

EEOC v. Marchfirst, Inc. alleged that a management and technology consulting firm demoted an employee from her position as an executive assistant to the chief financial officer because of her pregnancy. Subsequently, the company placed the employee on indefinite probation, resulting in her constructive discharge. The company agreed to pay the individual $120,000 in damages.