

RICHARD E. GUGGENHIME
PAUL T. WOLF
ROBERT C. HARRIS
ALBERT M. MONACO
LAWRENCE C. BAKER
LOUIS H. HEILBRON
ROBERT J. WHITE
EDWARD W. ROSSON
FRANK H. SLOSS
JULIAN N. STERN
GEORGE A. BLACKSTONE
MICHAEL J. CULLEN
LLOYD W. DINKELSPIEL, JR.
RICHARD E. TAVLIAN
CHARLES H. CLIFFORD
WILLIAM R. MACKAY
WEYMAN I. LUNDQUIST
THOMAS B. MCGUIRE
JERRY H. ROBINSON
VICTOR A. HEBERT
M. LAURENCE POPOFSKY
JOHN H. CUTLER

HELLER, EHRMAN, WHITE & McAULIFFE

ATTORNEYS

THIRTIETH FLOOR • WELLS FARGO BUILDING
44 MONTGOMERY STREET • SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA 94104

December 16, 1970

E. S. HELLER (1889-1926)
F. M. McAULIFFE (1911-1957)

SIDNEY M. EHRMAN
JEROME D. WHITE
SAMUEL S. STEVENS
JOSEPH D. TOOHIG
F. WHITNEY TENNEY
DONALD W. FALCONER OF COUNSEL

CABLE: HELPOW
TELEPHONE: AREA 415
981-5000

Richard Green, Esq.
Housing Section
Civil Rights Division
Department of Justice
Washington, D.C. 20530

Re: Trafficante, et al v. Metropolitan Life Insurance Company
Racial Discrimination Suit

Dear Mr. Green:

Enclosed please find a copy of the brief filed by the undersigned on December 14, 1970. The brief is in response to the motion to dismiss of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, and Exhibit E is in support of plaintiffs' motion to join the purchaser of Parkmerced as an additional defendant. The hearing on these matters will be at 1:30 p.m. on Friday, December 18, 1970, before Judge Burke in the Federal Building, 17th floor.

We greatly appreciate the assistance which you have given us, and we hope that we can count on your continuing cooperation until the racial imbalance at Parkmerced has been corrected.

Very truly yours,

GEORGE H. CLYDE, JR.
STEPHEN V. BOMSE

By:
George H. Clyde, Jr.

Volunteer Attorneys
San Francisco Lawyers Committee for Urban Affairs

Enclosure

175-017-16
3	DEC 21 1970
R.A.C.
CIV. RIGHTS DIV.

ORIGINAL
FILED

DEC 14 1970

CLERK, U. S. DIST. COURT
SAN FRANCISCO

1 GEORGE H. CLYDE, JR.
2 STEPHEN V. BOMSE
3 44 Montgomery Street, Suite 3000
4 S Francisco, California 94104
5 T phone: 981-5000

6 Attorneys for Plaintiffs and
7 Plaintiffs in Intervention.

8 IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
9 FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

10 11 PAUL J. TRAFFICANTE and
12 DOROTHY M. CARR,

13 Plaintiffs,

14 vs.

15 METROPOLITAN LIFE INSURANCE
16 COMPANY, a New York corporation,

17 Defendant,

18 COMMITTEE OF PARKMERCED RESIDENTS
19 COMMITTED TO OPEN OCCUPANCY, an 20 unincorporated association; THE 21 REVEREND ARTHUR H. NEWBERG; JAMES
22 EMBREE; ALBERT JAMES HEICK;
23 JACQUELINE TCHAKALIAN,

24 Plaintiffs in Intervention.

) NO. C-70 1754 (LMB)

)

) MEMORANDUM OF
) POINTS AND AUTHORITIES ) IN OPPOSITION TO ) MOTIONS TO DISMISS

)

)

)

)

)

)

)

25 "Negroes and whites don't mix. Perhaps they 26 will in a hundred years, but not now. If we 27 brought them into this development [Stuyvesant 28 Town], it would be to the detriment of the city, 29 too, because it would depress all the surrounding 30 property." Frederick H. Ecker, Chairman of the Board, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, quoted in the New York Post, May 20, 1943.

31 "...[T]he duly authorized officers and direc-32 tors of the defendants have determined, in the 33 exercise of their sound discretion and best 34 judgment, that the successful operation of the 35 project [Stuyvesant Town] and the safety of the 36 investment of the funds held for the benefit of 37 the policyholders of the defendant, Metropolitan 38 Life Insurance Company, require that Negroes

1 should not, at the present time, be accepted
2 as tenants in this project." Brief of Metro-3 politan Life Insurance Company, submitted in 4 Polier v. O'Dwyer, 85 N.Y.2d 313, aff'd sub 5 nom., Dorsey v. Stuyvesant Town, 299 N.Y.
6 512.

7 INTRODUCTION

8 1/ Plaintiffs and plaintiffs in intervention 2/ seek in 9 these proceedings to end the notorious racial discrimination 10 3/

11 1/ Paul J. Trafficante and Dorothy M. Carr.

12 2/ Committee of Parkmerced Residents Committed to Open Occupancy; 13 The Reverend Arthur H. Newberg; James Embree; Albert James 14 Heick and Jacqueline Tchakalian. Except where otherwise noted, 15 plaintiffs and plaintiffs in intervention above-named are 16 collectively referred to in this Memorandum as "plaintiffs".

17 3/ Allegations of racial discrimination with respect to 18 Metropolitan's housing practices are in no way new. Indeed, 19 more than twenty years ago racial exclusion at Metropolitan 20 developments in New York (similar to Parkmerced and erected at 21 approximately the same time) was the subject of a landmark 22 4-3 decision of the New York Court of Appeals upholding the 23 right of a private landlord to discriminate in tenant selection.
24 Dorsey v. Stuyvesant Town, 299 N.Y. 512, 87 N.E.2d 541 (1949), 25 cert. denied, 339 U.S. 981 (1950). In those proceedings, which 26 obviously antedated passage of the 1968 Civil Rights Act 27 (42 U.S.C. §3601) and the decision of the United States Supreme 28 Court in Jones v. Mayer, 392 U.S. 409 (1968) interpreting 29 42 U.S.C. §1982, Metropolitan freely admitted its policy of 30 exclusion. See quotation from Metropolitan's brief in those proceedings supra at 1-2.

Metropolitan's policies of racial discrimination have not only been the subject of judicial and administrative proceedings, but have been the subject of various books, articles and scholarly studies, including, most recently, Simon, STUYVESANT TOWN, U.S.A.: PATTERN FOR TWO AMERICAS (New York University Press, 1970), from which the above quotations were taken.
See also, e.g., Abrams, FORBIDDEN NEIGHBORS (New York: Harper & Brothers, 1955) at pages 244-59, and Weaver, THE NEGRO GHETTO (New York: Harcourt Brace & Company, 1948) at pages 320-21, as well as the numerous articles cited in Simon, supra.

Metropolitan's tenant selection practices at Parkmerced itself are equally well-known. In fact, in 1963, when Parkmerced entered into a joint agreement with the NAACP to admit Negroes to Metropolitan's various residential projects, the news rated a banner headline in the San Francisco Examiner and a front page article in the Chronicle ("Parkmerced, the community of tower and garden apartments near the shores of Lake Merced, will be opened to Negroes, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company said yesterday." [San Francisco Chronicle 8/12/63]).

1 which has existed at Parkmerced for many years. More, plaintiffs 2 seek to remedy the effects of these past years of discrimination.
3 Expectably, defendant Metropolitan Life Insurance Company 4 ("Metropolitan") has moved to dismiss on a variety of procedural 5 grounds. However, as we demonstrate hereafter, defendant's 6 claims are without merit and should be rejected so that this 7 litigation can move forward expeditiously on its merits as 8 required by law.<sup>4/</sup>

9 Plaintiffs here are four White tenants, two Negro 10 tenants, and an unincorporated association of Parkmerced residents 11 which has endeavored for more than a year to end the discriminatory 12 practices at Parkmerced. They bring the instant action because 13 Metropolitan's policies of racial exclusion at Parkmerced have 14 created an artificial, unhealthy and injurious "White ghetto".
15 The individual plaintiffs act in their self-interest to end 16 the harm which the imbalanced community is doing to them and

17
18 3/ (continued)

19 Despite the fanfare which greeted Metropolitan's 20 announcement, however, the intervening seven years have failed 21 to bring about the heralded change, for Parkmerced remains over 22 99% Caucasian and of the few minority applicants who have been 23 admitted, several obtained apartments only after filing or 24 threatening to file legal or administrative actions. This con-25 tinuing exclusion of minority persons from Parkmerced has recently 26 prompted the Chairman of California Fair Employment Practices 27 Commission to note: "...[A]s I think is quite obvious for one 28 reason or another, there has been almost a total exclusion of 29 minorities from Parkmerced." Letter from Pier A. Gherini, Chair-30 man, California Fair Employment Practices Commission to Raymond V. Ringler, Vice President-Housing, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, August 14, 1970.

4/ "Any court in which a proceeding is instituted under section 3612 or 3613 of this title shall assign the case for hearing at the earliest practicable date and cause the case to be in every way expedited."
(42 U.S.C. §3614).

1 to their families. The Committee proceeds on behalf of a 2 group of citizens committed to the elimination of racial 3 discrimination at Parkmerced because of the injurious effect 4 such discrimination inevitably has on tenants, minority 5 applicants and the thousands of potential minority applicants 6 who are dissuaded ever from making application at Parkmerced 7 because of its notorious discrimination. In short, plaintiffs 8 assert their right to "an integrated environment" (SASSO v.
9 Union City, ___ F.2d ___ [9th Cir. 1970]; compare Shannon v.
10 HUD, 305 F.Supp. 205 [E.D. Pa. 1969]) which is denied to them 11 so long as defendant continues to practice racial discrimination, 12 and until the effects of past discrimination are remedied.

13 Metropolitan's response to this most recent 14 challenge to its tenant selection practices is the instant 15 Motion to Dismiss which broadly asserts (a) that this Court 16 lacks subject matter jurisdiction of the proceedings, (b) that 17 plaintiffs, both individuals and the Committee, lack standing 18 to raise the claims of discrimination asserted and (by way 19 of supplement) (c) that Metropolitan is relieved of obligation 20 with respect to its tenant selection policies at Parkmerced 21 as a result of its pending sale of the development. We 22 consider each of such claims hereafter.

I

THIS COURT HAS JURISDICTION OF CLAIMS RAISED UNDER SECTION 810 SINCE PLAINTIFFS HAVE NO JUDICIAL REMEDY UNDER ANY STATE OR LOCAL FAIR HOUSING LAW PROVIDING RIGHTS AND REMEDIES SUBSTANTIALLY EQUIVALENT TO RIGHTS AND REMEDIES AFFORDED BY THE CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1968

Metropolitan has initially moved to dismiss the First Cause of Action of the Complaint of plaintiffs Carr and Trafficante<sup>5/</sup> on the asserted ground that a proviso to §810(d) (42 U.S.C. §3610[d]) deprives this Court of jurisdiction since such plaintiffs assertedly "[have] a judicial remedy under a state or local fair housing law which provides rights and remedies for alleged discriminatory housing practices which are substantially equivalent to the rights and remedies provided in this sub-chapter...." Such language, Metropolitan asserts, ousts this Court of subject matter jurisdiction.

In brief, Metropolitan asserts that the provisions of the California Rumford Act (California Health & Safety Code §§35700-35744) afford plaintiffs Trafficante and Carr judicial remedies which are substantially equivalent to those available under Title VIII of the 1968 Civil Rights Act. However, the most cursory review of the California statute cited reflects that the judicial rights and remedies available to plaintiffs in the California courts are in no

---

<sup>5/</sup> By a curious theory of statutory incorporation, Metropolitan has sought to read the proviso of §810(d) into the wholly independent provisions of §812 (42 U.S.C.
§3612), which is the basis for the Second Cause of Action of the Carr and Trafficante Complaint and for the First Cause of Action to the Complaint in Intervention. Compare Brief of Defendant in Support of Motion to Dismiss at 5-7 and see also Response to Complaint in Intervention filed December 8, 1970, which incorporates such portion of the prior Memorandum of Defendant. These contentions, which are utterly without merit, are considered in detail hereafter at pp. 14-21.

1 sense equivalent to the relief available here.<sup>6/</sup>

2 A. The Rumford Fair Housing Act.

3 The Rumford Fair Housing Act undeniably provides 4 rights to certain persons to obtain relief from a limited 5 range of discriminatory housing practices. Yet such rights 6 are, in no sense, "substantially equivalent" to those provided 7 for by Title VIII.

8 Perhaps the most persuasive proof of such "non-9 equivalence" is the unquestioned fact that in these proceed-10 ings the California Fair Employment Practices Commission 11 ("FEPC"), which is the California agency charged with ad-12 ministration of the Rumford Act, has explicitly refused to 13 take any action whatever on the administrative complaints 14 filed by plaintiffs Trafficante and Carr, under §810.

15 Upon the filing of such complaints with HUD, and 16 pursuant to subsection (c) of §810, representatives of the 17 Department of Housing and Urban Development ("HUD") immediately 18 referred the complaints to the California FEPC. Plaintiffs' 19 complaints were, however, promptly referred back to HUD with-20 out any action being taken thereon for the reason that its 21 staff lacked the resources to deal adequately with the matters 22 asserted therein. See Exhibit A attached hereto, and see also 23 Exhibit 1 to Metropolitan's Brief in Support of Motion to 24

---

25 <sup>6/</sup> As an initial matter it should be noted that §810(d) 26 refers to the "rights and remedies provided in this sub-chapter", 27 which includes not only the relief provided by §810 itself, but 28 also the rights and remedies of §§812 and 814. Thus, the federal 29 rights and remedies to be compared include the right to enjoin a 30 defendant from engaging in discriminatory practices, to order affirmative action as may be appropriate, to appoint attorneys and authorize commencement of proceedings without payment of fees, costs or security, to grant a permanent or temporary injunction and to award damages, punitive damages, court costs and reasonable attorneys fees.

1 Dismiss. Thus, by its explicit refusal to act, the state 2 here has provided a pragmatic, but unimpeachable, refutation 3 to Metropolitan's claimed equivalence.

4 But even apart from the failure of the California 5 FEPC to act in this case, the pertinent statutes on their face 6 reveal vast differences. For example, under §810 of the federal 7 statute an aggrieved party may file a complaint with HUD respect-8 ing discriminatory housing practices occurring within the past 9 180 days (and compare also §812). By contrast, the Rumford 10 Act's limitations period is but a third of that. Health & 11 Safety Code §35731. It should be noted, moreover, that in the 12 single case relief upon by Metropolitan in its instant Memorandum 13 (Colon v. Tompkins Square Neighbors, Inc., 289 F.Supp. 104 14 [S.D.N.Y. 1969]) the comparison of the respective limitations 15 periods was considered significant to the court's assessment 16 of remedial equivalence. See also discussion infra at 10-13.

