<sup>1</sup>The Court has graciously allowed Defendants Stone and Stop the Steal, through counsel, to file this brief without waiving their jurisdictional claims and without making a general appearance.

1 Now come defendants Roger J. Stone and Stop the Steal<sup>2</sup>, through counsel, and 2 hereby submit their brief in opposition to the plaintiff's request for injunctive relief:

3
4 MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES

5 I

6 EVERY ISSUE BEFORE THIS COURT HAS ALREADY BEEN LITIGATED
7 AND DEFENDANTS STONE AND STOP THE STEAL HAVE PREVAILED

8 This Court should follow the ruling and holding in identical litigation brought 9 in the District of Arizona, which late Friday afternoon utterly and completely rejected 10 Plaintiff's every argument. While we concede the doctrine of collateral estoppel is 11 not technically applicable, because the plaintiff is different, the Court should take 12 judicial notice of the fact that except for the name of the plaintiff being different, the 13 allegations as pertaining to Stop the Steal and Roger Stone<sup>3</sup>. Attached to the 14 accompanying Declaration of Jensen are copies of the complaint and motion for 15 restraining order filed in that case, as well as the final order of the U S District Court 16 for the District of Arizona. The findings of fact and conclusions of law of that Court 17 are totally and immediately applicable here in every respect. For that reason, the 18 Court should deny the pending motion.

19
20 <sup>2</sup>As evidenced by the Declaration of Jensen filed in support of these Defendants' Motion to 21 Dismiss, Stop the Steal is a political organization registered with the IRS under section 527 of the 22 Internal Revenue Code. It is not a corporation or business entity of any kind, and has no members, 23 employees or other existence.

24 <sup>3</sup>The allegations against the state Republican Party here and the Trump campaign may be ever 25 so slightly different here than in Arizona, that is not the case with defendants Stone and Stop the Steal.
26 The allegations against those parties are in every way, and every word, identical in both this case and 27 the case filed in the District of Arizona.

II

DEFENDANTS STONE AND STOP THE STEAL JOIN THE BRIEF AND ARGUMENTS OF THEIR CO-DEFENDANTS

To the extent it is helpful to the Court, our position is that we join in and adopt the arguments and brief of our co-defendants as far as the Court finds are relevant to deciding the question as to Mr. Stone and Stop the Steal. For the sake of brevity, since the Court has already made a decision as regards the state party and the Trump campaign, there should be no need to reiterate those same arguments in this brief, but to be clear, we do agree with those arguments and the findings the Court has already reached.

III

THE LAW GOVERNING INJUNCTIVE RELIEF IMPOSES A BURDEN
THE PLAINTIFF HAS NOT, AND CANNOT, MEET

The Supreme Court has observed that “a preliminary injunction is an extraordinary and drastic remedy, one that should not be granted unless the movant, by a clear showing, carries the burden of persuasion.” Mazurek v. Armstrong, 520 U.S. 968, 972 (1997). “A plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must establish that he is likely to succeed on the merits, that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and that an injunction is in the public interest.” Winter v Natural Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008) (citations omitted); see also Garcia v. Google, Inc., 786 F.3d 733, 740 (9th Cir. 2015).

A. The Plaintiff cannot possibly meet its burden under the Voting Rights Act

Under Section 11(b) of the Voting Rights Act, the plaintiff must show the defendants objectively intend to intimidate, threaten or coerce (or at least attempt to do so) a person for voting or attempting to vote. Olagues v. Russoniello, 770 F.2d 791, 804 (9th Cir. 1985). There is utterly no evidence, not one scintilla of admissible

1 proof that such is the intent of either Mr. Stone or Stop the Steal. The “evidence” 2 they have offered of two random –and moreover, unknown, people tweeting<sup>4</sup> their 3 photos out is not attributable to either Mr. Stone or Stop the Steal. Absent such 4 evidence, the plaintiff cannot, as a matter of law, meet their burden. The court has 5 already reached this conclusion as to the Nevada Republican Party and the Trump 6 campaign, and it can only come to the identical conclusion concerning these 7 remaining defendants.

