State and county officials will not comply with the restrictions on advertisements and solicitations; “public officials in Tennessee are presumed to discharge their duties in good faith and in accordance with the law.” West v. Schofield, 468 S.W.3d 482, 493 (Tenn. 2015). It follows, then, that Plaintiffs have not made their required showing of irreparable harm.

III. Plaintiffs’ Requested Injunction is Likely to Cause Substantial Harm to the State and the Public Interest Would not be Served by the Issuance of the Injunction.

Plaintiffs have failed to demonstrate that injunctive relief is warranted under the final two temporary injunction factors: “the balance between [the alleged] harm and the injury that granting the injunction would inflict on defendant” and “the public interest.” See Moody, 247 S.W.3d at 199–200 (Tenn. Ct. App. 2007).

First, Plaintiffs’ requested relief is certain to inflict harm on the State. Tennessee’s election system is premised on the assumption—one supported by years of history—that Tennesseans consistently vote in person. (See Ex. 1, 1; Goins Decl., ¶ 5.) In the last presidential election, for example, fewer than 3% of Tennessee voters chose to cast their votes by mail. (See Ex. 1 to Goins Decl., 14.) But Plaintiffs ask this Court to compel the State to plan for a scenario in which 100% of Tennesseans may vote by mail—while still allowing for the possibility that 100% of Tennesseans may vote in person. Even under ideal circumstances, this would be a difficult endeavor. While preparing the State’s Election Contingency Plan, Tennessee election officials consulted with Washington State—a State that permits statewide voting by mail. (See Ex. 1 to Goins Decl., 1; Goins Decl., ¶ 6; see generally Wyman Decl.) Washington election officials explained that unless a State already accommodates 60% absentee voting, the shift to 100% absentee voting would take "substantial time and resources." (See Wyman Decl., ¶ 16; see also Ex. 1 to Goins Decl., 1.) And "[t]he further that a state is from this 60% threshold, the more difficult the task." (Wyman Decl., ¶ 16.) For a state like Tennessee, that has less than 3% absentee voting, it would be "extremely difficult" to implement statewide absentee voting for the November elections and "impossible to switch to by-mail voting for the August elections" without "total chaos." (See id. at ¶ 19.) What is more, Washington's experience revealed that it is "not possible for local election officials to plan and implement in-person voting simultaneously with by-mail voting and appropriately maintain the integrity of the election process." (Id. at 18.)

Yet this is what Plaintiffs ask for. They ask this Court to compel Tennessee to make the switch from less than 3% absentee voting to potentially 100% absentee voting in a period of several months. But it is worse than that. Even if the State could accommodate 100% voting by mail, the State would still need to ensure that traditional, in-person voting remained possible. Thus, Plaintiffs do not simply ask that the State dramatically increase its capacity for absentee voting—they functionally ask that the State plan to accommodate a 100% increase in its voting population.³ The State simply cannot implement the sweeping changes Plaintiffs request on anything resembling the timetable they propose. (See Goins Decl. ¶ 37; Roberts Decl., ¶¶ 3, 9; Phillips Decl., ¶¶ 4, 9; Davis Decl., ¶¶ 4, 9; Sweat Decl., ¶¶ 4, 8; Pulley Decl., ¶¶ 4, 9; see also Wyman Decl., ¶ 18.) Indeed, preparation for the November election is already underway, and voters are already submitting their applications for mail-in ballots in the August election. (See Goins Decl.,

³ It is not enough to simply reduce in-person voting resources in an amount commensurate with expected by-mail voting increases. Because officials cannot be sure of each individual voter's method of voting until it occurs, officials must prepare for dual possibilities: (1) that up to 100% of voting may occur by mail; and (2) that up to 100% of voting may occur in person.

¶ 36.) Even attempting to implement statewide absentee voting in time for the coming elections will cost the State tens of millions of dollars, will put county election commissions under immense financial pressure, will delay the determination of election results, and will compound the existing challenges associated with absentee voting. (See Roberts Decl., ¶¶ 3–9; Phillips Decl., ¶¶ 3–7, 9; Davis Decl., ¶¶ 4–7, 9; Sweat Decl., ¶¶ 4–6, 8; Pulley Decl., ¶¶ 4–7, 9.)

And second, Plaintiffs’ requested relief—and the consequences that naturally follow—would be detrimental to the public interest. The Tennessee Supreme Court has recognized that the public has an interest in “validity of elections, certainty of results, the sanctity of the ballot box, and saving of expense.” See Taylor v. Armentrout, 632 S.W.2d 107, 114 (Tenn. 1981). Plaintiffs’ requested relief would thwart these interests. The State cannot feasibly implement the dramatic measures that Plaintiffs request in time for the August and November elections. And if the State is forced to try, the result is virtually certain to be chaos. (See Wyman Decl., ¶ 19.) The rate of error for paper ballots is already significantly higher than for traditional in-person voting. (See Roberts Decl., ¶ 6; Phillips Decl., ¶ 3; Davis Decl., ¶ 3; Sweat Decl., ¶ 3; Pulley Decl., ¶ 3.) And because voters often move and do not update their addresses, the State already has difficulty ensuring that voting materials are sent to voters’ current addresses. (See Roberts Decl., ¶ 7; Phillips Decl., ¶ 7; Davis Decl., ¶ 7; Pulley Decl., ¶ 7.) Together, these facts mean that if the State is required to hastily implement statewide mail-in voting for every eligible voter, those voters who have moved and thus do not receive their ballots as well as those who make errors on their ballots are unlikely to have their votes counted.