17 Nor are the available remedies substantially 18 comparable. As we have noted above, and in our companion 19 Memorandum in Support of Plaintiffs' Rule 25 Motion (at pp.3-10), 20 Title VIII of the 1968 Civil Rights Act explicitly provides 21 for broad programs of affirmative relief in addition to the 22 available injunctive and monetary damage rights. See, e.g., 23 §810(d) and §812(c). Indeed, in the instant litigation, the 24 claim for affirmative relief is at the very heart of the 25 proceedings. Yet under the California Rumford Act, only 26 limited relief is provided. The FEPC may simply issue a 27 cease and desist order and take one of the following actions:

28 "(1) The sale or rental of the housing 29 accommodation to the aggrieved person, if it is still available.

30 "(2) The sale or rental of a like

1 accommodation, if one is available, or 2 the next vacancy in a like accommodation.

3 "(3) The payment of damages to the ag-4 grievd person in an amount not to exceed 5 Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00), if the 6 Commission determines that neither of 7 the remedies under (1) or (2) is 8 available."
9 Health & Safety Code §35737.

10 Equally significant, §810(d) provides for deferral 11 to a local forum only where the person aggrieved "has a 12 judicial remedy under a state or local fair housing law...." 13 (emphasis added). While counsel for defendant has made an 14 attenuated argument for the existence of such judicial remedies 15 under California law, it is clear that the Rumford Act was in-16 tended to provide only an administrative forum<sup>7/</sup>.

17 Throughout the entire FEPC process, no action is 18 filed in any court, and no judge participates in any manner 19 in the action taken by the FEPC. It is true that actions 20 by the FEPC, as by virtually all state agencies, may be re-21 viewed in accordance with the California Administrative Pro-22 cedure Act, Government Code §11500, et seq., and that after 23 exhaustion of the lengthy administrative process an aggrieved

24 <sup>7/</sup> As Exhibit 1 to its Brief, Metropolitan has appended 25 a letter from HUD which states, in part, "...we have found that 26 the State law provided rights and remedies substantially 27 equivalent to those provided by the Federal law." This 28 determination by HUD for purposes of the administrative 29 provision of subsection (c) (§810[c]) is in no wise perti-30 nent to the very different determinations required to be made under subsection (d) (§810[d]) relative to the availability of a substantially equivalent judicial remedy. We may presume that Congress, by its explicit reference to "judicial remedies" in §810(d), intended that a comparison be made with relief available in state courts, not administrative agencies.
Such conclusion is clearly reasonable since the decision to defer to state administrative action is essentially an administrative allocation of resources, while under subsection (d) the fundamental right of access to the federal courts is at issue.
-----

1 party may seek review of the agency decision through admini-2 strative mandamus under California Government Code §11523 or 3 California Labor Code §1428 (compare Op. Leg. Counsel, 1959 4 S.J. 1272). However, such limited review of administrative 5 action (which simply assesses whether the agency has abused 6 its broad discretion), by means of the extraordinary writ 7 procedure, can hardly be deemed a judicial remedy for dis-8 criminatory housing practices, much less a judicial remedy 9 substantially equivalent to that provided for in Title VIII.
10 Again, compare the New York statute at issue in Colon, supra, 11 which provides for direct judicial remedies in addition to 12 the available review of administrative action. N.Y. Civil 13 Rights Law §18-d(1) and N.Y. Executive Law §§297(4) and 297(9).

14 Finally, as we have noted above, the rights and 15 remedies included under sub-chapter 1 to federal Title VIII 16 permit a court to authorize commencement of an action without 17 payment of fees, costs or security, to appoint an attorney 18 for plaintiffs, to award attorneys' fees to a prevailing 19 plaintiff and to award actual and punitive damages. Such 20 provisions are reflective of the strong public policy favoring 21 civil rights plaintiffs seeking to end racial or related dis-22 criminations. See, e.g., Hutchings v. United States Industries, 23 Inc., 428 F.2d 303, 311 (5th Cir. 1970); Sanchez v. Standard 24 Brands, Inc., 431 F.2d 455, 460-61 (5th Cir. 1970). Moreover, 25 the importance of these federal provisions cannot be gainsaid, 26 especially considering that "civil rights" plaintiffs may 27 often be without substantial resources. Again, however, none 28 of such rights is available under the California statute, 29 with the single exception that actual damages, in an amount 30 not exceeding $500.00, may be awarded.

1 In short, the Rumford Act, salutary though it may 2 be in those cases to which it is applicable (and in those 3 cases where the FEPC is willing to act), simply does not 4 provide rights or remedies remotely resembling the broad, 5 affirmative provisions of Title VIII. Accordingly, juris-6 diction is properly invoked, and should be retained, in 7 this Court.<sup>8/</sup>

8 The sole judicial authority relied upon by Metro-9 politan in support of its jurisdictional claim is the decision 10 of Judge Tenney in Colon v. Tompkins Square Neighbors, Inc., 11 supra, in which the District Court refused to take jurisdic-12 tion over a New York civil rights claim. While plaintiffs 13 in no way controvert the reasoning of the court in Colon, 14 _____

15 8/ While Metropolitan's Brief apparently concedes that 16 there are no other state or local statutes assertedly providing 17 plaintiffs with "substantially equivalent" rights and remedies, 18 it should be noted that California has, in addition to the Rumford 19 Act (considered in text, supra), the Unruh Civil Rights Act 20 (California Civil Code §§51-52) which may be interpreted to cover certain discriminations in housing. Again, however (as Metropolitan evidently concedes), such Act does not provide these plaintiffs with remedies or rights in any way equivalent to those available under Title VIII. This is true for the following reasons, among others:

21 First, plaintiffs have waived any rights they might 22 otherwise have under the Unruh Act simply by virtue of the HUD 23 referral of Trafficante and Carr's administrative complaints to 24 the FEPC, since the Rumford Act explicitly provides that a complainant thereunder waives all rights under the Unruh Act. Cal.
Health & Safety Code §35731.

25 Moreover, unlike the federal law which provides for suits 26 by "persons aggrieved" by acts of housing discrimination, the 27 Unruh Act provides a right of action only for persons actively discriminated against. Crowell v. Isaacs, 235 C.A.2d 755, 757 (1965); compare §810(a) to Title VIII and see also discussion infra at 28-36.

28 Finally, as is true of the Rumford Act we well, the 29 Unruh Act does not provide for broad affirmative relief nor does 30 it grant a right to attorneys' fees or any of the other special rights specified in §812.
-----

1 its decision is simply inapposite here. In fact, fairly con-2 sidered in light of the facts then before the court, Colon 3 supports by implication the position of plaintiffs and plaintiffs 4 in intervention, rather than the defense of Metropolitan.

5 The fundamental distinction between Colon and the 6 instant proceedings is the difference between California's 7 Rumford Act and the New York Civil Rights statutes there 8 at issue. See N.Y. Civil Rights Law §18; N.Y. Executive 9 Law §§290-301. By contrast to the narrow administrative 10 provisions of the Rumford Act, considered in detail above, 11 the New York law at issue in Colon provided judicial rights 12 and remedies which were truly equivalent to the federal rights 13 and remedies under Title VIII.

14 We previously noted that the court in Colon placed 15 special emphasis upon the available statutes of limitations.
16 While the Rumford Act's limitation period is but a third of 17 the 180 days provided under Title VIII, the New York law 18 granted a reference period of a full year, or more than 19 twice that of the comparable federal statute. See 289 F.Supp.
20 at 110. In noting the existence of this extensive limitations 21 period, moreover, the court pointed out that in the event the 22 federal proceedings were dismissed, time still remained for 23 filing a complaint under New York law. By contrast, under 24 the California statute, plaintiffs run the risk that by the 25 time their right to proceed in the federal forum is adjudicated, 26 any rights they might otherwise have had under state law would 27 be forfeited by the simple passage of time. In dicta, the 28 Colon court specifically noted that such a situation should 29 not be permitted to obtain:

30 "This court would clearly be in error

1 if, in its determination to abstain from 2 exercising its jurisdiction over the race 3 claim, it would be committing plaintiffs 4 to an exercise in futility by ordering the 5 pursuit of an empty remedy or a remedy 6 not available to them by virtue of the 7 relevant statute of limitations."

8 289 F.Supp. at 110.

9 Similarly, the broad remedies available under the 10 New York law, as detailed and relied upon by Judge Tenney 11 in Colon, compare poorly, if at all, with the Rumford Act 12 rights above-detailed. In language similar to that found 13 under the federal Title VIII, N.Y. Civil Rights Law §18-d(1) 14 authorizes "equitable remedies including such affirmative 15 relief as may be necessary to undo the effects of [the] 16 violation...." Similarly, the N.Y. Executive Law expressly 17 provides for "affirmative action, including (but not limited 18 to) ... the extension of full, equal and unsegregated 19 accommodations, advantages, facilities and privileges to 20 all persons...." (N.Y. Exec. Law §297[4] [c]) and "such 21 other remedies as may be appropriate...." (N.Y. Exec. Law 22 §297[9]).<sup>9/</sup>

23 <sup>9/</sup> At page 12 of its Brief, Metropolitan asserts, without 24 amplification, that the Trafficante and Carr Complaint has not 25 been timely filed under §810. Such objections appear utterly 26 without substance. First, plaintiffs have alleged discrimination 27 by Metropolitan "...as of the date of the filing of this complaint 28 and for many years prior thereto..." (Complaint at ¶5) and, 29 further, that said discrimination is and will continue unless 30 corrected by this court. To thus suggest that there has been no actionable discrimination within the preceding 180 days as alleged by such complaint as untenable.

It is, of course, true that discrimination at Parkmerced commenced many years ago, but such discrimination, and its effects have continued unabated through and including the 180 days prior to filing the administrative and judicial complaints herein. It is simply no defense to an action to correct unlawful racial exclusions that the practice is a continuing one of ancient, rather than recent, vintage. See, e.g., Cox v.
United States Gypsum Co., 409 F.2d 289 (7th Cir. 1969). [cont'd]

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30

9/ (continued)

Even more curious is Metropolitan's statement that "...it does not appear that this action was commenced within the time prescribed by §810(d)..." (Brief, page 12). As shown by Exhibit B, the complaints here were returned by FEPC to HUD on May 21, 1970. Under §810(d) the resumption of the investigation by HUD commenced the running of a thirty-day period which, in this case, would expire on June 20, 1970. On said date, and for an additional thirty days, plaintiffs had a right to bring suit under §810(d). During the course of that period, at the instance of counsel for plaintiffs, arrangements were made for a meeting between representatives of Metropolitan and plaintiffs. In order that plaintiffs' position before this Court not be prejudiced, Metropolitan agreed to extend for thirty days the time for filing suit by plaintiffs (see Exhibit C), thus extending the July 20, 1970, deadline to August 19, 1970. Plaintiffs filed the instant suit on August 18, 1970.

We submit that the only reason Metropolitan has suggested that the Complaint was not timely filed is to raise a defense directly contrary to the plain language of their stipulation set forth in Exhibit C hereto. Stipulations extending time are binding on the parties, Randon v. Toby, 52 U.S. 493, 13 L.Ed. 784 (1850). The Court should hold Metropolitan to its stipulation here.

-----

II

1 PLAINTIFFS AND PLAINTIFFS IN INTERVENTION 2 ARE ENTITLED TO MAINTAIN AN ACTION DIRECTLY 3 UNDER §812 OF THE 1968 CIVIL RIGHTS ACT.

4 In addition to its claim that this court lacks 5 jurisdiction over the claims raised by plaintiffs Trafficante 6 and Carr under §810, Metropolitan has moved on the same grounds 7 to dismiss the Second Cause of Action by plaintiffs and the 8 initial Cause of plaintiffs in intervention, both of which are 9 maintained under the alternative provisions of §812. Such claim 10 is asserted by Metropolitan notwithstanding the fact that §812 11 does not contain any language analogous to the proviso of §810 12 upon which Metropolitan has based its defense to Trafficante's 13 and Carr's First Cause. As we have noted above, however (see 14 Section I, supra), such claim is simply untenable in view 15 of the unambiguous statutory language, the relevant legislative 16 history and the decided cases, and is at best wishful thinking 17 by defendant.

18 Metropolitan attempts to engraft the language of §810 19 onto the independent provisions of the succeeding §812 by means 20 of the provision of the latter statute permitting the rights 21 granted under Title VIII to "be enforced in appropriate United 22 States district courts." This meager adjective, however, is simply 23 incapable of bearing the burden assigned to it by defendant.

24 As appears on its face, §812 was drafted to provide 25 a wholly-independent means of direct access to the federal 26 courts in cases of unlawful discrimination. Under this section, 27 there is no requirement of administrative action, nor is there 28 any language compelling deference to state procedures or in-29 corporating the reference provision of §810(d). In fact, sub-30 section (a) to §812 explicitly grants to aggrieved parties the

1 choice of proceeding initially in federal or "State or local 2 courts of general jurisdiction."

3 Finding no support for their position 4 in either legislative or jurisdictional interpretations of 5 §812, Metropolitan attempts to make a virtue of such silence.
6 See Brief of Defendant in Support of Motion to Dismiss at 7 5-7. Thus, Metropolitan's brief notes that the Senate 8 "discussion [of §812]...related only to that part of Section 9 812(a) which provides protection for a bona fide purchaser, 10 encumbrancer or tenant and did not relate to the court in 11 which an action under Section 812 could be filed...." From 12 this, Metropolitan infers that it was the "apparent intent 13 of Congress" to incorporate by silence the referral provisions 14 of §810.

