IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLORADO

Civil Action No. 1:20-cv-03747

KEVIN O'ROURKE, et al.,

Plaintiffs,

v.

DOMINION VOTING SYSTEMS INC., et al.,

Defendants.

PLAINTIFFS' RESPONSE AND BRIEF IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS WOLF AND DEGRAFFENREID'S MOTION TO DISMISS

COME NOW the Plaintiffs, by and through counsel, and hereby submit the following Response and Brief in Opposition to Defendant Tom Wolf's and Acting Secretary Veronica Degraffenreid's motion to dismiss [Doc. 49], and hereby respectfully request that the motion be denied or, in the alternative, determined to be moot, for the reasons set forth below.

I. INTRODUCTION

The Plaintiffs have not sued the State of Pennsylvania. When state actors are in their official capacity, they represent the State. Naming persons in their official capacity is tantamount to suing a State. While a citizen may not sue a State for damages, a citizen is allowed to request a federal court to enjoin a State from prospective unconstitutional behavior. Nonetheless, when state actors violate the Constitution, they are stripped of their official capacity and are liable in their individual capacity. That is the holding in Ex Parte Young, which is the law of the case in this matter. The Plaintiffs herein have filed an Amended Complaint, and a request for class designation. Accordingly, the motion to dismiss filed herein is moot.

II. BACKGROUND

As is outlined in the Complaint, the Defendants, Kathy Boockvar (Ms. Boockvar) and Tom Wolf (Mr. Wolf), violated the constitutional rights of the Plaintiffs, and of a class of similarly situated persons. All of Ms. Boockvar's and Mr. Wolf's conduct was under color of their official authority of as the secretary of the Commonwealth and governor of Pennsylvania, respectively. By violating the Constitution, Ms. Boockvar and Mr. Wolf are liable in their personal capacity. The grounds upon which the Plaintiffs have made their claims are well documented, and are cited throughout the Complaint.

As such, Ms. Boockvar and Mr. Wolf's actions burdened the rights of the Plaintiffs to vote for the Vice-President and President. These individuals knew that their actions concerned a Presidential election. Both swore an oath to protect and defend the Constitution of the United States. Accordingly, Pennsylvania can state in its pleading that it "held a free, fair, and lawful election in which more than 6.9 million Pennsylvanians voted for President," but the Plaintiffs have established an issue of fact as to whether that is true. Doc. 49, p.1.

Ultimately, the Supreme Court found that the State of Texas had "not demonstrated a judicially cognizable interest in the manner in which another State conducts its elections." Texas v. Pennsylvania, No. 22O155 (U.S. Dec 11, 2020). Additionally, in Donald J. Trump for President v. Boockvar et al., former President Trump filed a Motion for Expedited Consideration in the United States Supreme Court to evaluate the constitutionality of the three Pennsylvania Supreme Court decisions: In re November 3, 2020 Gen. Election, In re Canvassing Observation, and In re Canvass of Absentee & Mail-Ballots of November 3, 2020. However, the Supreme Court dismissed the case on February 22, 2021, without comment. The Plaintiffs have since filed a constitutional challenge to Act 77, the source of the controversy, in their Amended Complaint.

Numerous other private lawsuits have been filed. However, all of them have named the Defendants, herein, in their official capacity. Here, the Plaintiffs name Ms. Boockvar and Mr. Wolf in their individual capacity, in both the original and amended complaints. That's not a pleadings device or trick—that's how the Constitutions works in conjunction with the Civil Rights Act, and other federal laws prohibiting the violation of rights.

When voters come to the federal courts with valid constitutional claims, pursuant to § 1983, counsel for the plaintiff becomes a private attorney general. In that regard, the Plaintiffs have not requested that the Court impose extraordinary relief, which would require a plaintiff to establish a likelihood of success on the merits. That's not the standard, here. In fact, although the constitutional challenge in the Amended Complaint is a question of law, if the jury finds in favor of the Plaintiffs and determines that Ms. Boockvar and Mr. Wolf violated the Constitution, both are stripped of the protections of their office, which would otherwise cloak them with immunity under the Eleventh Amendment.

At this stage, the Court must accept all well plead facts as true. Thus, the issue is: If a governor, in concert with the secretary of state of that same State, engaged in conduct which violates the constitutional rights of others, even in other States, can those state actors be held responsible? If these state actors are liable for their unconstitutional conduct, who can hold them responsible? According to every Defendant in this lawsuit, the registered voter cannot. They don't have standing, say the Defendants. The registered voter, who mailed in her ballot, or waited in line to vote in a Presidential election, doesn't have standing? If they don't, then who does? Since the Plaintiffs obviously have standing, it is not necessary to labor over the latter question.