Recent elections held in other states underscore the reality of these risks. Consider Wisconsin. That state held its primary election last month and saw a dramatic increase in absentee voting. See Wisconsin Election Commission, April 7, 2020 Absentee Voting Report, at 3, <https://elections.wi.gov/sites/elections.wi.gov/files/2020-05/April%202020%20Absentee%20Voting%20Report.pdf>. And while the State was able to process many of these ballots, it reported that “approximately 1 in 10 ballots”—a total of nearly 121,000—“were either not returned to the clerk or were returned but rejected.” See id. at 6. Other ballots—a total of 2,659—were returned too late to be counted. See id. at 7. And other states have fared even worse. In New Jersey, one city received 16,747 absentee ballots. See NBC New York, Close Results in Paterson Vote Plagued by Fraud Claims; Over 3k Ballots Seemingly Set Aside, <https://www.nbcnewyork.com/news/local/close-results-in-paterson-vote-plagued-by-fraud-claims-over-3k-ballots-seemingly-set-aside/2425813/>. But of that total, only 13,557 were counted. Id. In other words, nearly 20% of the absentee ballots cast in that city’s election went uncounted. Id. About 800 of those uncounted ballots were set aside after some were found improperly bundled in mailboxes and others were found in a different town. See NBC New York, Hundreds of Mail-In Votes Already Set Aside Due to Voter Fraud Claims in Paterson, <https://www.nbcnewyork.com/news/local/hundreds-of-mail-in-votes-already-set-aside-due-to-paterson-voter-fraud-claims/2414171/>.

The bottom line is this: there are numerous barriers to the rapid implementation of statewide absentee voting. The experiences of other states suggest that the absentee-voting process is fraught with opportunities for error—intentional or otherwise—that will undermine public confidence in elections. Moreover, even unsuccessfully attempting to implement absentee voting for every voter will cost the State millions of dollars. As a result, the practical effect of Plaintiffs’ requested relief is likely to be the functional disenfranchisement of thousands of voters across the State, lost confidence in the outcomes of the upcoming elections, and immense strain on State and county resources. This cannot be in the public interest.

CONCLUSION

For these reasons, Defendants respectfully request that this Court deny Plaintiffs' motion for preliminary injunctive relief.

Respectfully submitted,

Case No. 3:20-cv-00374

DECLARATION OF DR. ARTHUR L. REINGOLD

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I hereby declare as follows:

1. I am the Division head of Epidemiology and Biostatistics at the University of California, Berkeley, School of Public Health. I have worked on the prevention and control of infectious diseases in both the United States, including eight years at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (“CDC”), and with numerous developing countries around the world for over forty years. Since its inception in 1994, I have directed or co-directed the CDC-funded California Emerging Infections Program. I am a member of the Society for Epidemiologic Research and the American Epidemiological Society; an elected Fellow of the Infectious Disease Society of America and of the American Association for the Advancement of Science; and an elected member of the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences. I was previously the President of both the Society for Epidemiologic Research and the American Epidemiological Society. I have served on the editorial boards of three journals: American Journal of Epidemiology, Epidemiology, and Global Public Health.

2. I received my A.B. in biology from the University of Chicago in 1970, and my M.D. from the University of Chicago in 1976. Among other things, I completed a residency in internal medicine at Mt. Auburn Hospital and a residency in preventative medicine with the CDC.

3. My career in public health has been in the area of infectious diseases and epidemiology. Following my time at the CDC (1979-87), I joined the faculty of the School of Public Health at Berkeley as a Professor of Epidemiology (1987-present), the faculty of the Department of Epidemiology and Biostatistics at the University of California, San Francisco ("UCSF") (1989-present), and the faculty of the Department of Medicine at UCSF as a Clinical Professor (1991-present). From 1990-94, I was the Head of the Epidemiology Program, Department of Biomedical and Environmental Health Sciences, University of California, Berkeley; from 1994-2000, I was the Head of the Division of Public Health Biology and Epidemiology, University of California, Berkeley; from 2000-18, I was the Head of the Division of Epidemiology, School of Public Health, University of California, Berkeley; since 2018, I have been the Head of the Division of Epidemiology and Biostatistics, School of Public Health, University of California, Berkeley.

4. My research focuses on emerging and re-emerging infections in the United States and in developing countries, including diverse respiratory tract infections; vaccine-preventable diseases in the United States and in developing countries; and disease surveillance, outbreak detection, and outbreak response.

5. Attached and incorporated by reference to this declaration is a copy of my curriculum vitae. (Attached hereto as Exhibit A).

6. I am currently collaborating on multiple research projects concerning SARS-CoV-2 and its incidence, and serving on SARS-CoV-2 advisory groups for multiple organizations, including University of California, Berkeley, the University of California System, and the City and County of San Francisco, among others.

7. SARS-CoV-2 is a novel coronavirus that causes Coronavirus Disease 2019 (“COVID-19”). The virus is a respiratory virus with symptomatic patients typically presenting with acute respiratory signs and symptoms, which can escalate in some patients to respiratory failure and other serious, life-threatening complications. The most common symptoms are fever, cough, and shortness of breath. Other identified symptoms include muscle aches, headaches, chest pain, diarrhea, coughing up blood, sputum production, runny nose, nausea, vomiting, sore throat, confusion, loss of senses of taste and smell, and anorexia. Due to the respiratory impacts of the disease, individuals may need to be put on oxygen, and in severe cases, patients may need to be intubated and put on a ventilator.

8. Notably, some infected individuals may never present with any signs or symptoms of infection, i.e., are asymptomatic. While the prevalence of asymptomatic infections is unknown, recent evidence suggests that it may be high in selected sub-populations in the U.S.¹

9. People of every age can and have contracted COVID-19, including severe cases, long-term impairment, and death. Data from Tennessee demonstrate that a substantial proportion of cases of COVID-19 have occurred among those 21-60 years of age, and the average age of COVID-19 patients in Tennessee is 41 years old. While patients over the age of 65 are at the most risk of life-threatening COVID-19 illness, children and adults of every age are at risk of serious illness and possible death. And those with immunologic conditions and with other pre-existing conditions, such as hypertension, certain heart conditions, lung diseases (e.g., asthma, COPD), diabetes mellitus, obesity, and chronic kidney disease, are at high risk of a life-threatening COVID-19 illness—regardless of their age. Furthermore, once infected in the community or in the workplace, adults <60 years of age (and very likely children) can easily transmit SARS-CoV-2 to family members and other close contacts, including the elderly and infirm. These vulnerabilities are particularly acute in Tennessee, where approximately 32% of adults under the age of 65 have some pre-existing health condition.