15 Such claim is not only unreasonable on its face but 16 ignores specific Congressional comment to the contrary. As 17 Representative Emanuel Celler, Chairman of the House Judiciary 18 Committee, stated both in Committee and on the floor of the 19 House:

20 "In addition to administrative remedies, 21 the bill authorizes immediate civil suits 22 by private person...in any appropriate 23 United States district court or appro-24 priate state or local court of general 25 jurisdiction." Hearings on H.R. Res.
26 1100 Before House Rule Comm. 90th Cong., 27 2d Sess. pt. 1, at 6-7 (1968); and 114 28 Cong. Rec. 9558 (April 10, 1968) [emphasis 29 added]. 10/

30 10/ Defendant's own memorandum further quotes the remarks of Representative Gerald Ford, himself quoting from a study memorandum on the then-proposed 1968 Act, as follows:
-----

1           The reported cases are equally unhelpful to defendant.
2       Again attempting to make a virtue of omission, Metropolitan 3       suggests that since the district court in Colon failed to 4       "[suggest] that Section 812 did permit the filing of the 5       action in a United States District Court", it must have in-6       terpreted §812 in accord with the claim of defendant here.
7       Such argument, however, is hard to credit, and such task is 8       made even more difficult by defendant's failure to discuss 9       or even cite this Court to the decision of Brown v. Lo Duca, 10      307 F.Supp. 102 (E.D. Wis. 1969) where the very issue at bar 11      was presented. There, in the course of its opinion, the 12      court explicitly considered whether §810 and §812 provided 13      independent remedies for discrimination. It concluded as 14      follows:

15                    "When one compares §§ 3610 and 3612
16                    [§§ 810 and 812 of the Civil Rights Act 17                    of 1968], it is noted that both sections 18                    have provisions dealing with time, venue, 19                    amount of controversy, and the type of 20                    relief available. If § 3612 had been 21                    intended simply as an adjunct to § 3610, 22                    such repetition would have been unneces-23                    sary. Further, § 3610 requires a complaint 24                    to be filed with the Secretary within 180 25                    days after the alleged violation occurred.
26                    Section 3612 requires a civil action be 27                    brought within the same time limit--180 28                    days. The civil action in § 3612 could 29                    not refer to an action brought only after

30                    10/ (continued)

31                    "Section 812 states what is apparently an al-32                    ternative to the conciliation-then-litigation approach 33                    above stated: an aggrieved person within 180 days 34                    after the alleged discriminatory practice occurred, 35                    may, without complaining to HUD, file an action in the 36                    appropriate U. S. district court."

37       Far from being helpful to Metropolitan, however, such remarks 38       affirmatively support the position of plaintiffs and plaintiffs 39       in intervention here.
40

1 pursuing an administrative remedy of 2 § 3610 because no time has been pro-3 vided for the agency to act. A further 4 example of alternative remedies being 5 provided by the two sections is that 6 § 3610(f) refers to actions 'pursuant 7 to this section or section 3612' (em-8 phasis added). And again, § 3612(a) 9 refers to actions 'brought pursuant 10 to this section or section 3610(d)' 11 (emphasis added). The use of the 12 disjunctive clearly indicates an 13 alternative. These indications 14 within the statute compel a con-15 clusion that § 3612 provides an 16 alternative remedy." Id at 103, 17 104.

18 In Brown, the court not only rejected the defense raised 19 by Metropolitan here but did so after an exhaustive analysis of 20 the legislative history surrounding the Act. See 307 F.Supp.
21 at 104-5. The court noted that when the measure was before 22 Congress, both its supporters and opponents interpreted §812 23 as providing an independent and alternative remedy for housing 24 discrimination.

25 What is more, the existence of an independent right 26 of action under §812 was explicitly recognized in dicta by Mr.
27 Justice Harlan dissenting in Sullivan v. Little Hunting Park, 28 396 U.S. 229, 249 (1969) where he observed that "as an alterna-29 tive to going first to HUD, it appears that a person may go 30 directly to court [under §812] to enforce his rights under the Fair Housing Law....". See also Note, "Discrimination in Employment and in Housing: Private Enforcement Provisions of the Civil Rights Acts of 1964 and 1968", 82 HARV L REV 834, 839, 855-59, 862-63 (1969), and Davidson and Turner, "Fair Housing and Federal Law: Where Are We?", ABA (Civil Rights Section) 1 HUMAN RIGHTS 36, 41-43 (1970).

In short, there is no basis whatever for the suggested notion that the jurisdictional limits of §810 limit §812 by

1 osmosis. Likewise, the further suggestion that the administra-2 tive remedies of §810 must first be pursued is mere chimera and 3 is, in fact, inconsistent with defendant's own contention that 4 §810 and §812 provide mutually exclusive remedies.

5 Thus, both plaintiffs and plaintiffs in intervention 6 properly maintain actions before this court under §812:

7 A. Plaintiffs Trafficante and Carr.

8 Unlike the intervenors, individual plaintiffs 9 Trafficante and Carr, have brought claims under both §§810 10 and 812 of the Act. Metropolitan asserts, however, that since 11 plaintiffs have proceeded under §810 "they are bound by the pro-12 visions of §810" and may not proceed under §812. Yet, as we 13 have above demonstrated, it is in no wise consistent with the 14 statutory scheme of Title VIII to impose such an awkward inter-15 pretation upon its language. Moreover, there are numerous 16 reasons which favor not only the existence of alternative 17 remedies under §§810 and 812 but which argue for the right 18 of plaintiffs to maintain proceedings under both sections.

19 In the first instance, it is clear that action taken 20 under §812 can in no way undermine or disrupt the administrative 21 procedures of §810, since §812 contains an explicit proviso to 22 the effect that "the court shall continue [any] civil case 23 brought pursuant to this section or Section 3610(d)...before 24 bringing it to trial if the court believes that the conciliation 25 efforts of the Secretary or a State or local agency are likely 26 to result in satisfactory settlement of the discriminatory 27 housing practices complained of in the complaint made to the 28 Secretary or to the local or State agency and which practice 29 forms the basis for the action in court...." (42 U.S.C.
30 §3612[a]).

1           Moreover, in view of the statute's express concern 2 for expedition under §814, it is hardly conceivable that mutual 3 exclusion could have been intended. A person filing a complaint 4 under §810 will desire that the appropriate administrative 5 agency act promptly to resolve his complaint. However, such 6 is not always the case, as the history of the Trafficante and 7 Carr administrative claims in these proceedings demonstrates.
8 Initially, when reference of such claims was made to the 9 California FEPC (as above discussed), the State agency re-10 fused to act because of "overload of work and staff shortages." 11 See Exhibit 1 to Metropolitan's Brief in Support of Motion to 12 Dismiss. Moreover, as of November 5, the federal investigation 13 by HUD had not been completed due to "the acute manpower shortage 14 and the overwhelming case load" at HUD's local office. (Compare 15 Exhibit D hereto) In such circumstances (which would appear to 16 represent the rule rather than the exception in such cases), 17 it would be a harsh remedy indeed which would bind such plain-18 tiffs irrevocably to their initial selection of §810. 11/

19 20 11/           It should also be pointed out that the interpretation 21 of the Act asserted by plaintiffs is apparently concurred in by 22 the relevant administrative agency, HUD. As frequently noted, 23 moreover, such interpretations are entitled to great weight by 24 the courts. Cf. United States v. Trucking Associations, Inc., 310 U.S. 534 (1940); Skidmore v. Swift, 323 U.S. 134, 137 (1944).
International Chemical Workers Union v. Planters Mfg. Co., 259
F. Supp. 365, 366-7 (N.D. Miss. 1966).

25           In a letter from HUD dated May 22, 1970, a copy of 26 which is attached hereto as Exhibit A, plaintiffs were advised as follows:

27           "You should know that if your case is recalled [from 28 the state agency] and we do not take action as a 29 result of the investigation or satisfactorily achieve 30 a resolution of the complaint within thirty days after the date of recall, you will have the right under Section 810 of the law, to take your case to court at any time within thirty days thereafter. If you feel that your situation demands immediate court relief, you

1 Finally, §812 grants plaintiffs rights which have 2 no correlative under the language of §810. Under the former 3 provision, attorneys may be appointed for plaintiffs and the 4 court may authorize commencement of proceedings without pay-5 ment of fees, cost or security. The relief available under 6 §812(c) includes injunctions plus special and punitive damages 7 and an award of costs and a reasonable attorneys fee. Contrast 8 §810(d). To hold that a party waives these rights by seeking 9 administrative relief would conflict with the policy favoring 10 the use of administrative procedures.

11 B. Plaintiffs in Intervention.

12 Plaintiffs firmly assert that this Court has un-13 deniable jurisdiction of the claims of all parties under §812.
14 However, and in any event, the plaintiffs in intervention, 15 who did not proceed initially through the administrative 16 route of §810, are properly before this Court under §812.
17 Metropolitan does not even apparently urge the contrary.

18 In its brief supporting the instant Motion to Dismiss, 19 which was filed initially in opposition to the claims of 20 Trafficante and Carr alone, Metropolitan argued as follows:
21 "Notwithstanding the interpretation to be given Section 812, 22 the plaintiffs elected to seek the assistance of the Secretary 23 of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and having 24 _____

25 11/ (continued)

26 may wish to consult an attorney to determine whether 27 you should seek such relief under Section 812 of the 28 law or under the Civil Rights Act of 1866 as inter-29 preted by the Supreme Court in the case of Jones 30 v. Mayer." (emphasis added)

1 done so they are bound by the provisions of Section 810.

2 (Brief of defendant at 7: 11-15; emphasis added). Or, as 3 noted subsequently: "The plaintiffs having availed themselves 4 of the remedy set forth in Section 810 must follow the mandates 5 of that section." (Brief of Defendant at 7: 23-24). Such 6 allegations, however, can have no conceivable force as to 7 the plaintiffs in intervention who admittedly have not "elected 8 to seek" or "availed themselves of" the administrative remedies 9 of §810, but have proceeded directly under the alternative 10 remedy of §812. Compare remarks of Representative Gerald 11 Ford quoted by defendant's brief at page 7, and also set 12 forth above in footnote 10.

13 Defendant's sole response to the complaint in inter-14 vention is a partial incorporation of its earlier Memorandum 15 (see Brief of Defendant in Support of Motion to Dismiss Complaint 16 in Intervention at 1: 25-30.), and we can only assume that even 17 defendant concedes the anachronism of its assertions when ap-18 plied to the Committee and other plaintiffs in intervention.
19 These parties, having elected to follow the direct access pro-20 visions of §812 are clearly within the proper jurisdiction of 21 this Court and are entitled to go forward with their action 22 notwithstanding the disposition made of the analogous claims 23 of plaintiffs, Trafficante and Carr.

III.

1 PLAINTIFFS' ACTION UNDER THE 1866
2 CIVIL RIGHTS ACT (42 U.S.C. §1982) 3 IS IN NO WAY BARRED OR LIMITED BY 4 ENACTMENT OF TITLE VIII OF THE CIVIL 5 RIGHTS ACT OF 1968 OR BY ANY ACTS 6 OF PLAINTIFFS UNDER SAID ACT.

7 In addition to their claims under Title VIII 8 of the 1968 Civil Rights Act, both plaintiffs and plaintiffs 9 in intervention have filed independent causes under 42 10 U.S.C. §1982,<sup>12/</sup> the 1866 Civil Rights Act "revitalized" 11 by the Supreme Court in Jones v. Alfred H. Mayer Co., 12 supra. In view of the recent clear pronouncements by the 13 Supreme Court concerning the availability and scope of 14 relief permitted under the 1866 statute, we would have 15 thought the right of plaintiffs to so proceed well settled.
16 Metropolitan apparently disagrees. Its disagreement, how-17 ever (which is set forth at pages 8-9 of its Brief in 18 Support of Motion to Dismiss) is based upon a significant 19 misinterpretation of the pertinent authorities and is with-20 out substantial merit.

21 In Jones v. Mayer, supra, which is the leading 22 case under §1982, the Court had specific occasion to con-23 sider the relationship between §1982 and the then-recent 24 passage of Title VIII. After considering at length the 25 statutory history of both §1982 and the 1968 Civil Rights

26 12/ 42 U.S.C. §1982 provides:

27 "All citizens of the United States 28 shall have the same right, in every 29 State and Territory, as is enjoyed by 30 white citizens thereof to inherit, purchase, lease, sell, hold, and convey real and personal property."

1 Act, the Supreme Court held categorically that enactment 2 of the fair housing provisions in 1968 "had no effect upon 3 §1982." (392 U.S. at 416-17). More, the Court further 4 noted that "at oral argument, the Attorney General [who 5 appeared as amicus curiae at the special request of the 6 Court] expressed the view that, if Congress should enact 7 the pending bill [the 1968 Fair Housing Act], §1982 would 8 not be affected in any way but 'would stand independently.'
9 That is, of course, correct." (392 U.S. at 417, Fn. 20; 10 emphasis added). Thus -- though it in no wise appears 11 from defendant's memorandum -- the exact contention raised 12 by Metropolitan here was considered and rejected in Jones.

13 Rather, Metropolitan lifts from context Mr.
14 Justice Stewart's appropriate comment that "it would 15 be a serious mistake to suppose that §1982 in any way 16 diminishes the significance of the [Fair Housing Act of 17 1968] recently enacted by Congress." (392 U.S. at 415, 18 quoted in defendant's memorandum at page 8). Plaintiffs 19 emphatically concur in Mr. Justice Stewart's statement, 20 and with the holding of the Court in Jones. Section 1982 21 does not diminish the force and scope of the 1968 Civil 22 Rights Act and, as the Jones Court held, the existence 23 of the 1968 Civil Rights Act does not affect §1982.

24 The conclusions reached in Jones have been sub-25 sequently affirmed both by the Supreme Court and by lower 26 federal courts. Indeed, we are aware of no authority 27 to the contrary and none is cited by defendant.

28 In the year following its decision in Jones, 29 the Supreme Court again considered both the applicability 30 of §1982 to asserted housing discrimination, and 1 its relationship to recent Civil Rights legislation.

2 Such decision reaffirmed the availability of §1982 as 3 an alternative remedy to those granted by such Civil Rights 4 statutes. See Sullivan v. Little Hunting Park, 396 U.S.
5 230 (1969) and compare Hunter v. Erickson, 393 U.S. 385 6 (1969).<sup>13/</sup>

7 To similar effect, in Sanders v. Dobbs House, 8 Inc., 431 F.2d 1097 . 2 F.E.P. Cases 942 (5th Cir.
9 [August 28] 1970), the Fifth Circuit held that §1982 was 10 not inconsistent with the provisions of Title VII to the 11 1964 Civil Rights Act, and, thus the fact that plaintiff 12 had previously filed an administrative complaint with the 13 EEOC did not oust the court of jurisdiction under §1982.
14 Moreover, in Bush v. Kaim, 297 F.Supp. 151 (N.D. Ohio 15 1969), a housing discrimination suit under §1982, the 16 district court again considered the point raised here by 17 Metropolitan in light of the Supreme Court's earlier 18
19

20 <sup>13/</sup> Metropolitan's brief again attempts to find support 21 for its position in dicta from the Court's opinion 22 in Hunter. See Brief of Defendant in Support of Motion 23 to Dismiss at 8-9. Such support, however, is not fairly 24 inferable. At issue in Hunter was the validity of a 25 city charter amendment which effectively repealed a local 26 fair housing ordinance of Akron, Ohio. When plaintiff 27 brought mandamus in the state courts to compel the City 28 to administer the local fair housing ordinance, the defend-29 ant (City of Akron) claimed that the case was rendered 30 moot by passage of the 1968 Civil Rights Act and the decision in Jones v. Mayer interpreting §1982, since the federal laws allegedly preempted local legislation. In response to such contention, the Court, speaking through Mr. Justice White, noted that the federal legislation was not intended to preempt local housing ordinances and should not be so construed. It in no way suggested that actions under 1982 should be deferred in favor of local law or the 1968 Civil Rights Act (see Jones v. Mayer, supra), a point which is further underscored by its subsequent holding in Sullivan v. Little Hunting Park, supra, permitting direct action under §1982 notwithstanding the existence of the Public Accommodations provisions of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

1 decision in Jones. It noted:

2 "As the Supreme Court determined, 3 however, these acts [§1982 and Title
4 VIII of the 1968 Civil Rights Act]
5 have independent significance and the 6 exemptions in the 1968 act are not 7 applicable to litigation under the 8 1866 act." (297 F.Supp. at 151).

