Preliminary Injunction

The court finds that plaintiff Autumn Cordellioné has demonstrated a reasonable likelihood of success on the merits of her claim that Indiana Code § 11-10-3-3.5—which bans gender-affirming surgery for transgender inmates—is unconstitutional, both on its face and as applied to her. Specifically, Ms. Cordellioné has shown that her gender dysphoria is a serious medical need, and that, despite other treatments Defendant has provided her to treat her gender dysphoria, she requires gender-affirming surgery to prevent a risk of serious bodily and psychological harm. Thus, she has demonstrated a reasonable likelihood of success in demonstrating that denying her gender-affirming surgery violates the Eighth Amendment as it denies her necessary medical care to address a serious medical need. Additionally, she has demonstrated a reasonable likelihood of success in demonstrating that denying her genderaffirming surgery represents prohibited sex discrimination in violation of Equal Protection. The surgeries that are banned by the Indiana statute are still available to cisgender inmates who require them for serious medical needs.

The court also finds that Plaintiff has demonstrated that she is suffering irreparable harm and will continue to suffer such harm unless she is provided gender-affirming surgery. When balancing this harm against the harm Defendant would face if preliminary relief were granted, Case 3:23-cv-00135-RLY-CSW
