UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

JUAN ROMERO, FRANK TISCARENO, and KENNETH ELLIOTT, on behalf of themselves, and all others similarly situated,

Plaintiff,

v.

SECURUS TECHNOLOGIES, INC.,

Defendant.

Case No.: 16cv1283 JM (MDD)

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANT’S MOTION TO DISMISS AND DENYING DEFENDANT’S MOTION
TO STRIKE CLASS ACTION ALLEGATIONS

Plaintiffs Juan Romero, Frank Tiscareno, and Kenneth Elliott, on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated, filed a first amended complaint (“FAC”) against Defendant Securus Technologies on July 26, 2016. (Doc. No. 8.) Plaintiffs are two former inmates and a criminal defense attorney, all of whom used Defendant’s telephone systems to make calls to and from certain correctional facilities in California. Plaintiffs allege that Defendant recorded a number of attorney-client calls in violation of California law. The FAC alleges (1) violations of the California Invasion of Privacy Act (“CIPA”), Cal. Penal Code § 636, (2) violations of California Business & Professions Code section 17200 (“section 17200”), (3) fraudulent concealment/omission,

1 (4) fraudulent misrepresentation, (5) negligence, (6) unjust enrichment, and (7) 2 conversion.

3 Defendant moves to dismiss the FAC for (1) lack of standing, (2) failure to exhaust 4 administrative remedies, and (3) failure to state a claim. (Doc. No. 11.) Separately, 5 Defendant also moves to strike the class action allegations. (Doc. No. 12.) For the 6 following reasons, the court grants Defendant’s motion to dismiss in part and denies it in 7 part, and the court denies Defendant’s motion to strike.

8 DISCUSSION

9 The court will first address Defendant’s motion to dismiss,¹ and then will address 10 Defendant’s motion to strike the class allegations.

13 ¹Defendant requests judicial notice of Exhibit A to its motion to dismiss—a printout from 14 the Utility Contact System Search database, obtained on the California Public Utilities
15 Commission (“CPUC”) website, which purports to demonstrate that Securus is a public 16 utility. Federal Rule of Evidence 201 provides that courts may take judicial notice 17 of facts that are not subject to reasonable dispute because they are generally known or are 18 capable of accurate and ready determination. See Fed. R. Evid. 201(b). While matters of 19 public record are proper subjects of judicial notice, a court may take notice only of the 20 existence and authenticity of an item, not the truth of its contents. See Lee v. City of Los 21 Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 689–90 (9th Cir. 2001). Under these rules, the court can take 22 judicial notice of “public records and government documents available from reliable 23 sources on the Internet, such as websites run by governmental agencies.” Gerritsen v.
24 Warner Bros. Entm’t Inc., 112 F. Supp. 3d 1011, 1033 (C.D. Cal. 2015) (internal 25 quotations omitted).

26 With these principles in mind, the court grants Defendant’s request for judicial notice of 27 Exhibit A, (Doc. No. 11-2), but notes that its argument based on that exhibit is meritless 28 if not disingenuous. While, as Defendant points out, CIPA section 632 contains an exemption from liability for public utilities in certain circumstances, section 636—the section at issue in this case—only provides an exemption for a public utility employee “who listens in to conversations for the limited purpose of testing or servicing equipment.” Despite the misleading assertion in its reply brief that section 636 “provides an exemption for public utilities,” (Doc. No. 18 at 16), and its “see also” citation to section 636(c) in its opening brief, (Doc. No. 11 at 22), Defendant does not actually make the argument that it listened in on conversations to test or service its equipment. Thus,

1 I. DEFENDANT’S MOTION TO DISMISS

2 A. Standing

3 Defendant first moves to dismiss the FAC under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 4 12(b)(1), arguing that the court does not have subject matter jurisdiction over Plaintiffs’ 5 claims because Plaintiffs do not have standing to sue in federal court.

6 1. Legal Standards

7 Federal courts are courts of limited jurisdiction. “Without jurisdiction the court
8 cannot proceed at all in any cause. Jurisdiction is power to declare the law, and when it 9 ceases to exist, the only function remaining to the court is that of announcing the fact and 10 dismissing the cause.” Steel Co. v. Citizens for a Better Environment, 523 U.S. 83, 94 11 (1998). As the party putting the claims before the court, Plaintiffs bear the burden of 12 establishing jurisdiction. Kokkonen v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 511 U.S. 375, 377 13 (1994).