9 As the foregoing authorities make clear, the co-10 existence of the alternative procedures invoked by plaintiffs 11 and plaintiffs in intervention here is well established.
12 Thus, apart from any limitations attaching to the proceed-13 ings brought under Title VIII, the parties plaintiff are 14 fully entitled to seek relief under the guaranties of 15 equal opportunity clearly established by §1982.
16
17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30

IV.

PLAINTIFFS ARE PROPER PARTIES IN THESE PROCEEDINGS AND HAVE STANDING TO CHALLENGE METROPOLITAN'S DISCRIMINATORY HOUSING PRACTICES

Defendant asserts that these plaintiffs and intervening plaintiffs -- both individuals and the Committee -- have no right to challenge Metropolitan's discriminatory housing practices.<sup>14/</sup> Yet, again, defendant's argument -- which literally cites no authority beyond counsel's interpretation of the law -- is fatally at odds with the numerous decisions which have broadly construed the rights of private parties to seek redress of unlawful activities bringing injury to themselves and to others similarly situated. Defendant's contentions should, accordingly, be rejected.

A. The Concept of Standing.

The concept of standing in American jurisprudence reflects the fact that our judicial system is limited to "cases and controversies" of an existing nature. As a complementary notion, "standing" requires that parties to any such case or controversy have a connection, or nexus, with the subject thereof sufficient to assure vigorous advocacy. This latter notion is particularly significant since it is fundamental that decided <sup>14/</sup> Metropolitan's Memorandum alternately styles plaintiffs as "well intentioned," "misinformed" or simply "volunteers" (Brief of Defendants in Support of Motion to Dismiss at 11-12). Such characterizations are strangely reminiscent of the words of Metropolitan's former Board Chairman and President Frederick H. Ecker some years earlier:

"A conflict has now arisen which has seriously retarded further slum clearance. The conflict arises out of the belief of certain well-meaning organizations and individuals that social objectives can be obtained by writing those objectives into law, rather than awaiting the slower processes of education..." Affidavit of Frederick H. Ecker, submitted in Dorsey v. Stuyvesant Town, supra, as reported in Simon, Ibid, at pages 60-61.

1 cases take on significance, as precedent, far beyond the immedi-2 ate interests of the parties then before the Court.

3 What the recent cases make clear, however, is that while 4 standing constitutes a valid "entrance requirement" it was not 5 intended as a barricade against maintenance of important liti-6 gation by persons vitally interested therein. Thus, far from 7 being decisive, Metropolitan's treatment of this issue is, we 8 respectfully submit, both doctrinaire and completely inconsistent 9 with prevailing judicial authority.

10 Any current discussion of standing under federal law 11 must commence with the Supreme Court's recent decision in Flast v.
12 Cohen, 392 U.S. 83 (1968). There, the Court took the opportunity 13 of a taxpayer's suit challenging the constitutionality of federal 14 aid to parochial schools to reconsider the concept of standing 15 on a broad scale. After pointing out that the issue of standing 16 was entirely independent of the problem of "justiciability" on 17 the merits, the Court stated that the gist of the inquiry into 18 standing was simply a determination of "a nexus between the status 19 asserted by the litigant and the claim he presents." (392 U.S.
20 at 102). Such inquiry, the Court further made clear, is a narrow 21 one, since "the question of standing is related only to whether 22 the dispute sought to be adjudicated will be presented in an ad-23 versary context and in a form historically viewed as capable of 24 judicial resolution." 392 U.S. at 101 [emphasis added]. Compare 25 also, e.g., Association of Data Processing Service Organizations, 26 Inc. v. Camp, 397 U.S. 150 (1970) and Barlow v. Collins, 397 U.S.
27 159 (1970).

28 Tested by Flast's standard of adversity, there can be 29 no question of the standing of these plaintiffs. Indeed, counsel 30 for Metropolitan does not suggest any lack of adversity. The

1 present plaintiffs -- both black and white -- encounter daily the 2 effects of Metropolitan's discriminatory housing practices. In 3 terms of the matters here at issue, plaintiffs are, and will re-4 main, firmly adverse to Metropolitan until the racial discrimina-5 tion (and the effects thereof) now existing at Parkmerced are 6 remedied by affirmative action. Metropolitan's characterizations 7 to the contrary notwithstanding, plaintiffs are not "unrelated to 8 the landlord." They are his tenants and are subjected day by day 9 to the effects of landlord's unlawful practices. See also dis-10 cussion infra at 44-48.

11 But plaintiffs need not rely upon general references to 12 "adversity" or "nexus," for decisions both preceding and following 13 Flast have established beyond dispute that these plaintiffs are 14 properly before the court in a suit challenging Metropolitan's 15 rental practices at Parkmerced. We turn to a consideration of 16 such decisions, first in the context of plaintiffs as "persons 17 aggrieved" and, thereafter, with relation to notions of standing 18 in the context of alleged racial discrimination. Following such 19 discussion, we take up the precise injuries asserted by plaintiffs 20 here.

21 B. "Persons Aggrieved."

22 Although citing no authority, Metropolitan's opposi-23 tion to the standing of plaintiffs is essentially a claim 24 that -- as tenants at Parkmerced -- they have not been aggrieved 25 by any discrimination practiced by Metropolitan. In the words 26 of defendant's Memorandum: "It is obvious that [no] plaintiff 27 is a 'person aggrieved' within the contemplation of Section 28 810(a) of the Act." (Brief at 10). This is true, it is 29 further alleged, because no "plaintiff has been the victim 30

1 of any discriminatory housing practice..."<sup>15</sup>

2 Although defendant has failed to discuss, or even cite, 3 any of the pertinent authority, the question of who are "persons 4 aggrieved" in the standing context has received considerable 5 judicial attention in recent years. Taken as a whole, such cases 6 not only support the right of the present plaintiffs to maintain 7 the instant suit, but make clear that they are the very parties 8 encouraged to vindicate the expressed public policy<sup>16</sup> favoring 9 elimination of racial discrimination.

10 Whether one is a "person aggrieved" in any litigation, 11 of course, demands a determination that such person have an "inter-12 est" in the litigation, and its outcome. Compare discussion of 13

14 <sup>15/</sup> Metropolitan's claim that plaintiffs lack standing 15 is brought under Federal Rule 12(b) (6) on the ground that "the 16 complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be 17 granted." As such, it is well established that the motion 18 admits (for present purposes) the truth of all facts well 19 pleaded by plaintiffs. Dodd v. Spokane County, 393 F.2d 330 20 (9th Cir. 1968); Brown v. Brown, 368 F.2d 992 (9th Cir. 1966)
21 and compare 2A Moore, FEDERAL PRACTICE 2266-67. These admis-22 sions include the allegations of injury, both economic and 23 non-economic, which plaintiffs claim to have suffered as a 24 result of Metropolitan's discriminatory practices at Parkmerced.
25 See Complaint and Complaint in Intervention at paragraph 8 and 26 see also subsection "D," post.

27 Although defendant's Memorandum does not deal directly 28 with any of these asserted injuries, it attempts to dismiss them 29 generally with the statement (again citing no authority) that 30 "the injuries allegedly suffered by plaintiffs ... are not injuries 31 cognizable by the Act." This peremptory dismissal is discussed 32 in light of the decided cases hereafter (see infra at pages 30-36).

33 The initial section of the 1968 Fair Housing Act 34 declares:

35 "It is the policy of the United States 36 to provide, within constitutional limitations, 37 for fair housing throughout the United States."
38 (42 U.S.C. §3601).

1 Flast v. Cohen, supra. This does not mean, however, that a plain-2 tiff must be prepared to assert "a personal economic interest."
3 Scenic Hudson Preservation Conf. v. F.P.C., 354 F.2d 608, 615
4 (1965). Thus, in Scenic Hudson, supra, the Second Circuit unan-5 imously held that plaintiff, "an unincorporated association con-6 sisting of a number of non-profit conservationist organizations," 7 was a "person aggrieved" by the decision of the Federal Power 8 Commission to permit construction of a hydro-electric facility 9 in New York State. There, the F.P.C. had argued that plaintiff 10 lacked standing since it "[made] no claim of any personal economic 11 injury resulting from the Commission's action." (354 F.2d at 615; 12 compare Metropolitan's Brief in Support of Motion to Dismiss at 13 page 11.) However, such contention was explicitly rejected, the 14 court noting that not only had prior cases gone far beyond the 15 narrow concept of economic detriment, but that the statute in 16 question (the Federal Power Act) was concerned with interests 17 "non-economic as well as economic." Refusing to apply a wooden 18 formula to the question of standing, the Second Circuit ruled 19 that the interest required was simply a matter of demonstrated 20 concern: "In order to insure that the Federal Power Commission 21 will adequately protect the public interest in the aesthetic, con-22 servational, and recreational aspects of power development, those 23 who by their activities and conduct have exhibited a special 24 interest in such areas, must be held to be included in the class 25 of 'aggrieved' parties under §313(b)."<sup>17/</sup>

26
27 <sup>17/</sup> It is significant to note, moreover, that in so holding, 28 the court placed particular reliance upon the earlier decision of 29 the Ninth Circuit in State of Washington Department of Game v.
30 F.P.C., 207 F.2d 391 (9th Cir. 1953), cert. denied, 347 U.S. 936 (1954) in which a non-profit organization of Washington residents was held to have standing to oppose construction of a dam which threatened to destroy local fishing. The Ninth Circuit there held

1 In a case decided three months later, the Court of 2 Appeals for the District of Columbia applied similar reasoning 3 to a "listener's" challenge to proposed F.C.C. renewal of a radio 4 broadcast license. Office of Communication of the United Church 5 of Christ v. F.C.C., 359 F.2d 994 (D.C. Cir. 1966). This decision 6 (which, along with Scenic Hudson has been cited favorably by the 7 Supreme Court in several recent cases including Data Processing 8 Service v. Camp, supra) again rejected "rigid adherence to a re-9 quirement of direct economic injury...." in assessing standing.
10 (359 F.2d at 1002).

11 Anticipating the reasoning of the Supreme Court in Flast 12 v. Cohen, the court, in an opinion by Judge (now Chief Justice) 13 Burger, noted that "the concept of standing is a practical and 14 functional one designed to insure that only those with a genuine 15 and legitimate interest can participate." Thus, it held that 16 "listeners" to a radio station which assertedly broadcast racially-17 biased matter were "persons aggrieved" by a proposed F.C.C. renewal 18 of the station's broadcast license and, therefore, had standing to 19 complain of such action.

20 Cases decided subsequently have reaffirmed and, indeed, 21 strengthened the rationale and application of Scenic Hudson and 22 Office of Communication. As well summarized by the District Court 23 for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania in Powelton Civic Home-24 owners' Association v. Department of Housing & Urban Development, 25 284 F.Supp. 809 (E.D. Pa. 1968), "neither economic injury nor a 26 specific, individual legal right are necessary adjuncts to standing.

27 _____
28 17/ (continued) that these organizations, along with various 29 governmental agencies, were "'parties aggrieved' since they 30 [claimed] that the Cowlitz Project will destroy fish which they, among others, are interested in protecting." Cf. Sierra Club
v. Hickel, ___ F.2d ___ (9th Cir. 1970).

1 A plaintiff need only demonstrate that he is an appropriate person 2 to question [an] alleged failure to protect the value specifically 3 recognized as 'in the public interest'." In that case, residents 4 of a proposed urban renewal area were held to have standing to 5 challenge determinations by the Department of Housing and Urban 6 Development as "appropriate representatives of legal rights con-7 ferred by the Housing Act on the general public." See also, e.g., 8 Shannon v. Department of Housing & Urban Development, 305 F.Supp.
9 205 (E.D. Pa. 1969) (white and black residents of urban renewal 10 area who were not required to move held to have standing to chal-11 lenge renewal plan as "persons aggrieved" in light of their 12 demonstrated interest "in the national goal of 'well-planned inte-13 grated residential neighborhoods'."); Road Review League v. Boyd, 14 270 F.Supp. 650 (S.D. N.Y. 1967); Citizens Committee for the Hudson 15 Valley v. Volpe, 425 F.2d 97 (2nd Cir. 1970); Nashville I-40 16 Steering Committee v. Ellington, 387 F.2d 179 (6th Cir. 1967) 17 (negro and white businessmen had standing to challenge proposed 18 route of interstate highway on the ground that "the highway seg-19 ment and plan will cause substantial damage to the North Nashville 20 community, by erecting a physical barrier between this predominantly 21 Negro area and other parts of Nashville." [387 F.2d at 181])<sup>18/</sup>

22 Closely related to the above cases are those decisions 23 which -- although not focusing precisely on who are "persons ag-24 grieved" -- have considered in detail the interests and injuries 25 sufficient to confer standing. Particularly pertinent is the de-26 cision of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania in Shannon v. HUD, 27

28 18/ That plaintiffs are "persons aggrieved" under the Fair 29 Housing Act of 1968 is further emphasized by a letter of November 30 5, 1970, from Clifton R. Jeffers, Assistant Regional Administrator of HUD (a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit "D"). In such letter, Mr. Jeffers noted as follows:

1 supra. There, "white and black residents, businessmen and repre-
2 sentatives of private civic organizations" in the Philadelphia 3 urban renewal area challenged continuation of a federal urban 4 renewal plan although their property was not directly to be taken.
5 Defendants -- like Metropolitan here -- urged that, having suf-6 fered no direct injury as a result of the renewal project, plain-7 tiffs were without standing to challenge its continuation. The 8 court, however, disagreed, noting that although "the impact of the 9 renewal project is less direct upon the present plaintiffs who are 10 not required to move, than upon those displaced, it cannot be gain-11 said that the future impact of this plan more directly affects 12 them." (305 F.Supp. at 209; emphasis added). More, the court 13 pointed out that plaintiffs, as continuing residents of the re-14 development area, would be those persons whose "living environment" 15 would be most directly affected by the plan or any changes in it.<sup>19/</sup>

16 17 <sup>19/</sup> (continued) "As previously discussed with you it is the 18 determination of this office that the complainants 19 [i.e., Trafficante and Carr] are aggrieved persons and as such are within the jurisdiction of Title
VIII of the 1968 Civil Rights Act."

20 As we have previously noted, moreover, such administrative inter-21 pretations are entitled to great weight by the courts in con-22 struing the provisions of a federal statute. See cases cited at Footnote 11, supra.