10. Approximately 21% of reported COVID-19 cases and 33% of deaths from COVID-19 in Tennessee occur among Black or African American patients, while only 17.1% of Tennesseans are Black or African American. Similarly, although only 5.6% of Tennesseans are Hispanic or Latino, such patients represent 14% of COVID-19 cases in Tennessee. Latinos and African Americans in the U.S. are particularly vulnerable to COVID-19 illness and death due to a higher prevalence of pre-existing medical conditions and diverse sociological factors. National and state level surveys and other data demonstrate that Latino and African American adults have a high prevalence of underlying medical conditions associated with an increased likelihood of severe Defense confirmed a majority of COVID-19 patients on the U.S.S. Theodore Roosevelt (over 350 out of 600) were asymptomatic).

COVID-19 illness and death, including obesity, diabetes mellitus, and hypertension, among others. Socioeconomic conditions contribute to an increased risk of SARS-CoV-2 infection among these communities, including greater numbers of multi-generational homes, household crowding, and jobs that cannot be performed while maintaining social distancing. Latinos and African Americans are also more likely to lack health insurance, making it more difficult to access medical care.

11. SARS-CoV-2 is readily spread through respiratory transmission, and can be spread by both symptomatic and asymptomatic individuals. All people are susceptible to and capable of getting COVID-19 because of the ease with which the virus spreads and the lack of immunity in the population. The virus is spread through large and small droplet transmission; that is, when an infected individual—whether symptomatic or asymptomatic—speaks, coughs, sneezes, talks, sings, and the like, they expel droplets which can transmit the virus to others in their proximity. Early evidence suggests that the virus can be aerosolized, such that tiny droplets containing the virus can remain in the air and be inhaled by others who come into contact with that air. The virus is also known to be spread through the touching of contaminated surfaces, for example, when an infected person touches a surface with a hand they have coughed into and then another person touches that same surface before it has been disinfected and then touches their face. In the absence of effective social distancing measures being in use, each infected individual is estimated to infect two to eight others. In addition, some people are so-called “superspreaders,” who cause even more widespread infections.

12. Diagnostic testing for the virus is currently most often done through use of a reverse-transcriptase polymerase chain reaction (“RT-PCR”) test. There has not been sufficiently widespread and easily accessible testing throughout the United States, including in Tennessee. Serologic tests, which detect antibodies to the virus and thus indicate whether someone has already been exposed to it, are being developed but have not yet been validated or produced at scale. Furthermore, evidence does not yet establish whether the presence of antibodies correlates with immunity to re-infection.

13. There is not yet any FDA-approved vaccine against SARS-CoV-2, which could be used to immunize the population to the virus. As a result, the only ways to limit its spread are self-isolation, social distancing, mask wearing, frequent handwashing, and disinfecting surfaces. Self-isolation involves not physically interacting with those outside one's household. Social or physical distancing is maintaining at least six feet of distance between individuals. Both of these interventions are aimed at keeping infecting individuals far enough apart from other individuals so that they do not pass the virus along. Frequent handwashing and regular disinfecting of surfaces can help curb the spread via contaminated surfaces. None of these steps, however, is necessarily foolproof.

14. Transmission of SARS-CoV-2 can occur in any location where there is close proximity (less than six feet) between individuals, and is more likely in small, poorly-ventilated indoor spaces. And because transmission of the virus can occur via environmental surfaces, there is also risk of spread of the virus at any location where multiple individuals touch surfaces. Some individuals who are infected with the virus do not have any symptoms but can transmit the virus (i.e. are infectious) before they develop any symptoms. This means that isolating only persons known to be infected will not stop the spread of infection. Rather, to prevent increasing the scope of the outbreak of COVID-19, we must assume that anyone could be infected and infect another person.

15. Due to the lack of adequate testing, the time lag in getting results back from laboratories, and the lengthy incubation time, we cannot yet definitely determine the full effects of stay-at-home orders and social distancing. But social distancing has worked to slow the spread of respiratory viruses generally and in places that are ahead of Tennessee and the United States in the current pandemic. There is evidence that cities and states that have implemented stay-at-home orders earlier than Tennessee are experiencing reduced transmission. Current modeling shows that social distancing and stay-at-home orders are lessening transmission; however, transmission of the virus will continue through the population until the development and widespread use of a vaccine, or until the acquisition of herd immunity.

16. It is unlikely that an FDA-approved vaccine will be available and widely deployed for at least 12 to 18 months, and indeed may take longer than that due to the number of steps in the process of development, trial and error, scaling to clinical trials, assessing side effects, and assessing efficacy across the population at large.

17. Herd immunity occurs when a high percentage of the population become immune to an infectious disease, such that the spread is dramatically slowed, as infected persons become dead-ends for the virus, so to speak, because infected individuals are not interacting with anyone to whom they can transmit the virus. Approximately 80-95% of a population must be immune in order to achieve herd immunity, depending on the infectiousness of the agent. In this context, an individual's immunity can come from either a vaccine or from previous infection. Herd immunity can protect those in a population who cannot be vaccinated and for whom infection can be particularly serious. Without herd immunity, we can expect that SARS-CoV-2 will continue to be transmitted widely.

18. As SARS-CoV-2 is a new virus, also referred to as a novel virus, only those who have been infected and recovered are possibly immune; no population has a pre-existing immunity to the virus. Anyone who has not yet been infected is susceptible to infection. Also, due to the virus's novelty, we do not know whether any immunity generated by previous infection lasts permanently, for a specified period, or whether reinfection is possible. As a result, herd immunity is unlikely unless and until the development and widespread use of an effective vaccine or a sufficiently high proportion of the population has been infected. Only once serologic (i.e. antibody) testing with a highly reliable test is widely available will we be able to determine who in the population is not susceptible to either infection or transmission, based on their immunity due to earlier infection. As a result, even if transmission slows due to behavioral interventions such as social distancing and stay-at-home orders, we can expect resurgences of COVID-19, including significant community transmission, throughout 2020 and into 2021 across the United States, until the development and widespread use of a vaccine. Such resurgence is particularly likely if/when these behavioral modifications (e.g., social distancing requirements, enforced use of masks, etc.) are lifted while community transmission is still occurring.