III. THE DEFENDANTS APPEAR IN THEIR INDIVIDUAL CAPACITY

The Defendants, Ms. Boockvar and Mr. Wolf, have been sued their individual capacity. Comp. ¶¶ 23, 24. "A suit against an official in his personal capacity is a suit against a person acting under color of law." Tanzin v. Tanvir, 141 S.Ct. 486, 491 (2020). The phrase "persons acting under color of law" draws on one of the most well-known civil rights statutes: 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Id. As the Supreme Court affirmed, twelve days before the complaint was filed:

> That statute applies to 'person[s] ... under color of any statute,' and this Court has long interpreted it to permit suits against officials in their individual capacities.

Id.

The plain language of § 1983 reads:

> Every person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage, of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress. [Emphasis added].

Here, the Defendants are persons under the statute that violated the rights of many citizens of the United States, in Pennsylvania, Colorado, and every other state in the Union. Knowingly violating the rights of voters in a Presidential election has far reaching consequences that effect every registered voter, including the Plaintiffs. In that regard, Defendants, Ms. Boockvar and Mr. Wolf admit to being served on Feb 25, 2021. Doc. 49, p. 2, no. 2. However, the Defendants deny that the Court has personal jurisdiction over them. Id. at pp 5-7.

"The law of the forum state and constitutional due process limitations govern personal jurisdiction in federal court." Old Republic Ins. Co. v. Cont'l Motors, Inc., 877 F.3d 895, 903 (10th Cir. 2017). "Colorado's long-arm statute, Colo.Rev.Stat. § 13-1-124, extends jurisdiction to the Constitutions full extent." Id.

With that, due process "requires both that the defendant 'purposefully established minimum contacts within the forum State'" and that the "assertion of personal jurisdiction would comport with 'fair play and substantial justice.'" Id. at 903 (quoting Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 476 (1985)). Depending "on their relationship to the plaintiff's cause of action, an out-of-state defendant's contacts with the forum state may give rise to either general (all-purpose) jurisdiction or specific (case-linked) jurisdiction." Id.

Specific jurisdiction means that a court may exercise jurisdiction over an out-of-state party only if the cause of action relates to the party's contacts with the forum state." Id. at 904. Specific jurisdiction calls for a two-step inquiry: (a) whether the plaintiff has shown that the defendant has minimum contacts with the forum state; and, if so, (b) whether the defendant has presented a "compelling case that the presence of some other considerations would render jurisdiction unreasonable." Id. at 904 (quoting Burger King Corp., 471 U.S. at 475).

Two weeks ago, the Supreme Court held that the connection between the plaintiffs' claims and a car manufacturer's activities in the forum State was close enough to support specific jurisdiction. Ford Motor Co. v. Montana Eighth Judicial District Court, 592 U.S.____,____ (2021). There, the Supreme Court reaffirmed several general principles of law, which include that a plaintiffs' claims "must arise out of or relate to the defendant's contacts" with the forum. Id. at slip op., p. 2 (quoting Bristol-Myers, 582 U.S.____, ____(2017)(slip op., at 5).

The contacts must be the defendant's own choice and not "random, isolated, or fortuitous." Keeton v. Hustler Magazine, Inc., 465 U.S. 770, 774 (1984). "Or put just a bit differently, 'there must be 'an affiliation between the forum and the underlying controversy, principally, [an] activity or an occurrence that takes place in the forum State and is therefore subject to the State's regulation.'" Id. at slip op., p. 6 (quoting Bristol-Meyers, 582 U.S., at____-____,____(slip op., at 5-6, 7)(quoting Goodyear, 564 U.S. 915, 919 (2011).

Here, both Ms. Boockvar and Mr. Wolf were responsible for the certification of Pennsylvania's election, which included the 2020 Presidential election. As outlined with specificity in the Plaintiffs' Complaint, Ms. Boockvar, "without legislative approval, unilaterally abrogated several Pennsylvania statutes requiring signature verification for absentee or mail-in ballots. " Complaint, Doc. 1, ¶ 232 (a). See Complaint, ¶¶ 219-232. As alleged, this "entire scheme, which was only followed in Democrat majority counties, was blatantly illegal in that it permitted the illegal removal of ballots from their lock containers prematurely," which created "a system whereby local officials could review ballots without proper announcement, observation, and security." Complaint, ¶ 232(a)-(h).