8 B. The Plaintiff cannot possibly meet its burden under the Ku Klux Klan Act

9 By the same token, Under the Ku Klux Klan Act a cause of action only lies in 10 the face of a conspiracy. The complaint and motion argue this conspiracy was 11 between Mr. Stone, the Trump campaign and the state Republican party. Since the 12 court has already found that no conspiracy existed as between the campaign and the 13 party, there is no one left for Mr. Stone to have conspired with, and of course he 14 didn’t conspire with anyone, as his declaration and the court’s previous findings 15 establish beyond any question. Furthermore, in order for the plaintiff to prevail under 16 the Klan Act, the Court would have to find that Mr. Stone not only was part of a 17 conspiracy, but that this phantom conspiracy have at its purpose the specific intent to 18 “prevent by force, intimidation, or threat, any citizen who is lawfully entitled to vote, 19 from giving his support or advocacy in a legal manner,..” 42 U.S.C. §1985 (3).

20 _____
21 <sup>4</sup>Among other “evidence”, Plaintiff produces a Tweet from an anonymous Trump supporter, 22 unconnected in any way to either Mr. Stone or Stop the Steal, in Florida stating he planned to be 23 “wear’n red at polls,” “watch’n fer shenanigans,” and “haul ya away,” accompanied by a photo of a 24 pickup truck and a person-sized cage built in the bed, surrounded by American flags. However 25 troubling, there is nothing connected to either Nevada about this photo (the license plate on the truck 26 is from Florida. Absent any connection to Nevada, Mr. Stone or Stop the Steal, this –the strongest piece 27 of so-called evidence the plaintiff proffers, the Court must deny this motion.

1 Furthermore, the plaintiff has made no showing of racial animus , and the specific 2 provision of the Act relied upon by plaintiff, the “support and advocacy” clause, 3 cannot, by its plain words, be applied against a non-state actor. Of course, there are 4 no facts to support plaintiff’s claims but we aver that even were there to be evidence, 5 the Act cannot be applied to any defendant in this case.

6 Plaintiff bears the burden of providing the evidence to take its claims from a 7 nebulous concern over Mr. Stone’s statements (hearsay and from years, if not decades 8 past) to a likelihood that the named Defendants and those acting in concert with them 9 will intimidate, threaten coerce, or attempt to intimidate, threaten or coerce, voters.
10 Mr. Stone’s declaration, submitted concurrently herewith, evidences<sup>5</sup> that all of the 11 inferences the Plaintiff wishes drawn from their “evidence” is wrong in each and 12 every particular. Mr. Stone’s declaration testimony is that he has no improper 13 purpose whatsoever, and no attempt to conduct any exit polling operations in Nevada 14 or any where else, apart from those for Stop the Steal. Mr. Irvine’s testimony is in 15 accord with Mr. Stone’s, and evidences that the tiny operation in Nevada that Stop 16 the Steal plans to mount will only involve a small number of persons, primarily in

17 <sup>5</sup>The Court pointed out on Friday that the declaration testimony of a witness who is not available 18 to testify is not necessarily entitled to the same weight of a live witness in court, it is equally true that 19 courts everywhere and every day give considerable weight to declaration evidence by witnesses who are 20 not personally available to testify. In deciding what weight to accord Mr. Stone’s declaration, we ask 21 the Court to take into consideration the emergency nature of this hearing, the fact that Mr. Stone has not 22 been served with any of the papers in this case, and that the hearing is taking place the day before the 23 election, when Mr. Stone (and indeed all possible witnesses in this case) have competing urgent 24 demands on their time. Finally, we also ask the court to consider whether there are any witnesses for 25 the Plaintiff whose testimony is only in writing, and that the Plaintiff failed to produce any particular 26 declarant for in-person testimony. The Court should not have one standard for the Plaintiff and another 27 for the Defendants.

1 Clark County, and that there is no targeting of precincts based on race or any other 2 criteria, and that all of these people will be strenuously warned, not only on the 3 website, but by email and conference phone call, that they must follow specific, easily 4 understood rules, which rules mirror the law.

5 Plaintiff has produced no evidence, none, of any specific actions that exit 6 pollers would take, things they would say, or other facts that would allow the Court to 7 evaluate whether such actions or statements could or would constitute intimidation, 8 instead Plaintiff invites the Court to engage in rank speculation about what might or 9 could happen. The Court should resist Plaintiff's invitation. Thus, absent any shred 10 of evidence of plans for intimidation, racial targeting, or any other improper, much 11 less illegal, conduct, this case is in vastly different than Daschle v. Thune, where the 12 court had before it concrete examples of voter intimidation by the defendants' 13 supporters that had actually occurred during early voting, thus removing any air of 14 speculation about the likelihood of harm to voters or the plaintiff. Thus, Plaintiff 15 cannot, as a matter of law, on the evidence before the Court, meet its heavy burden to 16 establish it is likely to prevail on the merits.