19. As SARS-CoV-2 is a novel virus, we also cannot say definitively whether its incidence and prevalence will rise and fall based on weather or season. If virus transmission and prevalence do decline over the summer months, it remains likely that they will resurge in the fall and winter, although certain other novel coronaviruses—such as SARS and MERS-CoV—do not appear to demonstrate seasonality of infection. SARS-CoV-2 has circulated widely in countries currently in their hot seasons. These two points suggest that transmission of and infection with the virus may not be substantially affected by the weather, but if it is, it is likely that transmission will increase in the fall and winter.

20. Because it is difficult to predict whether the incidence and prevalence of SARS-CoV-2 infection will fluctuate with season or ambient temperature and because most of the population in Tennessee and the rest of the U.S. undoubtedly remain susceptible, resurgence of COVID-19 in the fall and winter of 2020 should be considered very likely.

21. Due to the ease of transmission, the high risk to certain segments of the population, and the fact that the virus will continue to circulate unless and until widespread vaccination and/or herd immunity is achieved, individuals will need to continue to take steps to prevent infection, including social distancing—i.e. avoiding crowds and minimizing exposure to individuals outside their homes, whenever possible. Requiring voters to wait in long lines at crowded polling places and share voting equipment would place them at substantially increased risk of exposure to and/or transmission of SARS-CoV-2. Requiring voters to remain in close proximity to other voters and election workers for lengthy periods of time, particularly at indoor polling locations with long lines and extended wait times, would further place them at increased risk of SARS-CoV-2 infection and COVID-19 disease.

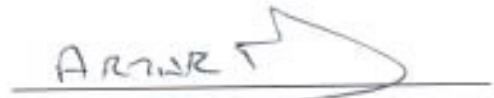

22. This is true even if precautions are taken like giving poll workers personal protective equipment, requesting that voters social distance while waiting in line and wear masks, and requesting that symptomatic voters do not come to the polling location but rather, find an alternative way to vote. First, it is likely that some voters may ignore such public health warnings. Second, even with precautions taken, the transmission of COVID-19 at polling locations is still possible, including because social distancing and mask wearing, for example, only help reduce the likelihood of transmission, rather than eliminate it altogether. Finally, not all individuals infected with COVID-19 are symptomatic, meaning that even if all symptomatic individuals were kept away from voting locations, the disease could still be spread by asymptomatic voters.

23. The risks from infection through in-person voting are particularly high for those who are at a greater risk of complications and death from COVID-19, such as the individuals I discuss above. Preventing these individuals from utilizing existing methods of voting by mail significantly increases their risk of contracting and spreading COVID-19.

24. My opinion has been further confirmed by reports like the one from public health officials in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, who have reported that at least forty and up to sixty-seven individuals have been identified as having contracted SARS-CoV-2 via in-person voting in the primary election held on April 7, 2020.² Similarly, in Georgia, news reports indicate that early in-person polling sites have had to be closed due to election officials and voters contracting COVID-19.³ These are just a few examples of the risks of transmission I have described.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on June 3, 2020.

Case No. 3:20-cv-0374

JUDGE RICHARDSON
MAGISTRATE JUDGE FRENSELY

DECLARATION OF DR. LINTON A. MOHAMMED

I, Linton A. Mohammed, declare as follows:

1. I am a Forensic Document Examiner (“FDE”), certified by the American Board of Forensic Document Examiners. I have been engaged in this matter on behalf of Plaintiffs to opine on the reliability of the procedures and techniques of the Tennessee signature verification process for absentee ballot envelopes (voter’s affidavit) as set forth in Tennessee elections laws and guidance.

I. QUALIFICATIONS

2. I am a U.S.-certified and internationally recognized FDE, and the focus of my research and professional experience is on handwriting and signature identification and the scientific approach to analyzing questioned signatures. I am, and since 1998 continuously have been, certified by the American Board of Forensic Document Examiners (ABFDE), the certifying board for FDEs in North America. I am also certified in document examination by the Chartered Society of Forensic Sciences (United Kingdom). I specialize in the forensic science of analyzing genuine, disguised, and simulated signatures.

3. I co-founded and I am currently the principal at Forensic Science Consultants, Inc., where I conduct forensic document examination casework and research on handwriting and signature examination as well as other forensic document examination (e.g., document alterations, obliterations, indented impressions, or pages added or removed). I am also an adjunct professor at Oklahoma State University, where I teach graduate courses on the scientific examination of questioned documents.

4. During and prior to my time with Forensic Science Consultants, Inc., and for nearly fourteen years, I worked as Forensic Document Examiner and Senior Document Examiner for the San Diego Sheriff's Department Regional Crime Laboratory. There, I conducted examinations of signatures and handwriting for cases investigated by San Diego County agencies as well as by local police, state, and federal agencies. I also served as Technical Lead of the Questioned Documents Section of the Regional Crime Laboratory, trained investigators and attorneys, provided expert testimony, conducted research, and produced the Questioned Documents Section Quality Manuals. Before that, I worked internationally as an FDE at the Laboratory of the Government Chemist (England), the Caribbean Institute of Forensic Investigations Ltd. (West Indies), and the Trinidad and Tobago Forensic Science Center (West Indies). In those roles, I conducted forensic document examinations and testified in criminal and civil cases for multiple police forces and other government agencies.