14 There is no subject matter jurisdiction without standing, and the “irreducible 15 constitutional minimum” of standing consists of three elements. Lujan v. Defenders of 16 Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560 (1992). A plaintiff must have (1) suffered an injury in fact,

19 based on Plaintiff’s claims under section 636, it is irrelevant whether Defendant is a 20 public utility.

21 As for Plaintiffs’ requests for judicial notice, for the reasons stated above, and because 22 Defendant does not oppose the request, the court takes judicial notice of Plaintiffs’ 23 Exhibit A. The court declines to take judicial notice of Exhibit B, a screenshot of 24 Defendant’s website listing the facilities it serves, because the particular facilities 25 Defendant served during the relevant time period cannot be readily and accurately 26 determined from an undated screenshot. And for the limited purpose of determining what 27 information has been put into the public realm, but not for the truth of their contents, the 28 court takes judicial notice of Exhibit C, a printout of Defendant’s May 12, 2012, “Customer Integrity Pledge” signed by Defendant’s Chief Executive Officer Richard A.
Smith, which remains readily available on Defendant’s website, and Exhibits D and E, printouts of press releases issued by Defendant that also remain readily available on Defendant’s website.

1 (2) which is fairly traceable to the challenged conduct of the defendant, and (3) which is 2 likely to be redressed by a favorable judicial decision. Id. at 560–61. To establish injury 3 in fact—the relevant element here—the plaintiff must show that he or she suffered “an 4 invasion of a legally protected interest” that is “concrete and particularized” and “actual 5 or imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical.” Id. at 560 (internal quotations omitted).
6 “Where, as here, a case is at the pleading stage, the plaintiff must clearly allege facts 7 demonstrating each element.” Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547 (2016), as 8 revised (May 24, 2016) (internal quotations and alterations omitted). “In a class action, 9 standing is satisfied if at least one named plaintiff meets the requirements.” Bates v.
10 United Parcel Serv., Inc., 511 F.3d 974, 985 (9th Cir. 2007).

11 2. Methods for Attacking Standing

12 A party may make either a facial or factual attack on subject matter jurisdiction.
13 See, e.g., Warren v. Fox Family Worldwide, Inc., 328 F.3d 1136, 1139 (9th Cir. 2003).
14 In resolving a facial challenge, the court considers whether “the allegations contained in 15 [the] complaint are insufficient on their face to invoke federal jurisdiction.” Safe Air for 16 Everyone v. Meyer, 373 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th Cir. 2004). The court must accept the 17 allegations as true and must draw all reasonable inferences in the plaintiff’s favor. Wolfe 18 v. Strankman, 392 F.3d 358 (9th Cir. 2004). In resolving a factual challenge, the court 19 may consider evidence outside the complaint and ordinarily “need not presume the 20 truthfulness of the plaintiff’s allegations.” Safe Air for Everyone, 373 F.3d at 1039.
21 “Once the moving party has converted the motion to dismiss into a factual motion by 22 presenting affidavits or other evidence properly brought before the court, the party 23 opposing the motion must furnish affidavits or other evidence necessary to satisfy its 24 burden of establishing subject matter jurisdiction.” Id. At the motion to dismiss stage, 25 standing is demonstrated by allegations of “specific facts plausibly explaining” why the 26 requirements are met. Barnum Timber Co. v. EPA, 633 F.3d 894, 899 (9th Cir. 2011).

27 3. Analysis

28 In this case, Defendant makes a factual attack on subject matter jurisdiction,

1 arguing that because the evidence does not bear out that Plaintiffs calls were recorded, 2 Plaintiffs did not suffer an injury and therefore do not have standing to sue.

3 a. Defendant’s Declaration Does Not Justify Dismissal

4 In support of its argument, Defendant filed with its motion to dismiss a declaration 5 by Ian Jones, Defendant’s Director of Support Services. In his declaration, Mr. Jones
6 states that Defendant’s Senior Vice President of Operations asked him to review all 7 Securus calls made by Plaintiffs Romero and Tiscareno from 2008 until the present to 8 determine whether any of their calls with an attorney had been monitored or recorded.
9 (Doc. No. 11-1 at 2.) Mr. Jones thus searched all call records in Defendant’s “possession, 10 custody, or control from all detention facilities within the United States for records of 11 calls involving” Plaintiffs. According to Mr. Jones, Defendant did not record or monitor 12 any calls between Plaintiff Romero or Plaintiff Tiscareno and their respective attorneys.²
13 (Id.) Mr. Jones also states that he “searched call records for the attorney telephone 14 numbers listed in Paragraph 44 of Plaintiffs’ First Amended Complaint[, and] Securus 15 does not have any recordings of calls made to or from those phone numbers, as any 16 potential recordings were purged shortly after they were made.” (Id. at 3.) Notably, Mr.
17 Jones does not say that Defendant never recorded any calls to or from those attorney 18 telephone numbers, but only that Securus does not have any recordings of those calls, as 19 any potential recordings have been purged.³