17 IV

18 THE PLAINTIFF'S SCANT EVIDENCE AND RANK CONJECTURE DO NOT 19 MERIT THE EXTREME RELIEF OF PRIOR RESTRAINT ON DEFENDANTS' 20

21 FIRST AMENDMENT RIGHTS

22 Core political speech deserves the highest protections the law can afford. The 23 right is enshrined in the very first of the amendment to our Constitution. Only upon 24 the highest showing of imminent harm is prior restraint justified. In denying the 25 restraining order sought in the Pentagon Papers case, the Supreme Court held, "Any 26 system of prior restrains of expression comes to this Court bearing a heavy 27

1 presumption against its constitutional validity.” New York Times v. Sullivan, 403 U.S.
2 713, 714 (1971), citing Bantam Books v. Sullivan, 382 U.S. 58, 70 (1963).

3 The relief sought is completely disproportional to the demonstration of any 4 likely harm. “Public policy requires that preliminary injunctions, especially those that 5 stand to potentially chill a person's right to free speech, no matter how disagreeable 6 that speech may be, should only be granted in the most extraordinary of 7 circumstances and upon the most conclusive showing of all of the Dataphase 8 elements. Northland Ins. Companies v. Blaylock, 115 F.Supp.2d 1108, 1125 (D. Minn.
9 2000).

10 Just as the right to vote is fundamental, so too is the right to political speech 11 and the right to associate. See, e.g., Mills v. Alabama, 384 U.S. 214, 218-19 (1966) 12 (“there is practically universal agreement that a major purpose of [the First] 13 Amendment was to protect the free discussion of governmental affairs...[including] 14 discussions of candidates, structures and forms of government, the manner in which 15 government is operated or should be operated, and all such matters relating to 16 political processes”; Lerman v. Bd. of Elections in City of New York, 232 F.3d 135, 17 146 (2d Cir. 2000) (“The right to political association also is at the core of the First 18 Amendment, and even practices that only potentially threaten political association are 19 highly suspect.”) (internal quotations and citation omitted). While the Court may 20 only enjoin Defendants, the injunction would nonetheless have a chilling effect on 21 protected First Amendment speech by others. Indeed, Plaintiff has not provided the 22 Court with a narrowly-tailored injunction that would not unintentionally sweep within 23 its ambit other activities that constitute exercise of freedom of speech. See, e.g., 24 Rodriguez v. Robbins, 715 F.3d 1127, 1133 (9th Cir. 2013) (“An overboard 25 injunction is an abuse of discretion.”); Union Pac. R. Co. v. Mower, 219 F.3d 1069, 26 1077 (9th Cir. 2000) (“one basic principle built into Rule 65 is that those against 27 whom an injunction is issued should receive fair and precisely drawn notice of what 28

1 the injunction actually prohibits”) (quoting Granny Goose Foods, Inc. v. Brotherhood
 2 of Teamsters, 415 U.S. 423, 444 (1974)); Waldman Pub. Corp. V. Landoll Inc., 43 3 F.3d 775, 785 (2d Cir. 1994) (“an injunction should not impose unnecessary burdens 4 on lawful activity”).

5 6 V

7 STOP THE STEAL ISN’T REQUIRED TO BE SCIENTIFIC IN ITS EXIT POLL

8 Plaintiff has offered testimony –by Declaration only and not live testimony– 9 that Stop the Steal’s “exit polling” is unscientific. It is conceded that what Mr. Stone 10 and Stop the Steal refer to as an “exit poll” certainly don’t meet the parameters for the 11 plaintiff’s expert, but that is of no moment whatsoever. Put differently, Stop the 12 Steal’s efforts might not be successful or achieve its ends, but even exit polling that 13 fails to meet the standard of plaintiff and its expert is nevertheless still protected 14 under the First Amendment and not in any way improper. On the other hand, 15 Defendants have offered Declaration testimony of Mr. Stone, and live testimony of 16 Mr. Irvine, to rebut any suggestion that the tiny little exit polling effort planned in 17 Nevada is pretextual of something else. Mr. Stone has described the methodology to 18 be employed, which Mr. Irvine will be responsible for informing the volunteers to 19 execute. It does not follow that merely because this methodology does not meet 20 Plaintiff’s expert’s standards that it is pretextual of anything nefarious. Plaintiff’s 21 conspiracy theories have already been rejected by this Court as regards the state party 22 and the Trump campaign, and should equally be disregarded as fantasy as regards Mr.
 23 Stone and Stop the Steal.