5. I am a Fellow of the Questioned Documents Section of the American Academy of Forensic Sciences (“AAFS”), a Fellow and diplomate of the Chartered Society of Forensic Sciences, and a member of the Canadian Society of Forensic Science. I served as the Chair of the AAFS Questioned Documents Section from 2016 to 2018. I am an appointed member and Chair of the Academy Standards Board, which was formed by the AAFS to develop documentary standards for the forensic sciences. I served as a member of the National Institute of Standards and Technology’s Expert Working Group on Human Factors in Handwriting Examination, the National Institute of Standards and Technology Organization of Scientific Area Committees’ Physics/Pattern Interpretation Scientific Area Committee, and the Scientific Working Group on Documents. I have previously served as President, Vice President, Treasurer, and Director of the American Society of Questioned Document Examiners (“ASQDE”).

6. I am the editor of the Journal of the American Society of Questioned Document Examiners. I served on the editorial review board of the Journal of Forensic Sciences from 2005-2020, and I serve on the editorial review board of Forensic Science and Technology. I am a guest reviewer for the following journals: Forensic Science International, Science & Justice, Australian Journal of Forensic Science, Egyptian Journal of Forensic Sciences, and IEEE Transactions on Cybernetics.

7. I have published sixteen peer-reviewed articles on signature and handwriting examination, and forensic document examination. Many of my articles focus on the analysis of genuine, disguised, and forged signatures, and handwriting examination. I have also given numerous presentations and workshops on signature and document examination worldwide, including the United States, Australia, Brazil, Canada, China, Latvia, Poland, Saudi Arabia, Scotland, and Turkey.

8. In 2019, I authored a book titled Forensic Examination of Signatures, which describes and discusses state of the art techniques and research in signature examination.¹ I co-authored a book in 2012 titled The Neuroscience of Handwriting: Applications for Forensic Document Examination, which integrates research in the fields of motor control, neuroscience, kinematics, and robotics to evaluate questioned signatures and handwriting.² The book sets forth, among other things, the scientific fundamentals of motor control as relevant to handwriting; the impact of age, disease, and medication on handwriting; and a quantitative approach to signature authentication, including kinematic and laboratory analyses of genuine versus disguised versus forged signatures.

9. In 2012, I received the American Board of Forensic Document Examiners' New Horizon Award "In Recognition of His Exceptional Contributions in Scientific Research for the Advancement of Forensic Document Examination." In 2019, I received the American Academy of Forensic Sciences Questioned Documents Section Ordway Hilton Award "In Recognition of Outstanding Contributions to Forensic Document Examination."

10. I have testified as an expert witness in court and depositions more than 150 times on issues of signature, handwriting, and document examination in both civil and criminal cases, including cases in the United States, England, Trinidad & Tobago, and St. Vincent.

11. I received a Ph.D. from La Trobe University in Melbourne, Australia in human biosciences, where I wrote my thesis on signature identification: "Elucidating static and dynamic features to discriminate between signature disguise and signature forgery behavior.” Prior to that, I received my undergraduate degree in science at the University of West Indies; underwent a two-year training program in document examination at the Trinidad and Tobago Forensic Science Center; and received a master’s degree in forensic sciences at National University in San Diego, California.

12. My curriculum vitae is attached as Exhibit A. I am being compensated at a rate of $400.00 per hour. My compensation in this matter is not in any way contingent on the content of my opinion or the outcome of this matter.

II. BACKGROUND

13. For this Declaration, I reviewed the Plaintiff’s Complaint, State of Tennessee statutes Tenn. Code § 2-6-202 (2018), Tenn. Code § 2-6-204 (2018), and relevant academic literature.

14.

15. Tenn. Code § 2-6-202(g) (2018) states, “Upon receipt by mail of the absentee ballot, the administrator shall open only the outer envelope and compare the voter’s signature on the application with the voter’s signature on the appropriate registration record. Upon determining that the voter is entitled to vote, the administrator shall note on the voter’s absentee ballot envelope that the voter’s signature has been verified. This signature verification is the final verification necessary before the counting board counts the ballots.”

16. Based on these statutes the administrator of elections is being asked to conduct an examination and comparison of one signature (application) with another (voter registration), and then one signature (absentee ballot) with one signature on a registration record.

17. Based on my understanding, Tennessee election officials are lay individuals, meaning they are not required to have any specialized expertise in document examination or signature comparison.

18. Based on my understanding, there are no further written statewide standards or procedures to guide election officials in evaluating whether the signature on the absentee ballot application matches the signature on the back of the absentee ballot envelope (the voter's affidavit).

19. Furthermore, there is no indication that the voter is provided with an opportunity for a cure.

III. SUMMARY OF CONCLUSIONS

20. The Tennessee signature match procedures do not set forth sufficient standards for determining reasonably whether a signature on a ballot return envelope matches the voter signature displayed in the voter's file, which is highly likely to result in errors. Based on my review of the election statutes, Tennessee does not require that election officials be provided equipment for effective document examination and signature comparison, such as proper light sources and microscopes.

21. Based on my experience and my review of the academic literature, it is my opinion that in these circumstances, Tennessee election officials are likely to make erroneous signature-comparison determinations.

22. Determining whether a signature is genuine is a difficult task for even a trained FDE, as signatures are written in different styles with varying levels of readability and variability. Laypersons, such as Tennessee election officials, have a significantly higher rate of error in determining whether signatures are genuine. Laypersons are also more likely to wrongly determine that authentic signatures are not genuine than to make the opposite error. In other words, Tennessee election officials are significantly more likely than trained examiners to make an incorrect signature-comparison determination and are particularly likely to incorrectly decide that the signatures are not signed by the same person.

23. The high rate of error among laypersons generally results from the inability to distinguish between normal “variations” in one individual’s signatures as opposed to “differences” resulting from multiple signers. An individual’s signatures may vary for myriad reasons, including age, health, native language, and writing conditions. Laypersons lack the tools and training to properly account for signature variation, which leads to erroneous mismatch determinations that are particularly pronounced in populations with greater signature variability, such as the elderly, disabled, individuals suffering from poor health, young voters (ages 18 to 21), and non-native English speakers.³

24. These signature-determination errors are further compounded for Tennessee election officials with diminished eyesight or “form blindness” (a type of impairment in visual perception defined below)—both of which impact an individual’s ability to make accurate handwriting authenticity determinations. While FDEs are screened for these traits, Tennessee law and guidance regarding signature comparison do not appear to require election officials to undergo such screening.