20 While the court may consider Mr. Jones’s declaration in evaluating Defendant’s 21 factual attack on subject matter jurisdiction, the Ninth Circuit has made clear that “where 22

23 ² Mr. Jones also declares that while some fields in his summary report have no 24 information, he reviewed those calls and confirmed that none were made to attorneys.
25 (Doc. No. 11-1 at 2.)

26 ³ Mr. Jones submitted a second declaration with Defendant’s reply brief. (Doc. No. 18-27 1.) In it, Mr. Jones defends the completeness of his search and the sufficiency of 28 Defendant’s records. But he once again does not state that no attorney phone numbers were recorded. Instead, he repeats his assertion that “no calls involving an attorney and either Mr. Romero or Mr. Tiscareno were recorded.” (Id. at 3 (emphasis added).)

1 the jurisdictional issue and substantive issues are so intertwined that the question of 2 jurisdiction is dependent on the resolution of factual issues going to the merits, the 3 jurisdictional determination should await a determination of the relevant facts on either a 4 motion going to the merits or at trial.” Augustine v. United States, 704 F.2d 1074, 1077
5 (9th Cir. 1983). Indeed, a district court risks error by ignoring this direction. See Safe 6 Air for Everyone, 373 F.3d at 1040. In Safe Air for Everyone, the Ninth Circuit held that 7 a district court erred by dismissing a case pursuant to Rule 12(b)(1) where “the 8 jurisdictional issue and substantive issues in th[e] case [were] so intertwined that the 9 question of jurisdiction [was] dependent on the resolution of factual issues going to the 10 merits.” Id. Because of this error, the court reviewed the district court’s order “as a grant 11 of summary judgment on the merits” rather than a dismissal for lack of subject matter 12 jurisdiction. Id.

13 Here, the jurisdictional and substantive issues are significantly intertwined. The 14 salient question in evaluating Plaintiffs’ standing is whether Defendant recorded 15 Plaintiffs’ calls. Likewise, the salient question in determining which party prevails on the 16 merits will also be whether Defendant recorded Plaintiffs’ calls. Thus, if the court were 17 to decide this question now, it would for all intents and purposes be granting summary 18 judgment in favor of Defendant. See id. The court is not willing to take that step at this 19 time.

20 b. Plaintiffs’ Allegations Are Sufficient Under Spokeo

21 Defendant also argues that, even if Plaintiffs’ calls were recorded, Plaintiffs lack 22 standing to sue based on a bare statutory violation of CIPA.⁴ Defendant points to 23 Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 1547 (2016), as revised (May 24, 2016), in 24 support of its argument. In Spokeo, the Supreme Court discussed the “concrete” and 25

26 ⁴ Defendant’s additional argument that Plaintiff Elliott lacks standing because the 27 attorney-client privilege exists only for the benefit of the client misses the point. Plaintiff 28 Elliott is not seeking to protect his rights under the attorney-client privilege. Rather, he is seeking to defend his rights under CIPA.

1 “particularized” components of the injury-in-fact requirement. For an injury to be 2 concrete, it “must be de facto”; that is, it must actually exist.” Id. at 1548. “For an 3 injury to be particularized, it must affect the plaintiff in a personal and individual way.”
4 Id. (internal quotations omitted). The Supreme Court noted that a plaintiff does not 5 “automatically satisf[y] the injury-in-fact requirement whenever a statute grants a person 6 a statutory right and purports to authorize that person to sue to vindicate that right.” Id. at 7 1549. Instead, “Article III standing requires a concrete injury even in the context of a 8 statutory violation.” Id. The Supreme Court acknowledged, however, that “the violation 9 of a procedural right granted by statute can be sufficient in some circumstances to 10 constitute injury in fact.” Id. Spokeo thus distinguishes between “bare procedural 11 violation[s]” and violations that “cause harm or present any material risk of harm.” Id. at 12 1549–50.