These actions were done with the knowledge and consent of the State's chief executive officer, Mr. Wolf. Accordingly, because of that, and the other unconstitutional acts and laws concerning Pennsylvania's 2020 Presidential election, both Ms. Boockvar and Mr. Wolf violated their oaths of office when they signed the Certificate of Ascertainment on November 24, 2020. Complaint, ¶¶ 249, 252. With that, these Defendants' knew that their acts would affect the voting rights of every person eligible to vote in the United States, which includes the Plaintiffs.

All qualified voters have a constitutionally protected right to vote. Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U.S. 651 (1884). It is "as equally unquestionable that the right to have one's vote counted is as open to protection…as the right to put a ballot in a box." United States v. Mosley, 238 U.S. 383, 386 (1915). Beyond that, "in the context of a Presidential election," which ultimately touches upon all of the people's rights, unconstitutional state actions "implicate a uniquely important national interest." Anderson v. Celebrezze, 460 U.S. 780, 794-795 (1983).

In Anderson, the Court identified a common right of voters, as "the President and Vice President of the United States are the only elected officials who represent all the voters in the Nation." Id. at 795. Of course, state-actors can be punished "when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice President" are abridged. U.S. Constitution, Amend. 14, Sect. 2. States are accountable for managing the Presidential election.

There is a "pervasive national interest in the selection of candidates for national office, and this national interest is greater than any interest of an individual State." Cousins v. Wigoda, 419 U.S. 477, 490 (1975) (emphasis added).

Importantly, the impact of the votes cast in each State is affected by the votes cast for the various candidates in other States. Anderson, 460 U.S. at 795. The "primary concern is not the interest of candidate Anderson, but rather, the interests of the voters who chose to associate together…" Id. at 788 (emphasis added). In Anderson, the Supreme Court recognized:

> [A]s a practical matter, there must be a substantial regulation of elections if they are to be fair and honest and if some sort of order, rather than chaos, is to accompany the democratic processes." To achieve these necessary objectives, States have enacted comprehensive and sometimes complex election codes. Each provision of these schemes, whether it governs the registration and qualifications of voters, the selection and eligibility of candidates, or the voting process itself, inevitably affects — at least to some degree — the individual's right to vote and his right to associate with others for political ends.

Id. at 788 (quoting Storer v. Brown, 415 U. S. 724, 730 (1974)) (emphasis added).

Further, this class action suit was filed in Colorado as it also relates to the business activities of Co-Defendants, Dominion Voting Systems, Inc. (Dominion), Facebook, Inc. (Facebook), and Center for Technology and Civic Life (CTCL), all of whom have significant contacts to Colorado in association with the 2020 Presidential election. See Doc. 39, 40, 64.

After the 2020 Presidential election, when a representative of Dominion cancelled a scheduled appearance at a fact-finding hearing set for November 20, 2020, State Representative Seth Grove, the interim chairman for the State Government Committee and Chair of the Government Oversight Committee, publicly stated:

> It is vitally important voters have faith in the machines they use to cast their ballots. On the heels of Gov. Tom Wolf unilaterally decertifying every voting machine in the Commonwealth, we need to know whether these new machines met expectations, whether they are reliable and whether they are not subject to interference…I was impressed at what appeared to be the willingness that Dominion Voting Systems to address accusations and it would have put 1.3 million Pennsylvanians who used their machines at ease—including myself, thinking Dominion was willing to publicly back up their product which PA taxpayers invested millions to purchase… Unfortunately, last evening. Dominion Voting Systems lawyered up, and backed out of their commitment to the people of Pennsylvania to provide their input in a pubic format.[1]

With regard to personal jurisdiction, as well, counsel for the Defendants filed their motion to dismiss on behalf of "Pennsylvania Governor Tom Wolf and Pennsylvania Acting Secretary of the Commonwealth Veronica Degraffenreid," claiming to substitute the latter for Ms. Boockvar. Doc. 49, p. 1, no.1. Counsel also entered their appearance on behalf of "Defendants Governor Tom Wolf and Acting Secretary Veronica Degraffenreid." Doc. 57. However, Mr. Wolf has not been sued in his official capacity, and Secretary Veronica Degraffenreid hasn't been named, in any capacity.