23 <sup>19/</sup> As further support for its holding, the court in Shannon 24 considered whether, apart from the persons then before the court, 25 it was likely that anyone would come forward to assert the claims 26 raised by the plaintiff: "in determining whether these plaintiffs have the requisite directness of injury, the likelihood that plaintiffs would be adequately protected by the persons more directly affected is a relevant consideration."

27 This notion is a recurring one in the area of standing, 28 particularly with respect to claims involving minority persons.
29 See, e.g., Office of Communication of the United Church of Christ 30 v. F.C.C., supra at 1004; Norwalk Core v. Norwalk Redevelopment Agency, 395 F.2d 920, 937 (2nd Cir. 1968); N.A.A.C.P. v. Alabama Ex Rei Patterson, 357 U.S. 449, 458-460 (1958). Compare also Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee v. McGrath, 341 U.S. 123, 154
(1951) and Barrows v. Jackson, 346 U.S. 249 (1953) (discussed infra)

1           The pertinence of Shannon's analysis cannot be disputed.
2       The court's recognition that persons may be "more directly" af-3       fected by being forced to remain in an area from which others 4       have been wrongfully excluded is directly pertinent, if not con-5       trolling, here, as is the court's explicit focus upon the plain-6       tiffs' vital interest in the nature of their "living environment." 7       In short, Shannon emphasizes that standing is a concept broad 8       enough to encompass a great variety of concerns and to permit 9       demonstrably interested persons and groups access to the courts.<sup>20</sup> 10      See also, e.g., Norwalk Core v. Norwalk Redevelopment Agency, supra; 11      Powelton Civic Homeowners' Association v. HUD, supra; Nashville 12      I-40 Steering Committee v. Ellington, supra; Western Addition 13      Community Organization v. Weaver, 294 F.Supp. 433 (N.D. Cal. 1968); 14      Arrington v. City of Fairfield, Alabama, 314 F.2d 687 (5th Cir.
15      1969); Allen v. Hickel, 424 F.2d 944 (D.C. Cir. 1970); Roe v. Wade,

16 17      <sup>19/</sup> (continued) Cases such as these, which explicitly uphold the 18      role of such "indirectly" injured persons as plaintiff-litigants, 19      contradict Metropolitan's comment upon the supposed "irony" of 20      tenants at Parkmerced being responsible for institution of the 21      instant proceedings. See defendant's Brief at 13. In view of 22      the size of Metropolitan and its sophisticated methods of dis-23      crimination, it is not surprising that minority applicants have 24      never challenged Metropolitan's policies at Parkmerced except on 25      an individual basis, nor is it likely that such a suit will be 26      brought in the future. In fact, the thousands of potential appli-27      cants who choose never to apply because of the notoriety of 28      Metropolitan's practices would never bring suit to change those 29      practices. Only residents, who daily witness both the effects of 30      and the procedures utilized by Metropolitan in its discrimination, 31      are likely to bring an action effectively challenging its discrim-32      inatory practices.

33      <sup>20/</sup> Even beyond Shannon's recognition of plaintiffs' proper 34      concern for the quality of their "living environment," the Ninth 35      Circuit has recently recognized an apparent right to an "integrated 36      environment" (SASSO v. Union City, ___ F.2d ___ (9th Cir. 1970). To 37      the extent that such right is appropriately recognized, there can, 38      of course, be no dispute over the right of the instant plaintiffs 39      to complain of the vast racial imbalance at Parkmerced. Indeed, 40      it is hard to conceive of any persons more directly affected by 41      the lack of an "integrated environment" in that community.

21 /

1 314 F.Supp. 1217 (N.D. Tex. 1970).

2 Before turning to a consideration of "standing" in the 3 context of civil rights litigation and racial discrimination, two 4 final points should be made. First, even apart from the con-5 siderations discussed above, numerous cases have ruled that organ-6 izations or associations analogous to the plaintiff "Committee" in 7 these proceedings are to be accorded especially favorable status 8 in assessing standing. To this point, as we have noted above, it 9 has been held that "those who by their activities and conduct have 10 exhibited a special interest" in the problem then before the court 11 are entitled to special consideration. Scenic Hudson, supra at 12 616. Powelton Civic Homeowners' Association, supra at 826; 13 Citizens Committee for the Hudson Valley v. Volpe, supra; Road 14 Review League v. Boyd, supra at 660. And, as the District of 15 Columbia Circuit Court has recently pointed out: "the courts have 16 come increasingly to recognize the standing of associations to raise 17 in some circumstances the rights of their members." United 18 Federation of Postal Clerks v. Watson, 409 F.2d 462, 469 (D.C. Cir.
19 1969), and cases there cited. See also, e.g., Citizens to Preserve 20 Overton Park, Inc. v. Volpe, 309 F.Supp. 1189 (W.D. Tenn. 1970); 21 Chappell v. Olin-Mathieson Chemical Corp., 305 F.Supp. 544 (D. Tenn.
22 1969); Arrington v. City of Fairfield, Alabama, supra at 592.

23 Finally, several courts have recognized that insofar as 24 plaintiffs represent an expressed public interest (as here, under 25 Title VIII of the 1968 Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. §3601, et seq), 26

27 21 / Although treating the question in relation to the term 28 "persons aggrieved" the Second Circuit's decision in Scenic 29 Hudson, supra, is also frequently cited for its recognition of 30 the relevance of "the aesthetic, conservational, and recreational" interests of plaintiffs in assessing standing. Compare also Association of Data Processing Services v. Camp, supra.

1 they stand in the role of private attorneys general, discharging 2 a particularly beneficial function through the judicial process.
3 See, e.g., Office of Communication of United Church of Christ v.
4 F.C.C., supra at 1003-1004. Whether this concept is in fact simply 5 interchangeable with Scenic Hudson's "demonstrated interest" test 6 is not clear, nor is it significant in the instant case since 7 application of both standards unquestionably support the standing 8 of the present plaintiffs. Compare South Hill Neighborhood 9 Association, Inc. v. Romney, 421 F.2d 454 (6th Cir. 1969).

10 The foregoing authorities leave little room to doubt 11 plaintiffs' standing to maintain the instant action against 12 Metropolitan. The rationale of the decided cases make clear that 13 standing does not constitute an artificial barrier to the main-14 tenance of significant actions especially where -- as here -- 15 important national policies are involved. These conclusions are 16 further emphasized by a consideration of standing in the particular 17 context of civil rights proceedings.

1 C. Standing in the Civil Rights Context.

2 The cases and principles above cited make clear the 3 standing of plaintiffs before this Court. But even more is 4 such standing emphasized by those decisions which have broadly 5 interpreted the range of persons who may permissibly challenge 6 deprivations of fundamental civil rights. Such authorities 7 make clear -- particularly in light of the importance of 8 remedying our sorry history of racial discrimination -- that 9 the concept of standing is to be accorded a flexible and 10 expansive interpretation in order to uphold the vital national 11 interests asserted in such cases.<sup>22/</sup> As the court noted in 12 Marable v. Alabama Mental Health Board, 297 F.Supp. 291 (N.D.
13 Ala. 1969): "Particularly in ... civil rights cases, when a 14 plaintiff with an interest genuinely adverse to the [defendant] 15 sued is before the court, the standing doctrine will not be 16 used to delay still longer the operation of constitutional 17 commands...."<sup>23/</sup>

18 19 <sup>22/</sup> It should be noted that many of the cases which have 20 considered the concept of standing generally, and which are 21 cited above in this Memorandum, have involved asserted racial 22 discrimination. E.g., Powelton Civic Homeowners' Association v.
23 Department of Housing and Urban Development, supra; Nashville 24 I-40 Steering Committee v. Ellington, supra; Norwalk Core v.
Norwalk Redevelopment Agency, supra; Western Addition Community Organization v. Weaver, supra; Arrington v. City of Fairfield, Alabama, supra; Shannon v. Department of Housing and Urban Development, supra; compare also Office of Communication of the United Church of Christ v. FCC, supra.

25 <sup>23/</sup> Even beyond the broad approach to the question of 26 standing under the recent cases above discussed, the Supreme 27 Court has suggested that given the importance of remedying civil 28 rights deprivations, the requirements for standing might appropriately be dispensed with in their entirety in certain situations. Thus, in Barrows v. Jackson, supra, a housing discrimination case (discussed infra at 40-41) the Court noted:

29 "Under the peculiar circumstances of this 30 case, we believe the reasons which underlie our rule denying standing to raise another's rights, which is only a rule of practice, are

1           In Marable, plaintiffs, who were patients at some 2 (but not all) of the mental health facilities in Alabama sued 3 to challenge (a) the discriminatory treatment of patients 4 at Alabama's mental health facilities throughout the state 5 and (b) racial discrimination against facility employees. The 6 standing of plaintiff-patients to raise each of the asserted 7 claims was challenged. Such challenges were, however, rejected.
8 As to the initial claim of discrimination against mental 9 health patients, the court held that plaintiffs were proper 10 parties to challenge the discriminatory practices alleged even 11 with respect to those facilities where none of them were -- 12 or had ever been -- patients. Citing the generally expansive 13 concept of standing in civil rights cases generally (above 14 quoted), the court found such plaintiffs "proper parties" within 15 the principles of standing enunciated by the Supreme Court 16 in Flast v. Cohen, supra.

17           Even more significant, however, the court held that 18 the patient-plaintiffs had standing to challenge discriminatory 19 employment practices at the mental hospitals. Although noting 20 that plaintiffs would have no standing to challenge the asserted 21 discriminations as "potential employees" of the system, the 22 court nevertheless found "that they do have standing because 23 of the secondary effects on plaintiffs as patients of the 24 discrimination against staff personnel." (297 F.Supp. at 297; 25 emphasis added). In so holding, the court relied upon its

26
27 23/ (continued)

28           outweighed by the need to protect fundamental 29 rights which would be denied by permitting 30 the damages [sic] action to be maintained.
[Cite omitted]. In other relief situations which have arisen in the past, the broad constitutional policy has lead the court to proceed without regard to its usual rule."

1 earlier decision in Lee v. Macon County Board of Education, 2 267 F.Supp. 458, 472 (N.D. Ala. 1967), aff'd sub nom., Wallace 3 v. United States, 389 U.S. 215 (1968), in which public 4 school students were held to have standing to challenge 5 faculty and staff segregation.<sup>24/</sup>

6 Similarly, in Carter v. Green County, 396 U.S. 320 7 (1969), affirming, 298 F.Supp. 181 (N.D. Ala. 1968), the 8 Supreme Court ruled that potentially excluded black jurors 9 had standing to challenge racial discrimination in Alabama's 10 jury selection system. Although jury discrimination proceedings 11 have, of course, been reported from all levels of the federal 12 judiciary in recent years,<sup>25/</sup> the Court noted at the outset of 13 its discussion that Carter was the "first case" to present 14 such a challenge by other than a criminal defendant convicted 15 by a racially imbalanced jury.

16 Considering the issue of standing in relation to 17 who are persons "aggrieved" by such discrimination, the Court 18 explicitly held that "people excluded from juries because of 19 their race are as much aggrieved as those indicted and tried

20 21 <sup>24/</sup> As pointed out in Lee, supra at 472: "It is no 22 longer open to question that faculty and staff desegregation 23 is an integral part of any public school desegregation plan - 24 not because of teachers' employment rights, but because students 25 are entitled to a non-racial education, and assignment of teachers 26 to students on the basis of race denies students that right." 27 See also Smuck v. Hobson, 408 F.2d 175 (D.C. Cir. 1969) (parents 28 of white and black school children held to "have a realistic nexus" 29 sufficient (under Flast v. Cohen) to permit them to challenge 30 the racially discriminatory effect of the District of Columbia's ability "tracking" system in its public schools.

<sup>25/</sup> See, e.g., Sims v. Georgia, 389 U.S. 404 (1967); Whitus v. Georgia, 385 U.S. 545 (1967); Swain v. Alabama, 380 U.S. 202 (1965).

1 by juries chosen under a system of racial exclusion."
2 (396 U.S. at 330).<sup>26/</sup> See also Lombard v. Louisiana, 373 U.S. 267 3 (1964) in which a white civil rights worker, inter alia, 4 was permitted to raise a claim of racial discrimination as 5 a defense to criminal trespass, and compare Walker v. Pointer, 6 304 F.Supp. 56 (N.D. Tex. 1969) (discussed infra) in which the 7 court found standing for white plaintiffs who were allegedly 8 subjected to reprisals because of their association with 9 Negroes.<sup>27/</sup>

10 What the foregoing authorities make clear for 11 standing in the civil rights context generally, is further 12 reinforced by decisions dealing with the very area of housing 13 discrimination here at issue. Perhaps the leading case is the 14 1953 decision of the Supreme Court in Barrows v. Jackson, supra.

15
16 <sup>26/</sup> The Supreme Court in Green affirmed the summary 17 disposition of the standing question which had been made by 18 the district court. Moreover, in the lower court proceedings, 19 one of the challenging plaintiffs was a white civil rights 20 worker "charges against whom [were] proposed to be submitted 21 to the [Alabama] Grand Jury." This plaintiff, in addition to 22 the potentially excluded Negro jurors, was held to have sufficient 23 standing.

24 <sup>27/</sup> Reference should also be had to the opinion of Judge 25 Lord in Shannon v. HUD, discussed previously (at 32-4). There 26 as we noted, white and black residents who were not to be dis-27 placed by a proposed Model Cities program were held entitled, 28 "as persons aggrieved", to challenge the effect of such program 29 on their "living environment". This holding was made notwith-30 standing the fact that the statute under consideration made no explicit provision for the standing of such persons. Quoting from the earlier decision of the Supreme Court in Hardin v.
Kentucky Utilities Co., 390 U.S. 1, 7 (1968), however, the court ruled that "no explicit statutory provision [was] necessary to confer standing." Noting further that plaintiffs "literally must live with the decision[s]" of the defendant, Judge Lord found that it was "evident that these urban renewal area residents were sufficiently interested in the national goals of 'well planned, integrated residential neighborhoods' and 'well-organized residential neighborhoods of decent homes and suitable living environment for adequate family life'" to challenge administrative determinations concerning the proposed Model Cities program.
Compare also Nashville I-40 Steering Committee v. Ellington, supra.

1 There, an action for damages was brought against defendant 2 Viola Jackson, a Caucasian, who had allegedly breached a 3 racially restrictive covenant by selling her property to 4 Negroes. Under the Court's earlier landmark decision in 5 Shelley v. Kraemer, 334 U.S. 1 (1947), it was clear that such 6 restrictive covenant could not have been affirmatively 7 enforced in an action at law against a co-covenantor. Plaintiffs 8 alleged, however, that defendant Jackson, as a Caucasian, had 9 no standing to avail herself of the benefits of such decision.
10 The argument was firmly rejected.