25. Based on my review of the relevant statutes, Tennessee does not appear to require election officials to compare the signature on the ballot return envelope to other signatures available on file beyond the registration record, or spend any minimum threshold of time in comparing signatures. These omissions are likely to lead to additional errors. At a minimum, multiple signature samples are required for a more accurate signature determination to account for an individual's signature variability, given proper examination conditions.⁴ For writers who are elderly or have poor health, a larger number of signature samples may be required to determine their range of variation. Yet Tennessee does not appear to require election officials to compare the voter's signature on the return envelope to more than one sample. Further, because a minimum of two hours is required to accurately compare signatures, election officials with insufficient time to evaluate the signature on the ballot return envelope are likely to make additional errors. Based on my review of Tennessee laws, election officials are not allotted the required minimum amount of time to review voters' signatures.

26. In sum, it is my opinion that Tennessee's current signature matching rules and procedures, which allow non-expert individuals to reject the signature on the ballot envelope, will result in a significant number of erroneous rejections. In other words, Tennessee election officials are likely to reject properly cast ballot applications and ballots, signed by the voter to whom the ballot belongs, because of their incorrect determination that either signature is not genuine.

IV. ANALYSIS AND OPINIONS

A. Tennessee Election Officials are likely to make erroneous signature comparison determinations.

27. Individuals untrained in signature examination, like Tennessee election officials, are highly likely to make mistakes when comparing signatures, particularly by erroneously rejecting signatures as inauthentic or non-matching when they are in fact written by the same individual.

⁴ Hilton, O. (1965). A further look at writing standards. The Journal of Criminal Law, Criminology and Police Science, Vol. 56, No. 3, p. 383 (recommending a minimum of ten signature samples for accurate signature comparison determinations).

These rejections are considered “Type II” errors, and laypersons are more likely than FDEs to make such errors for several reasons. First, untrained election officials cannot reliably determine whether signatures are written by different individuals or whether the signatures are written by one person but exhibit natural variations. Second, untrained reviewers do not account for the many reasons for naturally varying signatures, causing them to erroneously reject authentic signatures. This is particularly true for writers who have less formal education, learned English as a second language, elderly, disabled, young, or have adverse health conditions. Third, untrained elections officials also fail to account for the different signature styles and features, leading to erroneous rejections. Lastly, it is not clear whether Tennessee election officials are tested for form blindness, a condition that impacts their ability to accurately review signatures.

B. Untrained laypersons are more likely than FDEs to erroneously determine authentic signatures are inauthentic.

28. There are two types of errors in signature examination. Type I errors occur when a non-genuine signature is deemed to be genuine, and a Type II error occurs when a genuine signature is concluded to be non-genuine. A Type II error is considered among FDEs as being more egregious than a Type I error for signature verification and would mean in Tennessee’s mail voting system that a genuine signature is rejected as non-genuine, and the voter’s ballot would not be counted.

29. Compared to FDEs, laypersons have higher Type II error rates. In a 2001 study reviewing the error rates of FDEs and laypersons in comparing six genuine signatures with six non-genuine signatures, laypersons made Type II errors in 26.1% of cases while trained signature FDEs made such errors in 7.05% of cases.⁵ That means that laypersons are more than 3 ½ times more likely to declare an authentic signature non-genuine—which, in the case of signatures on ballot return envelopes, would mean that election officials would reject more than 3 ½ times the number of ballots than FDEs. It should be noted that for this study, six specimen signatures were used. If, as appears to be the case in Tennessee elections, only one reference signature is used for comparison, it is highly likely that the error rate for both experts and laypersons would increase significantly.

C. Tennessee election officials cannot determine reliably whether signatures are written by different individuals, or by one individual exhibiting natural variation.

30. Determining whether signatures are made by the same or different individuals requires a reviewer to discern whether a feature or combination of features in signatures are “differences” or “variations.” Signatures are the product of a motor program developed in the brain after practice, and then executed with neuro-muscular coordination. Many factors can influence an individual’s motor program and neuro-muscular coordination. These factors cause variations in each person’s signature.⁶ Variations are deviations of personal, subconscious characteristics normally demonstrated in the habits of each writer. Individuals may have narrow, moderate, or wide ranges of natural variation. A writer’s range of variation can be determined when an adequate amount of specimen signatures is examined. A significant “difference” is a characteristic that is structurally divergent between handwritten items, is outside the range of variation of the writer, and that cannot be reasonably explained.⁷

31. In the field of signature examination, unexplainable “differences” between signatures suggest that different individuals wrote the signatures, whereas “variations” between signatures mean that one individual wrote the signatures. Determining whether signature features are “differences” or “variations” is one of the most difficult determinations in signature examinations, even for experienced FDEs.

32. Some writers may have a very wide range of variation. Figure 1 illustrates four signatures of one writer (redacted) that exhibit wide variation, and if compared in pairs, may easily be mistaken as signatures written by different individuals.

33. To reliably make such a judgment requires, at a minimum:

- Extensive training with different types of signatures: Becoming an FDE requires at least two, and typically three, years of full-time training with an experienced examiner, with at least eighteen months of training in the examination of signatures and handwriting. FDEs learn the science of signature examination, gain experience in casework, and are tested for proficiency.
- Adequate magnification and lighting equipment.
- Excellent eyesight.
- Adequate contemporaneous specimen signatures
- Adequate time: Insufficient time examining signatures is conducive to making errors. For example, one study found that FDEs spent more time looking at the questioned and known signatures than laypersons, and their evaluations were more accurate.⁸

Without these elements, Tennessee election officials are likely to mistake legitimate and expected “variations” between one individual’s signatures for “differences” in signatures between two individuals, and conclude incorrectly that someone other than the registered voter signed the ballot application or ballot envelope.

D. Untrained reviewers erroneously reject authentic signatures because they do not account for the many reasons for naturally varying signatures.