IV. THE PLAINTIFFS HAVE STANDING TO SUE INDIVIDUALS THAT VIOLATE THEIR CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS

Last month, the Supreme Court affirmed an individual's right to sue a state official for nominal damages in the latter's individual capacity. Uzuegbunam v. Preczewski, 592 U.S.____ (2021). The plaintiffs were former students of Georgia Gwinnet College, who wished to share their faith while enrolled there. Id. at slip op., p. 1.

[1] Debra Heine, Dominion Voting Systems 'Lawyer Up,' Abruptly Backs out of Pennsylvania State House Fact-Finding Hearing, Minnesota Sun, Nov. 21 (2020).

They sued certain college officials charged with enforcement of the college's speech policies, arguing that these policies violated the First Amendment. Id. at slip op., p. 2. The college discontinued the polices, and then sought dismissal on the ground that the policy change left the students without standing to sue. Id. at slip op., p. 3.

The Supreme Court held:

> Because nominal damages were available at common law in analogous circumstances, we conclude that a request for nominal damages satisfies the redressability element of standing where a plaintiff's claim is based on a completed violation of a legal right.

Id. at slip op., p. 11.

In Uzuegbunam, the plaintiffs' request to change the policy of a State institution would require the Court to maintain jurisdiction over a state actor, only through a district court's power to enjoin the prospective, unconstitutional conduct of the institution. Otherwise, the State would not be liable for any money damages accessed against the state actors, operating in their official capacity. Such claims are barred by the Eleventh Amendment. However, the plaintiffs in Uzuegbunam had the right to seek nominal damages from the state actors, individually. That's is exactly what is going on, here. What makes a governor or a secretary of state any different than any other state actor? There is no difference. Just like the defendants in Uzuegbunam, if a governor and/or secretary of state violate the constitutional rights of others, the latter has standing to sue the former for damages. The Plaintiffs have been saying this from the beginning.

As the Supreme Court stated:

> To satisfy the 'irreducible constitutional minimum' of Article III standing, a plaintiff must not only establish (1) an injury in fact (2) that is fairly traceable to the challenged conduct, but he must also seek (3) a remedy that is likely to redress that injury. Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 338 (2016).

Id. at slip op., p. 3.

Here, the Supreme Court quoted Lord Holt, who, dissenting in case from 1703, "argued that the common law inferred damages whenever a legal right was violated." Id. at slip op., p. 6. (citing Ashby v. White, 2 Raym. Ld. 938, 941-943, 948, 92 Eng. Rep. 126, 129, 130, 133 (K.B. 1703)). The Supreme Court elaborated:

> Observing that the law recognized 'not merely pecuniary' injury but also 'personal injury,' Lord Holt stated that 'every injury imports a damage' and the plaintiff could always obtain damages even if the 'does not lose a penny by reason of the [violation.].'"

Id., quoting Ashby, supra, at 955, 92 Eng. Rep., at 137.

The Supreme Court recognized that, while this common-law doctrine "was not universally followed," "many adopted the rule in full whenever a person proved that there was a violation of an "'important right.'" Id. at p.7. (citing Hecht v. Harrison, 40 P.2d 306, 309-310 (Wyo. 1895). "Nominal damages are not a consolation prize for the plaintiff who pleads, but fails to prove, compensatory damages." Id. at 9. 'They are instead the damages awarded by default until the plaintiff establishes to some other form of damages, such as compensatory or statutory damages." Id.

"Despite being small, nominal damages are certainly concrete." Id. Because nominal damages are in fact damages paid to the plaintiff, the affect 'the behavior of the defendant towards the plaintiff' and thus independently provide redress. Id. (quoting Hewitt v. Hewitt, 482 U.S. 755, 761 (1987).

"Because redressability is an 'irreducible' component of standing [citation], no federal court has jurisdiction unless it provides a remedy that can redress the plaintiff's injury." Id. at slip op., p. 10 (quoting Spokeo, 578 U.S. at 338). Nominal damages are redress, not a byproduct. Id.

V. PLAINTIFFS HAVE PROPERLY ALLEGED CIVIL RIGHTS CLAIMS AGAINST MS. BOOCKVAR AND MR. WOLF

A. MS. BOOCKVAR AND MR. WOLF ARE STATE ACTORS

A Section 1983 claim is only applicable to conduct occurring under color of law. Here, all of the unconstitutional conduct alleged by the Plaintiffs were committed by Ms. Boockvar and Mr. Wolf, under color of their official authority as governor and secretary of the Commonwealth, respectively. Accordingly, there is no question that Ms. Boockvar and Mr. Wolf are state actors.