11 In the first place, the Court noted that while 12 respondent Jackson had not been subjected to racial discrimination 13 herself, she was not without direct interest or concern for 14 the proceedings, since she was subject to potential economic 15 detriment in the pending action, which claimed some $11,000 16 damages against her, so that "a judgment against respondent 17 would constitute a direct, pocketbook injury to her." (346 18 U.S. at 256). Compare allegations of Complaint and Complaint 19 in Intervention at paragraph VIII.

20 Moreover, even apart from her potential economic 21 injury, the Court explicitly held that respondent Jackson 22 could appropriately assert the rights of the Negro "would-be 23 users of restricted land." (346 U.S. at 260). Basing its 24 conclusion on the broad public interest in equal housing, and 25 the strictures against "widely condemned" racial segregation 26 in housing, the Court ruled that it could not refuse to 27 entertain a defense based upon Shelley v. Kraemer, supra, 28 "simply because the person against whom the injury is directed 29 is not before the Court to speak for himself."

30 More recently, the Supreme Court relied upon its 1 earlier conclusions in Barrow v. Jackson, supra, to uphold the 2 right of a Caucasian to challenge (under 42 U.S.C. §1982) his 3 expulsion from a recreational corporation on the ground that 4 he had rented his home, and assigned his corporate membership 5 share, to a Negro. Sullivan v. Little Hunting Park, 396 U.S.

6 230 (1969). Again, the defendant corporation asserted that 7 Sullivan, as a Caucasian, had no standing to assert the rights 8 arguably protected to Negroes under §1982. The Court summarily 9 rejected such claim, stating that if Sullivan were denied such 10 standing the resulting "sanction" would give impetus to the 11 perpetuation of racial restrictions on property. Further 12 noting, as it had some sixteen years earlier in Barrows, 13 supra, that "the white owner is at times the only effective 14 adversary 'of the unlawful' restrictive covenant" the Court 15 held that "there can be no question but that Sullivan has 16 standing to maintain this action."

17 Finally, in a case decided one month prior to Sullivan, 18 the District Court for the Northern District of Texas found 19 that white tenants who were evicted because of their alleged 20 "association" with Negro guests were entitled, under §1982, 21 to seek damages from their landlord. Walker v. Pointer, 22 304 F.Supp. 56 (N.D. Tex. 1969).

23 Plaintiffs there, as here, asserted that they had 24 been "direct victims of black racial discrimination" and had 25 been injured thereby. Defendant landlord, again much like 26 landlord-Metropolitan, claimed that no action could be maintained 27 by the tenants since they had not been discriminated against 28 because of their race. (Compare Metropolitan's statement at 29 page 9 of its Brief in Support of Motion to Dismiss, that 30 since "neither plaintiff has been the victim of any discriminatory

1 housing practice proscribed by the Act" they are without 2 standing to bring this action).

3 Relying on a host of prior decisions in the civil 4 rights area including, inter alia, Barrows v. Jackson, supra, 5 Lombard v. Louisiana, supra and Valle v. Stengel, 176 F.2d 6 697, 702 (1949), the court considered and explicitly rejected 7 defendant's contentions:

8 "To deny jurisdiction under section 1982 9 to plaintiffs would be to hold in effect that 10 only those suffering from discrimination 11 against black people who happen to be black 12 come within the protection of the statute.
13 This would surely be to read in 1982 a racist purpose. The jurisdictional basis of the statute so read would be antithetical to the ennobling objective of the statute and of the Thirteenth Amendment from which it was drawn....

14 "It is the conclusion of this Court that 15 the plaintiffs are within the jurisdictional 16 scope of section 1982 in their own right - 17 even though they are not Negro persons and 18 irrespective of whatever harm might have 19 befallen Negro persons as a result of the 20 alleged interruption of the Walker leasehold 21 by defendants."
22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30

1                   D. The Interests and Injuries Asserted.

2                   We come finally to the allegations of injury 3                   which are at the very heart of the claims raised by both 4                   plaintiffs and plaintiffs in intervention. For as has been 5                   clear throughout, these plaintiffs -- defendant's gratuitous 6                   characterizations notwithstanding -- are not mere well-7                   meaning volunteers. They are persons whose daily lives 8                   are affected by the invidious policies of racial discrim-9                   ination so long practiced at Parkmerced.

10                  In brief, plaintiffs claim that as a result 11                  of Metropolitan's exclusionary housing practices they have 12                  been injured (a) by being deprived of the social benefit 13                  of living in a racially integrated community; (b) by loss 14                  of business and professional advantages accruing from 15                  contact with members of racial and ethnic minorities; 16                  and (c) by being stigmatized (with resultant economic 17                  and social detriment) as residents of a segregated community.
18                  See Complaint and Complaint in Intervention at paragraph 8.<sup>28/</sup>

19 20 21                  28/ It is important to again note that for purposes of 22                  the instant motion to dismiss under Federal Rule 23                  12(b)(6) all of the well pleaded and material allegations 24                  of the complaint -- including those asserting injury, 25                  as outlined above in text -- are to be taken as true.
26                  See, e.g., Walker Process Equip. Corp. v. Food Machinery & 27                  Chemical Corp., 382 U.S. 172 (1965); Dodd v. Spokane County, 28                  supra; Murray v. City of Milford, 380 F.2d 468 (2d Cir.
29                  1967). The same is true of allegations contained in the 30                  supporting affidavits. Gardner v. Toilet Goods Ass'n., 387 U.S. 167 (1967). Thus, Metropolitan's instant motion does not address itself to the truth or substantiality of the harm asserted (which are issues to be tried), but simply the legal sufficiency of such alleged injuries to state a claim within the requirements of the Federal Rules.

1           It goes virtually without saying at this stage 2 in our country's history that the continued existence of a 3 racially segregated society is not only harmful to those 4 who are the direct victims of racial exclusion, but infects 5 all who live in such environment. As we were told by a 6 unanimous Supreme Court some 16 years ago in Brown v. Board 7 of Education, 347 U.S. 483 (1954), "separate" can never be 8 "equal" in the context of racial discrimination. For the 9 psychological and social toll which such an existence places 10 upon all who are involved is inevitably injurious and not 11 to be countenanced. See 347 U.S. at 493-95. See also, 12 e.g., K. B. Clark, EFFECT OF PREJUDICE AND DISCRIMINATION 13 ON PERSONALITY DEVELOPMENT (Midcentury White House Conference 14 on Child and Youth 1950); Deutscher and Chein, The Psychological 15 Effects of Enforced Segregation: A Survey of Social Science
16 Opinion, 26 J. PSYCHOL 259 (1948); Allport, THE NATURE 17 OF PREJUDICE (Addison-Wesley Pub. Co. 1954).

18           If the obvious truth of these assertions be not 19 self-evident, then reference need be made only to the 20 affidavit submitted here by Dr. Alvin F. Poussaint, Associate 21 Dean of the Harvard Medical School and a psychiatrist 22 who has had wide clinical experience treating both white 23 and black patients in northern and southern urban areas.
24 Dr. Poussaint, who has served as consultant to both the 25 Department of Health, Education and Welfare and to the 26 United States Commission on Civil Rights, firmly and une-27 quivocally supports the allegations of injury to these 28 plaintiffs (both white and black) in the instant proceedings.

29           As an initial matter, Dr. Poussaint notes the 30 "intolerable stigma" placed upon professionals and business

1 men who must reveal their residence in a racially segregated 2 community. Such individuals, Dr. Poussaint notes, "will 3 suffer a loss of face and self-esteem not only in their 4 relations with minority groups but also with whites." 5 (Poussaint Affidavit at 4-5). The result, based upon Dr.
6 Poussaint's clinical experience, is psychologically disad-7 vantageous "feelings of hopelessness and despair." Moreover, 8 as should again be self-evident, continuation of racial 9 segregation in one's living environment will inevitably 10 continue and reinforce feelings of racial prejudice in both 11 whites and minority group members. See Poussaint Affidavit 12 at 3, 8-9, and compare also Brink and Harris, THE NEGRO 13 REVOLUTION IN AMERICA (Simon and Schuster 1963).

14 Equally, if not more, unfortunate is the psycho-15 logical and social detriment caused to blacks who are not 16 excluded from, but are token residents of, a generally 17 segregated community.<sup>29/</sup> Again, as Dr. Poussaint's affidavit 18 points out, blacks living in communities such as Parkmerced 19 "suffer a stigma because of their residence. They must 20 face the taunts of other blacks, who accuse them of colla-21 borating with racism because they live in a racially restricted 22 neighborhood. . . . The psychological toll is even more 23 severe since blacks living in places like Parkmerced 24 are hampered in their dealings with the black community 25 organizations. . . . They are looked upon as intruders 26 27 28

---

29 <sup>29/</sup> Plaintiff Dorothy Carr and Plaintiff in Intervention 30 James Embree, as well as a handful of the Committee's members, are Negroes.

1 and their efforts are often sabotaged. Thus, they may 2 begin to suffer an internal lack of self-esteem which, 3 in turn, will give rise to conflicts leading to clinical 4 symptoms and disease." Poussaint Affidavit at 6-7.

5 See also K. B. Clark, DARK GHETTO (Harper & Row 1965).

6 Finally, the toll of residential segregation is 7 great not only upon adult residents of such communities -- 8 such as plaintiffs -- but upon their children. "It has 9 been observed by such eminent child psychiatrists and 10 anthropologists as Kenneth Clark, Erik Erikson, Mary 11 Ellen Goodman and Robert Coles, to name just a few, that 12 white children grow up much less prejudiced if they have 13 the opportunity to play and socialize with black children. . . .
14 We may conclude, therefore, that so long as the present 15 cultural provisions prevail a lack of contact between white 16 and black children can only reinforce the acquisition of 17 racist attitudes." Poussaint Affidavit at 8, and compare 18 also Affidavit at 7, reflecting the erosion of family rela-19 tionships which tends to occur in the homes of "token" 20 black residents of racially imbalanced communities.

21 Plaintiffs are, of course, concerned in these 22 proceedings for the rights and interests of minority persons 23 to have the opportunity to enjoy the benefits of living at 24 Parkmerced. Such concern is, moreover, appropriate and 25 legally cognizable. See, e.g., Barrows v. Jackson, 26 supra. But even more, the persons who are now before this 27 Court are concerned for the effect which a continuation 28 of discrimination and racial imbalance at Parkmerced 29 has had and will have on themselves and their families.
30 Unless we are to declare that the rights of such persons

1 are of no concern to the law and that plaintiffs must 2 either abide the racial exclusion practices of their 3 landlord or remove themselves from the community, their 4 presence as plaintiffs before this Court is not only to 5 be upheld, it is to be encouraged.

6 V

7 DEFENDANT'S SALE OF PARKMERCED WILL 8 NOT MAKE THESE PROCEEDINGS MOOT AS 9 TO METROPOLITAN

10 In its Brief in Support of Supplement to Motion 11 to Dismiss, Metropolitan argues that this action has be-12 come moot (and should, therefore, be dismissed) by reason 13 of its pending disposition of Parkmerced "in a manner by 14 which it will be divested of the power to continue the 15 acts complained of."

16 Defendant's argument is only notable for its 17 temerity. For the argument, and the cases cited in its 18 support, simply ignore the legal situation presented by 19 this case. As an initial matter, the mere fact that 20 Metropolitan has unilaterally elected to "flee the scene" 21 through its proposed sale of Parkmerced can hardly be 22 said to render "moot" the claims and injuries of plaintiffs 23 who continue to reside in a racially imbalanced community.
24 It was never the purpose of the doctrine of "mootness" to 25 apply to such a situation. Rather, such principle has 26 application to those cases (unlike the one now at bar) in 27 which the provoking controversy has ceased and nothing 28 remains to be (or could be) done to satisfy plaintiffs' 29 demands.

30 More disturbing, however, is the second premise of Metropolitan's argument--that it can somehow sell Parkmerced

1 "in a manner by which it will be divested of the power 2 to continue the acts complained of" and is therefore 3 impliedly relieved of any power or duty to correct its 4 discriminatory practices. To the contrary, Metropolitan 5 can and should be required by this Court to act affirma-6 tively to correct the conditions of racial segregation 7 at Parkmerced, whether or not it still owns that property.
8 Defendant cannot free itself of liability and responsibility 9 to plaintiffs by the simple device of selling Parkmerced.
10 Furthermore, Metropolitan's argument ignores plaintiffs' 11 well-pleaded demands for compensatory and punitive damages 12 for past acts by Metropolitan, clearly an obligation which 13 no sale can erase.

14 A. The Case Is Not Moot Because Much Remains 15 To Be Done.

16 Metropolitan's Supplemental Brief has cited a 17 variety of cases allegedly supporting its mootness claims.
18 However, such cases are simply not relevant to the instant 19 action--nor were they intended to be so applied. Defendant's 20 authorities, rather, involve situations where the contro-21 versy had ended or where the illegal conduct sought to be 22 enjoined no longer existed and was not likely to recur.
23 The analogous situation here would be presented if Metro-24 politan had voluntarily embarked on a broad program of 25 affirmative action to integrate Parkmerced, under the 26 scrutiny of this Court or an appropriate public or private 27 agency. And, even in such case, the action taken would 28 not totally obviate judicial scrutiny. See Parham v.
29 Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., F.2d , 2 FEP 30 Cases 1017 (7th Cir., October 28, 1970), where the District

1 Court was required to retain jurisdiction, notwithstanding 2 satisfactory voluntary affirmative action subsequent to 3 institution of the lawsuit. Compare U.S. v. IBEW, Local 4 38, 428 F.2d 144 (6th Cir. 1970). Certainly if, in the 5 instant case, Parkmerced had become fully integrated and 6 plaintiffs' damage claims were satisfied, this action 7 would not only be moot, but plaintiffs would be delighted 8 to have it dismissed. However, Metropolitan advances no 9 such claim here, nor could it. More, plaintiffs suggest 10 that a claim of "mootness" ill-befits a defendant who 11 has, over a period of many years, continuously and 12 systematically refused to provide substantial housing 13 opportunities to minority persons, and whose discriminatory 14 conduct continues unabated.