34. Further, an individual’s signatures may vary for myriad reasons, and to properly determine whether signatures are written by the same individual, one must consider the various reasons why features of the same individual's signatures may visually appear different. To do so, reviewers must possess an adequate number of sample signatures to demonstrate the writer's range of variation. In one of the leading textbooks on handwriting examination, authors Roy Huber & A.M. Headrick identified twenty common reasons why individuals' signatures may appear to show variations:

- Adequacy of standards (or samples)—inadequate standards in terms of quantity and contemporaneousness will not be representative of the writer's range of variation. Variations may therefore be interpreted as differences.
- Accidental occurrences—i.e., these are one-off variations that will not appear in the specimen signatures.⁹ Misinterpretation may lead to a decision of difference versus variation.
- Alternative styles—i.e., some writers have alternate signature styles. This may not be represented in the specimens.
- Ambidexterity.
- Carelessness or negligence.
- Changes in the health condition of writer.
- Changes in the physical condition of writer—e.g., fractures, fatigue, or weakness may alter features of an individual's signature.
- Changes in the mental condition or state of the writer.
- Concentration on the act of writing.
- Disguise or deliberate change.

⁹ A specimen signature is a signature that is known to have been written by a person. It is not disputed. Typical specimens are Driver's Licenses and Identification Cards.

- Drugs or alcohol.
- Influence of medications.
- Intentional change for later denial.
- Nervous tension.
- Natural variations—i.e., inherent variation as a result of differences in neuromuscular coordination.
- Writing conditions—e.g., the individual’s place or circumstances, such as in a moving vehicle or at a stationary table.
- Writing instrument—e.g., a pen versus a stylus.
- Writing position—e.g., the individual’s stance.
- Writing surface—e.g., paper versus electronic screen.
- Writing under stress.

Examiners must consider each of these reasons in determining whether a feature is “difference” created by different writers or whether the feature is simply a “variation” from the same writer. It is very unlikely that Tennessee election officials will have the knowledge, training, and experience to properly account for these factors. And the signature matching statutes and rules do not require election officials to consider adequate samples, as would be necessary for even an expert to distinguish a “difference” from a “variation.”

35. Studies have shown that illiterate writers, writers for whom English is a second language, elderly writers, disabled writers, and writers with health conditions tend to have less pen control than most other writers, and therefore would have a greater range of variation in their signatures.¹⁰ And the increased variation in the signatures of these groups only compounds laypersons' tendencies to err on the side of incorrectly finding authentic signatures to be non-genuine.

36. Since signatures are developed as a motor program in the brain, the signatures of writers for whom English is a second language are more likely to exhibit wide ranges of variation, as these writers will have to discard their former learned motor program and develop a new one for their new signature style.¹¹ For instance, a writer who first learned to write in a non-Latin-based script, such as Chinese, will naturally show more variation when signing a document in English than a native writer. Likewise, where the writer's native language is written right to left, such as Urdu, the writer's signature may also be more likely to show variations in letter slanting. Cherokee is a Native American tribe that has its own syllabary¹². Signatures written by individuals who learned to write using the Cherokee syllabary may appear different to an untrained eye. Qualified, experienced experts in the area of signature verification would know of and account for these factors in evaluating signatures. Tennessee election officials, even if put through a short training session, are unlikely to be able to accurately account for these differences, particularly in an expedient time frame or when only one or a few specimen signatures are available for comparison.

37. Furthermore, young voters (ages 18 to 25) are not likely to have fully developed signatures. According to one study, “the development and progress of one’s handwriting passes through four stages in the course of a lifetime: (1) the formative stage, (2) the impressionable or adolescent stage, (3) the mature stage, and (4) the stage of degeneration.”¹³ The signatures of young voters will fall between stages 2 and 3. The U.S. Postal Service has reported that “writer[s] achieve[] graphic maturity by the 20th birthday.”¹⁴ Handwriting was developed as a means of communication, whereas signatures are developed as a means of identification.¹⁵ Signatures tend to be more personalized and can therefore be considered as an over-developed form of handwriting. It follows that young writers today will not have developed signatures until later in life. This is exacerbated as young writers will presumably need to sign less often due to the increased use of personal identification numbers (“PINs”) and other non-handwritten forms of identification. Their signature development can reasonably be expected to take longer than for previous generations. This will lead to an increased range of variation in a young writer’s signature. The handwriting of adolescents can cause difficulties even for trained FDEs. Comparisons by untrained individuals of young voters’ signatures on the ballot return envelopes will exacerbate the potential for error in rejecting their ballots.¹⁶

E. Tennessee officials may fail to account for increase variation in signatures of writers with disabilities.

38. Signatures are executed by means of neuromuscular coordination. A motor program developed in the brain signals the muscles to produce handwriting movements. Any disability, illness, or drug that affects neuromuscular coordination will influence the production of signatures. Various diseases that affect motor neurons and neurological pathways can affect the appearance of signatures of the afflicted individual.

39. Multiple Sclerosis (MS) occurs in 1 of 500 people worldwide with 70% of patients exhibiting symptoms between the ages of 21 to 40. The disease manifests itself in females 2 to 3 times more than in males. A characteristic of writers with MS is tremor or shakiness.¹⁷ Neurological damage from MS is reflected in handwriting and it is estimated that 75% of MS patients exhibit tremor in their handwriting.¹⁸ Diseases such as Parkinson's and Alzheimer's with Lewy Bodies also affect signatures. The writer tends to write much smaller (micrographia), and his or her tendency may change depending on medication. Individuals who have lost their dominant hand, and must learn to write with their other hand will also exhibit wide variation in their handwriting. An example of such individuals are veterans who have been injured in war. The longer a person writes with a non-dominant hand will result in improvement of the quality of handwriting. However, it will likely never appear completely normal and natural.¹⁹

40. It is highly likely that writers with disabilities will exhibit a wider range of variation in their signatures than might normally be seen in the signatures of a healthy, skilled writer. This increased variation will not only present a challenge to a trained FDE, but will present an impossible task to a layperson who has to compare one signature on an application for a ballot, or on a ballot envelope with one signature on a voter's registration, and make a determination of authenticity.