Although the Supreme Court found that the State of Texas did not have standing to sue other States with regard to the latter's' elections, the State of Texas would have standing to sue certain individual, state actors, for violating the rights of its citizens. Maybe it will join in this suit, but that question is not before the Court. The issue is can the Plaintiffs sue these named persons, in their individual capacity.

B. PLAINTIFFS HAVE STATED A CLAIM UPON WHICH RELIEF MAY BE GRANTED

A Section 1983 claim requires a plaintiff to show both the existence of a federally protected right and the deprivation of that right by a person acting under color of state law. 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Lugar v. Edmondson Oil Co., Inc., 457 U.S. 922, 924 (1982).

Accordingly, as averred, the Plaintiffs have suffered a particularized injury-in-fact. The legislative history of section 1983 "demonstrates that it was intended to create a species of tort liability in favor of persons who are deprived of rights, privileges, or immunities secured to them by the Constitution." Imbler v. Pachtman, 424 U.S. 409, 417 (1976).

Here, the Plaintiffs amended their complaint, attached to their motion for leave to amend. Doc. 48, Ex. 1. In the Amended Complaint, the Plaintiffs, joined by over 140 more Plaintiffs, eight of whom are from Pennsylvania, filed a constitutional challenge to Pennsylvania's Act 77. With that, the Defendants' motion to dismiss cannot be ruled upon outside of the context of these additional parties and claims.

The Defendants allege that the Plaintiffs' original complaint contains no allegations identifying any way in which a defendant did anything other than administer "the 2020 election consistent with Pennsylvania's constitution and election code." Doc. 49, p. 10. However, now that the Plaintiffs have included the constitutional challenge in their Amended Complaint, the analysis is different.

As was stated by the Supreme Court in Ex parte Young:

> The answer to all this is the same as made in every case where an official claims to be acting under the authority of the State. The act to be enforced is alleged to be unconstitutional, and if it be so, the use of the name of the State to enforce an unconstitutional act to the injury of complainants is a proceeding without the authority of and one which does not affect the State in its sovereign or governmental capacity. It is simply an illegal act upon the part of a state official in attempting by the use of the name of the State to enforce a legislative enactment which is void because unconstitutional. If the act which the state Attorney General seeks to enforce be a violation of the Federal Constitution, the officer in proceeding under such enactment comes into conflict with the superior authority of that Constitution, and he is in that case stripped of his official or representative character and is subjected in his person to the consequences of his individual conduct. The State has no power to impart to him any immunity from responsibility to the supreme authority of the United States. It would be an injury to complainant to harass it with a multiplicity of suits or litigation generally in an endeavor to enforce penalties under an unconstitutional enactment, and to prevent it ought to be within the jurisdiction of a court of equity. If the question of unconstitutionality with reference, at least, to the Federal Constitution be first raised in a Federal court that court, as we think is shown by the authorities cited hereafter, has the right to decide it to the exclusion of all other courts.

Ex parte Young, 209 U.S. 123, 159-160. [Emphasis added].

Admittedly, the Supreme Court was presented with similar arguments made by other parties, challenging the constitutionality of Pennsylvania's election laws. As is stated in the Defendant's motion to dismiss, the Supreme Court has declined to do so. However, that does not foreclose the issue.

In Kelly v. Commonwealth, the Plaintiffs argued that Act 77, as described in the Complaint, was unconstitutional, because it expanded the scope of absentee voting to all voters, which, in effect:

> a. created an entire class of electors who are shown to have received a mail-in ballot, despite never actually receiving a mail-in ballot; and,
>
> b. similarly produced a whole class of voters who received unsolicited or unrequested mail-in ballots that never voted via mail-in ballot and never intended to vote by mail.

Complaint, ¶¶ 233-238.

There, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court dismissed "the petition for review with prejudice based upon the Petitioner's failure to file their facial constitutional challenge in a timely manner." Kelly v. Commonwealth, 240 A.3d 1255, 1256 (2020). Additionally, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court noted that the petitioners "sought to invalidate the ballots of the millions of Pennsylvania voters who utilized the mail-in ballot procedures established by Act 77 and count only those ballots that Petitioners deem to be 'legal votes.'" Id. "Alternately, Petitioners advocated the extraordinary proposition that the court disenfranchise all 6.9 million Pennsylvanians who voted in the General Election and instead 'direct the General Assembly to choose Pennsylvania's electors.'" Id. Essentially, their request for relief was barred by the doctrine of laches. Id. at 1256-1257. The merits of the claim were never reached.