15 B. The Case Is Not Moot Because, Despite Its 16 Proposed Sale, There Is Much That Metropolitan Can Do.

17 By their complaints, plaintiffs seek not only 18 prospective relief through injunctive and affirmative 19 action, but also compensatory and punitive damages for 20 Metropolitan's past and continuing violations. Thus, the 21 most obvious answer to Metropolitan's claim of mootness 22 is that plaintiffs have requested such monetary compensa-23 tion. As such, Metropolitan cannot escape its responsi-24 bility for such damages here any more than a person in-25 volved in an automobile accident could escape liability 26 by selling his car. Indeed, in one of the cases relied 27 upon by defendant, Powell v. McCormack, 395 U.S. 486 28 (1969), the court held that a similar damage (back salary) 29 claim by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell meant that his action 30 could not be deemed moot. See also Wilson v. Prasse, 404

1 F.2d 1380 (1968).

2           However, plaintiffs are in no sense limited to 3 such claim against Metropolitan here, for there is a far 4 broader sense in which much remains to be done that Metro-5 politan can be required to do. Plaintiffs have already 6 indicated, in their Memorandum of Points and Authorities 7 in Support of Motion to Join Additional Defendant (a copy 8 of which is appended hereto, as Exhibit "E", for the con-9 venience of the Court), that affirmative action can and 10 should be required of the owner of Parkmerced in order to 11 correct the cumulative effect of Metropolitan's discrimina-12 tory policies. The attention of the Court is directed to 13 that Memorandum and the pertinent authorities cited there.
14 We there maintained that the new owner of Parkmerced, who 15 takes with notice of its predecessor's past practices, 16 will be responsible for correcting the segregation found 17 there. This is not to suggest in any way, however, that 18 Metropolitan is relieved of responsibility in this area; 19 rather, Metropolitan and its purchaser should be required 20 to work together, after the sale, to integrate the com-21 munity by an appropriate affirmative action plan. Compare 22 Exhibit "E" at 4.

23           It is appropriate that Metropolitan, whose prac-24 tices and policies through the years have resulted in the 25 present racial imbalance at Parkmerced, should bear primary 26 responsibility here, including, e.g., the cost of tenant 27 solicitation in minority neighborhoods and the salaries 28 of those required to change the discriminatory practices 29 in the Parkmerced rental offices. Clearly, any plan of 30 affirmative action must be carried out in cooperation with

1 the new owner of Parkmerced, and thus, this new owner must 2 be a party to this action (compare Rule 25, F.R.C.P.).
3 However, the primary burden should be placed by this 4 Court on Metropolitan.

5 Plaintiffs' position that defendant's sale will 6 not relieve it of responsibility here, nor make this case 7 moot, is supported by substantial authority. Thus, de-8 fendants who, in order to avoid integration, closed parks, 9 released plaintiffs from reformatories or ceased rental 10 of their apartments, have failed in their attempted argu-11 ments that their respective cases were thereby mooted.
12 City of Montgomery, Alabama v. Gilmore, 277 F.2d 364 13 (5th Cir. 1960); Singleton v. Board of Commissioners of 14 State Institutions, 356 F.2d 771 (5th Cir. 1966); United 15 States v. Beach Associates, Inc., 286 F.Supp. 801 (D.Md.
16 1968). Furthermore, even corrective action by defendants 17 is often not enough to make a case moot; thus, promotion 18 of a Negro employee who had filed a class action alleging job 19 discrimination, did not bring about mootness. Jenkins v.
20 United Gas Corporation, 400 F.2d 28 (5th Cir. 1968).
21 Nor did abandonment of a county-unit election system, 22 Gray v. Sanders, 372 U.S. 368 (1963). Finally, a con-23 troversy arising from a contract between an employer and 24 a local union was held not to become moot by the merger 25 of the union with another union, resulting in the forma-26 tion of a new local. The new union was simply added as 27 a party. Retail Clerks International Association v.
28 Lion Dry Goods, Inc., 369 U.S. 17 (1962).

29 By contrast, defendant has cited no authority 30 which goes to the questions presented by this case.

1 Defendant's cases (with the exception of Powell, supra, 2 which affirmatively supports plaintiffs' claims) uniformly 3 involve situations in which the controversy between plain-4 tiff and defendant had either entirely terminated or the 5 practice complained of had in some way been corrected by 6 defendant and would assuredly not recur. As has been 7 shown, this is not in any sense true of the instant case.
8 For example, Pittenger v. Home Savings & Loan Assn., 166
9 C.A.2d 32 (1958), a case cited as particularly relevant 10 by defendant, involved a sale in which the purchaser had 11 corrected the practice complained of by plaintiff--a 12 fact omitted from Metropolitan's extensive discussion 13 of the case.<sup>30/</sup> 14

15
16 <sup>30/</sup> Metropolitan's reliance upon the Supreme Court's 17 decision in the leading case of United States v. W. T. Grant 18 Co., 345 U.S. 629 (1953) is similarly misplaced. Subsequent 19 to the filing of the government's suit, alleging violation of 20 the interlocking directorate provisions of the Clayton Act 21 (15 U.S.C. §19) defendant Hancock [the director charged] 22 resigned his conflicting posts, and all parties defendant 23 filed affidavits that the violations, if any, would not 24 be repeated. On the basis of such facts, defendants moved 25 for summary judgment on the ground that the proceedings 26 had thereby become moot--a claim which the District Court 27 upheld. On direct appeal to the Supreme Court, the Court 28 noted initially that discontinuance of illegal conduct, 29 either prior to or during the pendency of proceedings, will 30 not oust a court of its jurisdiction either "to hear and determine the case" or "to grant injunctive relief" (345 U.S. at 632-33). Indeed, the Court explicitly warned against facile acceptance of "protestations of repentance and reform" by defendants. Compare United States v. Oregon State Medical Society, 343 U.S. 326, 333 (1952). What is, rather, required in a case of asserted mootness, held Justice Clark, is to determine whether "relief is needed." So tested there, the Court found that the trial court had not "abused its discretion" in accepting defendants' plea.

28 From any fair reading of the Court's cautionary 29 language, and its reliance upon whether relief from the 30 defendants' unlawful conduct was still "needed" it is hard to see how defendant can derive any comfort from that case here. Indeed, Metropolitan has made no pretense of ever

1           The most charitable assessment of defendant's 2 supplemental claim of mootness is that it is merely pro 3 forma. For such argument, if seriously intended, reflects 4 the height of cynicism and disdain for corporate responsi-5 bility and the judicial process. If Metropolitan, having 6 created the current racial situation at Parkmerced, is now 7 able to exit discreetly from these proceedings, it will 8 become even more difficult to convince this country's 9 minority residents of the availability of equality under 10 law.

11                           CONCLUSION

12           For the foregoing reasons, plaintiffs and plain-13 tiffs in intervention respectfully request that the motion 14 of Metropolitan Life Insurance Company to dismiss the 15 Complaint and Complaint in Intervention be denied.

16                           Respectfully submitted,

17
18                           George H. Clyde, Jr.
19                           George H. Clyde, Jr.

20
21                           Stephen V. Bomse
22                           Stephen V. Bomse

23                           Attorneys for Plaintiffs and
24                           Plaintiffs in Intervention

25                           Dated: December 11, 1970

26
27           30/ (continued)

28           satisfying the threshold test of discontinuance, let 29           alone proving that its reform is genuine and permanent.

30           -----

1 GEORGE H. CLYDE, JR.
2 STEPHEN V. BOMSE
3 44 Montgomery Street, Suite 3000
4 San Francisco, California 94104
5 Telephone: 981-5000

6 7 8 Attorneys for Plaintiffs and 9 Plaintiffs in Intervention
10

11 IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
12 FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA 13

14 PAUL J. TRAFFICANTE and
15 DOROTHY M. CARR,

16 Plaintiffs,

17 vs.

18 METROPOLITAN LIFE INSURANCE
19 COMPANY, a New York corporation,

20 Defendant,

21 COMMITTEE OF PARKMERCED RESIDENTS
22 COMMITTED TO OPEN OCCUPANCY, an
23 unincorporated association; THE
24 REVEREND ARTHUR H. NEWBERG; JAMES
25 EMBREE; ALBERT JAMES HEICK;
26 JACQUELINE TCHAKALIAN,

27 Plaintiffs in Intervention.
28 29

) NO. C-70-1754 (LHB)

)
) MEMORANDUM OF
) POINTS AND AUTHORITIES
) IN SUPPORT OF MOTION ) TO JOIN ADDITIONAL ) DEFENDANT

30 Because of the announced intention of defendant METROPOLITAN LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY ("Metropolitan") to dispose of its interest in the Parkmerced complex, and because of the vitally significant effect which such sale may have upon the relief available in these proceedings, plaintiffs and plaintiffs in intervention (hereinafter collectively referred to as "plaintiffs") move for an order substituting the transferee <sup>1/</sup>

1/ Because of the expressed desire of defendant Metropolitan pursuant to the provisions of Rule 25(c), Fed.R.Civ.P.

2/

Rule 25(c) of the Federal Rules provides for the substitution or joinder of parties defendant "in case of any transfer of interest" pendente lite, such as will imminently occur here. Such motion, which is addressed to the discretion of this Court (McComb v. Row River Lumber Co., 177 F.2d 129 [9th Cir. 1949]), is particularly appropriate here since plaintiffs seek in this proceeding a decree not only for damages, but for affirmative action to correct the effects of past racial discrimination at Parkmerced. While such discrimination has undoubtedly been caused by present owner, Metropolitan, it is inevitably necessary that its transferee -- who takes with notice of the pendency of these proceedings -- may be called upon to take affirmative action necessary to uphold the strong national interest (compare 42 U.S.C. §3601) in fair housing.

The right to affirmative relief in the instant proceedings as well as the responsibility of Metropolitan's successor to take such affirmative action, in conjunction with the present

---

1/ (continued) for confidentiality concerning its proposed sale transaction, it has been agreed that the identity of the proposed purchaser should not be revealed until the time of the sale. For this reason, such name is omitted from the instant motion and all papers in support thereof, and the name of such purchaser is indicated throughout by a blank. When the identity of the purchaser is made public, plaintiffs will move this Court to substitute such party's name at all appropriate points by an order to be entered nunc pro tunc.

2/ Rule 25(c) provides as follows:

"In case of any transfer of interest, the action may be continued by or against the original party, unless the court upon motion directs the person to which the interest is transferred to be substituted in the action or joined with the original party. Service of the motion shall be made as provided in subdivision (a) of this rule."

1 defendant, is discussed in detail below. It should preliminarily 2 be noted, however, that while we believe this motion is properly 3 granted<sup>3/</sup> so that all parties whose interests may potentially 4 be effected will be before the Court, it is clear that the 5 transferee may be legally bound by any judgment rendered against 6 Metropolitan -- including the obligation to take affirmative 7 action -- without regard to the disposition made by the Court 8 on the present Rule 25 request. See, 3B Moore, ¶2508 at 9 25-325; Regal Knitwear Co. v. N.L.R.B., 324 U.S. 9 (1945); 10 United States v. Griffith Amusement Co., 94 F.Supp. 747 11 (W.D. Okla. 1950); O'Donohue v. First National Bank of Philadelphia, 12 166 F.Supp. 233 (E.D. Pa. 1958).

13 WHERE RACIAL DISCRIMINATION HAS BEEN 14 PREVIOUSLY PRACTICED A PROPERTY OWNER
15 MUST TAKE ALL ACTION NECESSARY TO CORRECT
THE EFFECTS OF SUCH DISCRIMINATION

16 It is, without question, clear that a party guilty 17 of unlawful racial discrimination is required to discontinue 18 and desist from his unlawful conduct. It is equally well-19 established, however, that a party guilty of such past dis-20 crimination must also take affirmative action to correct the 21 effects of past discriminatory policies. Indeed, so strong 22 is the national policy favoring equal treatment of all persons 23 that a defendant may be prohibited from adopting even racially 24 neutral policies where, because of past practices, such policies 25 will have the effect of perpetuating the unlawful discrimination.

---

27 3/ See, e.g., Montecatini Societa Generale per L'Industria 28 Mineraria e Chimica v. Humble Oil & Refining Co., 261 F.Supp.
29 587 (D. Md. 1966); Vandenbark v. Busiek, 1 FRD 366 (E.D. Ill.
30 1940) (transferee held properly joined as additional rather than substitute party) and Killebrew v. Moore, 41 FRD 269 (N.D. Miss. 1966).

1           The instant proceeding represents a classic case of 2 racial discrimination requiring affirmative action for its 3 resolution. Both under the principles applicable to civil 4 rights proceedings generally, as well as under specific statutory 5 authority, the right to such affirmative relief is clear here.
6 Plaintiffs intend to prove that as a result of the discriminatory 7 policies of Metropolitan at Parkmerced, the number of units 8 occupied by all racial minorities is substantially less than 9 1%. Moreover, the effect of such discrimination has been to 10 create, in effect, a self-perpetuating system of exclusion 11 fully as effective as a billboard stating "no minority person 12 need apply." If the unlawful and unconscionable effects of 13 these practices are to be ended, it can only be through a 14 meaningful program of affirmative judicial relief. Accordingly, 15 in these proceedings plaintiffs seek a judgment which includes 16 the following:

17           1. Advertisement to and solicitation of minority 18 tenants in local minority neighborhoods.

19           2. Abolition of practices which, given the present 20 racial makeup of Parkmerced, are inherently discriminatory, 21 e.g., giving preference to family members of existing residents, 22 reserving certain classes of apartments for transfers from 23 within the community.

24           3. Granting expedited treatment on the "waiting list" 25 to some or all minority applicants until such time as the effects 26 of Metropolitan's past discriminatory practices have been 27 eliminated.

28           4. Integration of the personnel in the rental office.

29           A. Statutory Authority.

30           Recognizing that many -- and, indeed, the most

1 successful -- schemes of racial discrimination could only be 2 discouraged through effective affirmative relief plans, 3 Congress has wisely mandated authority for such action into 4 various enactments in the area of civil rights. In terms
5 of the law most directly pertinent here, Title 8 of the 1968 6 Civil Rights Act (42 U.S.C. §§3601, et seq.) §810(d) authorizes 7 a court in cases of discrimination in housing to "order such 8 affirmative action as may be appropriate." Likewise, §812(c) 9 states that "the court may grant as relief, as it deems 10 appropriate, any permanent or temporary injunction, temporary 11 restraining order or other order."

12         These provisions are, on their face, affirmative 13 mandates for the type of relief which plaintiffs seek here.
14 Moreover, such mandate is strengthened by reference to 15 numerous decisions construing similar provisions or granting 16 affirmative relief in line with the strong national policy 17 against racial discrimination. See, e.g., Title 7 of the 18 1964 Civil Rights Act (42 U.S.C. §2000e-5[g]) and compare 19 also Jones v. Mayer, 392 U.S. 409, 414 (1968) ("the fact that 20 42 U.S.C. §1982 [Civil Rights Act of 1866] is couched in 21 declaratory terms and provides no explicit methods of enforce-22 ment does not, of course, prevent a federal court from 23 fashioning an effective equitable remedy....").