24 There is simply no requirement in law that exit polls be scientific, or even that 25 exit polls are well calculated to achieve their stated ends. It isn’t even required that 26 Defendants’ planned efforts be rightly described as “exit polling”. Stop the Steal 27 isn’t required by the law to operate a polling firm to conduct exit polling. There is no 28

1 law or regulation requiring any exit polling to be standardized, reliable, or to serve 2 any purpose, much less to serve a legitimate purpose—only that it not serve an 3 expressly illegitimate purpose. Therefore, it is not for this Court to decide whether or 4 not resultant information may be of use. Instead the Court must determine, and the 5 Plaintiff has the burden to prove—as opposed to the defense having the burden to dis-
6 prove—such activity, be it called “exit polling” or anything else, violates voters’ 7 rights.

8 At base, Stop the Steal is not prohibited from conducting exit polling, so long 9 as it does so in accordance with all applicable laws and regulations. See, Daily 10 Herald Co. v. Munro, 838 F.2d 380 390 n.8 (9th Cir. 1988) (upholding the District 11 Court’s finding that exit polling did not interfere with citizens’ right to vote without 12 showing that polling was disruptive, intended to interfere with any voter’s rights, or 13 that someone did not vote or voted differently due to polling). Unscientific, targeted, 14 unreliable, and even useless exit polling by itself, does not violate any voters’ rights.
15 The evidence of Mr. Irvine and Mr. Stone, of course, establish that their planned 16 efforts are, to some degree even if not to the degree Plaintiff would prefer, scientific, 17 untargeted and useful.

18 Without a demonstration that Stop the Steal’s planned exit polling is likely to 19 intimidate, the Court may not enjoin it from conducting its polling. Plaintiff has 20 failed to proffer any evidence that any voter is likely to be intimidated, threatened, or 21 coerced due to the polling. Instead, Plaintiff offers conclusory statements based only 22 on the purported motivation of Stop the Steal and its volunteers. Plaintiff does not 23 offer the vital evidentiary components that would allow this Court to infer likely or 24 intended intimidation: precisely what Stop the Steal plans to do, where it plans to do 25 it, how such conduct will intimidate voters, or even if the exit polling will ultimately 26 occur. The factually unsubstantiated, though informed, opinion of Plaintiff’s expert 27 does not obviate the need for further evidence of either Stop the Steal’s alleged 28

1 stratagem to intimidate non-white voters, or indeed any evidence of what Stop the 2 Steal will do at the polls. Without such evidence, this Court cannot evaluate whether 3 Defendants' activities might constitute intimidate voters or not, and thus Plaintiff has 4 failed to meet its burden.

5 Plaintiff has also produced evidence that Stop the Steal and Mr. Stone recruited 6 and mobilized groups of volunteers known as "vote protectors," who are encouraged 7 to identify themselves as reporting for vote protections, approach voters at the polls, 8 and inquire about election fraud. Plaintiff also alleges that Mr. Stone is using social 9 media to urge uncredentialed observers to wear red shirts on Election Day. However, 10 other than perhaps concerning a message printed on a t-shirt (which is not alleged 11 here) there is no prohibition regarding the clothing of uncredentialed observers at 12 polling locations, nor has Plaintiff provided any legal precedent holding that such 13 activity is unconstitutional, likely to intimidate voters, or will otherwise hinder voter 14 participation. Neither the encouragement of the activities alleged, nor the activities 15 themselves are per se prohibited. Since it was Plaintiff's burden to illustrate that the 16 activities are likely to intimidate, threaten, or coerce voters and their evidence has 17 failed to do so, the Court must deny them relief.

18 VI

19 CONCLUSION

20
21 The Supreme Court, in declining whether to enjoin a voter identification law on 22 the eve of an election, ruled that "Given the imminence of the election and the 23 inadequate time to resolve the factual disputes, our action today shall of necessity 24 allow the election to proceed without an injunction..." Purcell v Gonzalez, 549 U.S.1, 25 3 (2006). Even if this Court found there was some evidence offered by the Plaintiff, 26 which we strenuously aver it should not, then the Court should follow the lesson of 27

1 Purcell and decline to issue an injunction the day before an election on contested 2 facts without a full opportunity for a hearing on regular notice.

3 For all these reasons, the court should deny the motion.