41. In Tennessee, the ballot application and ballot envelope signatures each appear to be compared with one reference signature. For voters with disabilities the lack of an adequate number of standards will exacerbate the error rate. Evaluations of signatures executed by ill writers requires the evaluator to have wide experience with different types of signatures and accurate knowledge of the physical conditions of individuals as this relates to handwriting.²⁰

F. Tennessee elections officials also fail to account for the different signature styles and features, leading to erroneous rejections.

42. One of the reasons that accurate signature comparison determinations prove difficult, even for a trained FDE, is that signatures are written in three different styles²¹ as illustrated in Figure 2:

- Text-based: Nearly all the letters can be interpreted.

- Mixed: More than two, but not all, letters can be interpreted.

Stylized: No letters can be interpreted.

43. These signature styles exhibit significantly different characteristics that impact the signature-matching analysis, and by extension, the determination of whether signatures are genuine. For example, kinematic features of signatures, such as size, velocity, changes of acceleration, and pen pressure are important in determining whether a signature is genuine. Yet these kinematic features vary between the same individual's signatures, with the degree of variations often dependent on the signature style. The kinematic features of stylized signatures, for example, vary more significantly than the kinematic features of text-based signatures. And the less legible a signature becomes, the more the election official depends on their pattern recognition ability. Thus, signature styles can have an impact on the determination of genuineness or non-genuineness. Unfamiliarity with the different signature styles may impact a reviewer's ability to determine whether two signatures come from the same person, and would likely cause a lay person to decide that the compared signatures exhibit "differences" when the changes in features are simply "variations."

44. To determine whether signatures are made by the same individual, a reviewer should focus on holistic features of signatures, such as alignment, slant, pen lifts, rhythm, the size of writing, the slope or slant of the letters, or other characteristics that are diagnostic of the process used to create signatures. These features are subtle, and a writer is usually unaware of the features, as they are excited by the writer's subconscious motor program. These subtle features provide significant evidence of genuineness because they occur in natural handwriting. Lay persons, however, often focus instead on more eye-catching features in evaluating signatures. For example, an eye-tracking study on signature examination found that "lay participants focused to a greater extent on individual features such as arches, eyelets, hooks, shoulders, connections, troughs, or other individual features” that catch the eye, and “appear[ed] less likely to use holistic features.”²² But focusing on these eye-catching features is problematic because these are the types of features that a simulator will try to capture. Properly utilizing the subtle, holistic features of signatures to determine genuineness, however, requires both training and adequate time for review.

G. Tennessee election officials are not tested for form blindness, increasing the risk of erroneous signature match determinations.

45. A laypersons’ ability to make consistently correct determinations as to the genuineness of a signature may also be impacted by a condition known as “form blindness,” which impairs “the ability to see minute differences in angles, forms, and sizes.”²³ Most ophthalmologists agree that form perception is not an eye problem but rather a translational problem. That is, “it is a perceptual inability to distinguish the small differences between shapes, colors, and patterns.”²⁴ Therefore, in most cases, form blindness goes undetected, but diminishes a reviewer’s ability to make accurate determinations of a signature’s genuineness.²⁵ And while FDEs must pass a form blindness test before being trained in handwriting identification, it is not clear that Tennessee requires any such test for election officials. There is thus a risk that some election officials have form blindness and are particularly prone to making erroneous signature determinations.

H. Even trained FDEs are likely to make erroneous signature comparison determinations under Tennessee’s signature matching procedures.

46. Even for trained FDEs, Tennessee’s signature matching process would be prone to erroneous determinations due to the limited number of comparison signatures and the lack of proper equipment.

47. Normally, FDEs require multiple specimen signatures for comparison with a questioned signature, and often more if issues such as age or illness are involved. These specimens are required to adequately determine the range of variation of the writer and properly account for the reasons for variation within an individual’s signatures discussed above. Indeed, nobody signs the same way twice: no two complex, skillfully written, genuine signatures of one writer have ever been found to be exactly alike, but such a statement should be understood to be true speaking microscopically, and not as the carpenter measures.²⁶ Inadequate standards, or failure to use adequate specimens fully representing the range of variation in a writer’s signature, is a well-known source of error.²⁷

48. Features observed in the questioned signature(s) may not be observed in the inadequate specimens. This may lead to an erroneous interpretation of a feature as a difference (two writers) not a variation (one writer). Because Tennessee election officials are only required to compare the signatures on the ballot application and ballot envelope with one reference signature, they cannot distinguish accurately between features, variations, or differences. Furthermore, in some instances, Tennessee election officials may need to compare a voter’s original “wet-ink” signature on the ballot application or ballot envelope with the voter's digitized signature in the voter registration file. Comparing a digitized signature with an original "wet-ink" signature has many inherent limitations, some of which are caused by the resolution of the digitized signature, whether the digitized signature is being viewed on a monitor or as a printed item, and the writing instruments used for each signature. If the monitor's resolution is low, or if the digitized signature is a poor copy of the original signature to begin with, this would make it very difficult for an untrained examiner to assess the line quality of the signature. Striations made by ballpoint pens may appear to be gaps in the writing line, and may be interpreted mistakenly as evidence of simulation or forgery.

49. Finally, as discussed above, Tennessee does not seem to require election officials to use or be provided with proper equipment, such as magnification and lighting equipment. "[T]he microscope is the instrument which makes it possible to see physical evidence directly that otherwise may be invisible. . . ." ²⁸ Without this type of equipment, even a well-trained eye may make errors in a signature authenticity determination.

V. CONCLUSION

50. For the reasons stated herein, it is my professional opinion that Tennessee election officials are likely to make erroneous signature match determinations. In particular, Tennessee election officials are significantly more likely to erroneously conclude that authentic signatures are not genuine than they are to make the opposite error—to accept inauthentic signatures as genuine. These erroneous determinations result from the inherent difficulty in making reliable signature authenticity determinations, particularly where, as here, the reviewer lacks training, is