24         B. Decisions Requiring Affirmative Action.

25         Where appropriate, affirmative action is the rule, 26 not the exception, in civil rights cases. In the very area -- 27 housing -- here at issue, decrees have not only required such 28 action but have set forth in detail specific acts required 29 to be done to rectify the effects of past discrimination. Thus, 30 in Gautreaux v. Chicago Housing Authority, 296 F.Supp. 907

1 (N.D. Ill. 1969) the trial court found defendant Housing 2 Authority guilty of racial discrimination both in its tenant 3 assignment practices and in selection of sites for proposed 4 housing projects. To remedy the effects of such unlawful 5 conduct, the court then adopted a detailed plan for affirmative 6 action (the salient features of which are set out in the margin 7 below)<sup>4/</sup>. To similar effect, see also Lee v. Southern Home 8 Sites Corp., 429 F.2d 290 (5th Cir. 1970), a case brought under 9 42 U.S.C. §1982, in which the Court of Appeals required 10 advertisements to be placed in newspapers selected 11 by the court. Such advertisements were explicitly required 12 to state that qualified potential minority applicants would 13 be accepted by defendant.

14 In addition to the foregoing cases, which were 15 adjudicated on their merits, numerous consent decrees in the 16 area of housing discrimination have required substantial 17 affirmative commitments. Among these are, United States v.
18

19 4/ The order in Gautreaux, which is published at 304 F.Supp.
20 736, required defendant to take the following actions, among others:

21 (a) Required the construction of a specific number 22 of dwelling units in formerly "white" areas prior to permitting 23 any new construction to be commenced in areas 30% or more non-white;

24 (b) Provided for future construction in previously
"white" areas;

25 (c) Imposed limits upon the placement, size and 26 building height within any project;

27 (d) Required a freeze of the "waiting list" for public 28 housing, along with "intensive publicity [to] be employed in such 29 a manner as effectively to inform low income families throughout the City of Chicago ... that substantial numbers of dwelling units will be made available..."

30 In order to assure compliance with its adopted plan, the court retained continuing jurisdiction over the proceedings.

1 Weingart, #70-530-CC (C.D. Cal. 1970) in which the decree 2 provided that "new tenants will be encouraged to select 3 apartments in a building so as to eliminate racial identification 4 of any specific building in an apartment complex ..." In 5 addition, defendant was required to take affirmative steps 6 to cause minority persons to be employed at the apartment 7 complexes. In United States v. Charnita, Inc., #69-409 8 (M.D. Pa. 1970), an order filed June 8, 1970, required the 9 defendant to integrate its staff and to "endeavor to place 10 negroes in supervisory and professional positions as vacancies 11 for which they are qualified arise..." Further, in both 12 Weingart and Charnita the consent decrees required that a 13 certain percentage of the respective defendant's advertising 14 expenses be directed specifically toward the minority community.
15 See also United States v. Lake Caroline, Inc., #CA-432-69R
16 (E.D. Va. 1970); United States v. Palmetto Realty Corp., 17 #70-1419 (E.D. La. 1970) and United States v. Associated 18 Estimates Corp., #C-70-233 (N.D. Ohio 1970).

19                   What is true of housing discrimination since 1968<sup>5/</sup> 20 is even more the case in other areas where racial exclusions 21

22 5/ Prior to the passage of Title 8 to the 1968 Civil Rights 23 Act and decision of the United States Supreme Court in Jones 24 v. Mayer, supra, federal suits for housing discrimination were 25 limited to those involving "state action." Compare, e.g., 26 Dorsey v. Stuyvesant Town Corporation, 299 N.Y. 512, 87 N.E.2d 27 541 (1949), cert. denied, 339 U.S. 981 (1950). For this reason, 28 there are at present only a limited number of reported opinions 29 dealing with the private property owner's affirmative obligations 30 to correct the effects of past racial discrimination. Yet as noted above, the cases which have considered the question to date have shown no hesitancy in applying the same rigorous requirements of affirmative corrective action which have been so prevalent in other areas of civil rights litigation (see discussion in text, post).

1 have been common, including discrimination in jobs, voting, 2 jury selection and school attendance. For example, in the 3 area of job discrimination (under Title 7 of the 1964 Civil 4 Rights Act) it has been held that "where necessary to insure 5 compliance with the Act, the District Court was fully empowered 6 to eliminate the present effects of past discrimination."
7 Local 53, Int'l Ass'n of Heat & Frost I & A Wkrs v. Vogler, 8 407 F.2d 1047, 1052-53 (5th Cir. 1969). There, moreover, 9 the Fifth Circuit affirmed a district court order which, 10 inter alia, required chronological referrals for work alternating 11 between white and negro applicants until objective membership 12 criteria were established. The court further struck down a 13 union policy which had given preference to close relatives 14 of existing union members. See also United States v. Int'l 15 Bhd. of Electrical Workers, 428 F.2d 144 (6th Cir. 1970) (lower 16 court order refusing to require defendant to affirmatively 17 advise eligible negroes that union would no longer discriminate 18 vacated and remanded for consideration of appropriate affirmative 19 action plan); United States v. Sheet Metal Workers, Int'l 20 Association, 416 F.2d 123 (8th Cir. 1969) (union required to 21 publicize new non-discriminatory policies); Local 189, United 22

23 6/ In the Sheet Metal Workers case the Eighth Circuit's opinion 24 pointedly noted the "chilling effect" (Dombrowski v. Pfister, 25 380 U.S. 479 [1965]) class discrimination can have upon future applications for employment or, as here, housing:

26 "We recognize that the best publicity programs 27 will not fully convince Negroes that they now have 28 the opportunity to attempt to qualify for apprentice-29 ship training. We also recognize that no such 30 program can hope to be as effective as parental guidance, but a good public information program can help persuade the doubtful and skeptical that the discriminatory bars have been removed.
Such a program is mandatory...."
416 F.2d 123, at 139 [emphasis added].

1 Paper Makers and Paper Workers v. United States, 416 F.2d 980
2 (5th Cir. 1969), cert. denied, 397 U.S. 919 (1970) (a seniority 3 system which carried forward the discriminatory effects of 4 previous employment practices held partially unenforceable).

5 The principles held applicable to such cases were 6 well summarized by the recent opinion of the District Court 7 for the Western District of Washington in United States v.
8 Local No. 86, 315 F.Supp. 1202, 1236-37 (1970). There, the 9 court held that:

10 "Where a defendant has engaged in a pattern 11 of practice of discrimination on account of 12 race, such defendant must not only refrain 13 from future discrimination but must also 14 undertake whatever affirmative action may be necessary to assure those discriminated against the full enjoyment of their right to equal employment opportunities."

15 Similar requirements for affirmative action are 16 found in other areas as well. In Louisiana v. United States, 17 380 U.S. 145 (1965) the Court held that where a discriminatory 18 test had been employed in voter registration, the Court not 19 only required the adoption of a new, non-discriminatory exam, 20 but further required the re-registration of all voters under 21 the new test, so that the effects of the prior discrimination 22 would be eradicated. As Mr. Justice Black noted for the 23 unanimous court: "We bear in mind that the Court has not 24 merely the power but the duty to render a decree which will 25 so far as possible eliminate the discriminatory effects of 26 the past as well as bar like discrimination in the future."
27 (380 U.S. at 154).

28 Equally pertinent, in its past term, the Supreme 29 Court emphasized the power and duty of the federal courts 30 to order affirmative action to correct the effects of past

1 discrimination in jury selection. Carter v. Greene County, 2 396 U.S. 320 (1970). In so holding, moreover, the court 3 cited with approval numerous lower court decisions which had 4 required affirmative action to remedy improper jury selection 5 policies and practices. Compare opinion at footnote 46.

6 Finally, it goes without saying that in the area 7 of school desegregation courts have regularly imposed and 8 supervised the most rigorous and detailed of desegregation 9 plans in order to compel compliance with the long-ignored 10 mandate of the Court in Brown v. Board of Education, 347 U.S.
11 483 (1954). An exhaustive listing of such cases would represent 12 a virtual compendium of recent civil rights decisions.
13 Among such cases are United States v. Jefferson County Board 14 of Education, 372 F.2d 836, 895 (5th Cir. 1966) ("school 15 authorities have an affirmative duty to break up the historical 16 pattern of segregated faculties, the hallmark of the dual 17 system."); Porcelli v. Titus, ___ F.2d ___, 2 FEP Cases 1024 18 (3rd Cir. [September 23] 1970) ("it would therefore seem that 19 the Board of Education has a very definite affirmative duty 20 to integrate school faculties...."); Green v. School Board of 21 New Kent County, 391 U.S. 430 (1968).<sup>7/</sup>

22
23 <sup>7/</sup> It is finally pertinent to note that Metropolitan has itself 24 previously entered into an affirmative action plan in connection 25 with analogous housing operations in New York City. In settle-26 ment of a racial discrimination claim filed by the New York 27 Human Rights Commission in 1968, Metropolitan agreed as follows:

28 "In addition to processing the names on its 29 existing waiting list, Metropolitan will accept 30 new applicants. They will be considered simultaneously with those on the old list....

"A conscious, affirmative effort will be made to employ more Negroes and Puerto Ricans on the renting and clerical staffs of the projects...

1 METROPOLITAN'S PURCHASER, HAVING NOTICE 2 OF THIS LITIGATION AND OF THE DISCRIMINATORY 3 PRACTICES AT PARKMERCED, TAKES TITLE SUBJECT
4 TO AN OBLIGATION TO CORRECT THE EFFECTS 5 OF PAST DISCRIMINATION

---

6 If plaintiffs are to obtain effective relief from 7 the past discriminatory policies at Parkmerced, they must look 8 to the new owner. Only that company will control the rental 9 offices, the "waiting list", the tenant-selection and transfer 10 procedures, and only that company will be in a position to 11 solicit minority tenants. Thus, unless the new owner is joined 12 as a party under Rule 25, and unless he is made subject to the 13 obligation to correct the effects of past discrimination, 14 plaintiffs may be deprived of much of the relief to which 15 they are justly entitled.

16 We respectfully submit, however, that such require-17 ment should impose no substantial hurdle to the granting of 18 full and effective relief in these proceedings. Indeed, while 19 the precise question has not apparently been adjudicated 20 in any proceeding involving alleged housing discrimination, 21 there is ample legal precedent supporting the obligations 22 imposed upon one who acquires a property or business with 23 knowledge of defects which the former owner had an obligation 24 to correct. Thus, it is hornbook law that a person who 25 acquires real property with knowledge of an existing nuisance

---

26 7/ (continued)

27 "A letter will be sent to all Riverton 28 tenants [a non-white project] asking them 29 if they would be interested in transferring 30 to [the white projects]....

"The practice of giving preference to tenants' relatives will be stopped."

(Press release of the New York Commission on Human Rights, July 18, 1968.)

1 on such property is not only liable for the damages caused 2 by the nuisance following purchase, but may be required to 3 abate it. See, e.g., 66 C.J.S. "Nuisances", §88(e)(2); Anno.:
4 "liability of purchaser of premises for nuisance thereon 5 created by predecessor", 14 ALR 1094 (1921). Indeed, such 6 principle is of ancient vintage, in this state as elsewhere.
7 See, e.g., Pierce v. German Savings and Loan Society, 72 C. 180 8 (1887).

9 To similar effect, in the field of labor relations, 10 it is settled that "one who acquires and operates a business 11 of an employer found guilty of unfair labor practices in 12 basically unchanged form under circumstances which charge him 13 with notice of unfair practice charges against his predecessor 14 should be held responsible for remedying his predecessor's 15 unlawful conduct." Perma Vinyl Corp., 164 N.L.R.B. #119, 16 65 L.R.R.M. 1168, 1169 (1967), enforced sub nom., United States 17 Pipe and Foundry Co. v. N.L.R.B., 398 F.2d 544 (5th Cir. 1968).
18 The Board there effectively summarized the reasons -- equally 19 applicable to the present proceeding -- requiring such transferee 20 liability:

21 "In imposing this responsibility upon a 22 bona fide purchaser, we are not unmindful 23 of the fact that he was not a party to the 24 unfair labor practices and continues to 25 operate the business without any connection 26 with his predecessor. However, in balancing 27 the equities involved there are other sig-28 nificant factors which must be taken into 29 account. Thus, 'It is the employing industry 30 that is sought to be regulated and brought within the corrective and remedial provisions of the Act in the interest of industrial peace.' When a new employer is substituted in the employing industry there has been no real change in the employing industry insofar as the victims of past unfair labor practices are concerned, or the need for remedying those unfair labor practices. Appropriate steps must still be taken if the effects of the 1 unfair labor practices are to be erased and 2 all employees reassured of their statutory 3 rights. And it is the successor who has 4 taken over control of the business who is 5 generally in the best position to remedy such 6 unfair labor practices most effectively.

7 The imposition of this responsibility upon 8 even the bona fide purchaser does not work 9 an unfair hardship upon him. When he sub-10 stituted himself in place of the perpetrator of the unfair labor practices, he became the beneficiary of the unremedied unfair labor practices. Also, his potential liability for remedying the unfair labor practices is a matter which can be reflected in the price he pays for the business, or he may secure an indemnity clause in the sales contract which will indemnify him for liability arising from the seller's unfair labor practices." [Cites omitted].

11 See also the concurring opinion of Judge Leventhal in 12 International Ass'n of Machinists v. N.L.R.B., 414 F.2d 1135, 13 footnote 3 at 1139 (D.C. Cir. 1969).

14 More, in John Wylie & Sons, Inc. v. Livingston, 376 15 U.S. 543 (1964) and Wackenhut Corp. v. International Union, 16 United Plant Guard Workers of America, 332 F.2d 954 (9th Cir.
17 1964), the Supreme Court and Ninth Circuit, respectively, 18 held that where there is a substantial similarity of operations 19 and a continuity of business identity, a collective bargaining 20 agreement entered by the predecessor employer would be held 21 binding upon his successor. See also United States v. Griffith 22 Amusement Co., supra, which stated, in dicta, that a successor 23 corporation would be bound by an injunction against block-24 booking entered in a proceeding brought under the Sherman and 25 Clayton Antitrust Acts.

26 CONCLUSION

27 Plaintiffs' right to an affirmative action decree, 28 and their right to enforce such decree against Metropolitan's 29 transferee undeniably mandate the presence of such transferee 30 before this Court from the very outset of the instant proceedings.

1 The scope and significance of this action not only requires 2 all parties concerned to have their "day in court", but 3 it is additionally imperative that this Court be an effective 4 forum to truly put an end to the long-standing policy of 5 racial exclusion which now obtains at Parkmerced and to 6 correct the injurious effects of said discrimination. If 7 Metropolitan and its purchaser are able to evade their legal 8 responsibility to provide fair and open housing to all persons, 9 then such action will stand as a monument to the failure of 10 the law to effectuate the declared policy of fair housing 11 throughout the United States (42 U.S.C. §3601).

12 Dated: December 8, 1970.

13 Respectfully submitted,

14 GEORGE H. CLYDE, JR.
15 STEPHEN V. BOMSE

16
17 By

18 GEORGE H. CLYDE, JR.
19 Attorneys for Plaintiffs and 20 Plaintiffs in Intervention 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30