With regard to the Defendants' argument that "Count II contends Governor Wolf and Acting Secretary Degraffenreid" violated both the Equal Protection Clause and the Fifteenth Amendment, counsel for the Defendants again simply concludes that the Plaintiffs are suing these state actors in their official capacity. The motion to dismiss makes no motions on behalf of Ms. Boockvar, and does not address the claims made against her, individually.

While it is true that the Equal Protection clause prohibits every state from denying "any person within its jurisdiction the equal protections of the laws," the Defendants argument that the Plaintiffs "may not complain of unequal treatment under Pennsylvania laws that do not apply to them," belies the Plaintiffs' Amended Complaint that includes a number of Pennsylvanians. Since the filing of the Plaintiff's motion for leave to amend, counsel for the Plaintiffs have received hundreds of additional affidavits, many of whom are also registered voters from Pennsylvania. Simply put, it is improper to dismiss the Plaintiffs' complaints without additional time to argue the merits of the Amended Complaint, and allow others to join, or be added to the prospective classes.

With regard to the Plaintiffs' claim for relief under the Due Process Clause, the Plaintiffs have established a triable issue of fact concerning the fundamental fairness of Pennsylvania's voting system. The cases cited by the Defendants, while instructive with regard to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court's interpretation of Pennsylvania election law, these statutory considerations do not resolve the question of the constitutionality of Act 77. This may have been a deficiency in the Plaintiffs' original Complaint, but one which has been cured by the Amended Complaint. At this juncture, it is unfair to require the Plaintiffs to prospectively argue the issues concerning their Amended Complaint in the context of the Defendants' motion to dismiss the original Complaint.

In its motion to dismiss, the Defendants characterize a report filed by Pennsylvania House of Representative, Francis X. Ryan, as "misleading" and "misguided." Doc. 49, pp. 13-14.

The Defendant's further malign Representative Ryan's report that states, "it is IMPOSSIBLE for anyone to contend that fraud did not occur." Doc, 49, p. 14. Noting that statement is from a Pennsylvania State Representative, there is clearly a factual issue as to whether Pennsylvania's election is fundamentally unfair. As stated in that same report:

> The general election of 2020 in Pennsylvania was fraught with inconsistencies, documented irregularities and improprieties associated with mail-in balloting, precanvassing, and canvassing that the reliability of the mail-in votes in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is impossible to rely upon.

The Defendants also contend that the factual anomalies cited by the Plaintiffs and in the Ryan Report do not supply "details that might suggest the existence of fraud with the specificity required by Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 9(b)." Doc. 49, p. 14. In that regard, the Plaintiffs have not plead fraud. However, the existence of such would certainly be a factual matter to investigate further, and to later establish to prove the claimed constitutional violations.

Lastly, the Defendants object to the Plaintiffs request for declaratory and injunctive relief, which are clarified in the Plaintiff's Amended Complaint.

VI. MS. BOOCKVAR AND MR. WOLF'S MOTION TO DISMISS IS MOOT

Plaintiffs have filed their motion for leave to amend their complaint. Accordingly, acceptance of the Amended Complaint renders Ms. Boockvar and Mr. Wolf's motion moot. Here, the amended complaint adds over 140 additional Plaintiffs, supplements the factual allegations, and cures any alleged defects in the original Complaint with regard to Rule 23.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons above, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Court deny Defendants' motion to dismiss in its entirety, or, in the alternative, deny Defendants' motion as moot, in light of the Plaintiffs' Amended Complaint.

Respectfully submitted this 8th day of April, 2021.

PLAINTIFFS COUNSEL:

By: s/Ernest J. Walker
Ernest J. Walker (MI P58635)
ERNEST J. WALKER LAW OFFICE
1444 Stuart St.
Denver, CO 80204
(720) 306-0007
ernestjwalker@gmail.com

By: s/ Gary D. Fielder
Gary D. Fielder (CO 19757)
LAW OFFICE OF GARY FIELDER
1444 Stuart St.
Denver, CO 80204
(720) 306-0007
gary@fielderlaw.net

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

The undersigned hereby certifies that on April 8, 2021, a copy of the foregoing document was electronically filed with the Court using the CM/ECF system which will send notification of such filing to all counsel of record.

s/Gary D. Fielder
Gary D. Fielder, Esq.
Law Office of Gary Fielder
1444 Stuart St.
Denver, CO 80204
(720)306-0007
gary@fielderlaw.net