13 The statute at issue in this case, CIPA, prohibits unauthorized interceptions of 14 communications in order “to protect the right of privacy.” Cal. Penal Code 15 § 630. “[I]nvasion of privacy . . . [is] a serious threat to the free exercise of personal 16 liberties and cannot be tolerated in a free and civilized society.” Id.; see also Flanagan v.
17 Flanagan, 27 Cal. 4th 766, 775 (2002) (stating that the “legislative purpose of the Privacy 18 Act” is to “giv[e] greater protection to privacy interests”). In keeping with this priority, 19 CIPA section 636 makes it a felony to, “without permission from all parties to the 20 conversation, eavesdrop[] on or record[], by means of an electronic device, a 21 conversation, or any portion thereof, between a person who is in the physical custody of a 22 law enforcement officer or other public officer, or who is on the property of a law 23 enforcement agency or other public agency, and that person’s attorney” Notably, 24 unlike section 632, section 636 does not require that the conversation be confidential and 25 that the parties intend it as such. Compare Cal. Penal Code § 632 with id. § 636. Section 26 637.2 provides a private right of action to any person injured by a violation of section 27
28

1 636.⁵

2 A violation of CIPA involves much greater concrete and particularized harm than a 3 technical violation of the Fair Credit Reporting Act (“FRCA”), the statute at issue in 4 Spokeo. While “[a] violation of one of the FCRA’s procedural requirements may result 5 in no harm,” such as reporting of “an incorrect zip code,” Spokeo, 136 S. Ct. at 1549, a 6 violation of CIPA is a violation of privacy rights.

7 Judge Koh of the Northern District of California recently engaged in a lengthy and 8 thoughtful analysis of whether CIPA violations, without more, constitute injury in fact.
9 In Matera v. Google Inc., No. 15-CV-04062-LHK, 2016 WL 5339806 (N.D. Cal. Sept.
10 23, 2016), Judge Koh first recognized that Spokeo teaches that “two factors may be 11 relevant to whether the violation of statutory rights constitutes injury in fact: (1) whether 12 the statutory violation bears a ‘close relationship to a harm that has traditionally been 13 regarded as providing a basis for a lawsuit in English or American courts,’ and (2) 14 congressional judgment in establishing the statutory right, including whether the statutory 15 right is substantive or procedural.” Id. at *9 (quoting Spokeo, 136 S. Ct. at 1549). As to 16 the first factor, Judge Koh noted that invasion of privacy, which CIPA exists to prevent, 17 “has been recognized as a common law tort for over a century.” Id. at *10. As to the 18 second factor, Judge Koh found that CIPA created “enforceable, substantive legal rights 19” Id. at *13. Based on her analysis, Judge Koh concluded “that the judgment of . . .
20 the California Legislature indicate[s] that the alleged violations of Plaintiff’s statutory 21 rights under . . . CIPA constitute concrete injury in fact. This conclusion is supported by 22 the historical practice of courts recognizing that the unauthorized interception of 23 communication constitutes cognizable injury.” Id. at *15.⁶

26 ⁵ A September 30, 2016, amendment to section 637.2 provides that an injured person may 27 recover $5,000 per statutory violation.

28 ⁶ Judge Koh also rejected the claim that state statutes like CIPA cannot confer Article III standing, noting that Spokeo “said nothing about the ability of state legislatures to create rights sufficient to confer Article III standing,” and “the Ninth Circuit has held that ‘state

1 The court agrees with Judge Koh’s well-reasoned order. Rather than being a “bare 2 procedural violation,” a CIPA violation is “the violation of a procedural right granted by 3 statute . . . sufficient . . . to constitute injury in fact.” See Spokeo, 136 S. Ct. at 1549.
4 The California Court of Appeal appears to agree, stating that section 637.2 of CIPA “is 5 fairly read as establishing that no violation of the Privacy Act is to go unpunished. Any 6 invasion of privacy involves an affront to human dignity which the Legislature could 7 conclude is worth at least $[5,000]. The right to recover this statutory minimum accrued 8 at the moment the Privacy Act was violated.” Friddle v. Epstein, 16 Cal. App. 4th 1649, 9 1660–61 (1993), opinion modified on denial of reh’g (July 7, 1993); see also Bona Fide 10 Conglomerate, Inc. v. SourceAmerica, No. 314CV00751GPCDHB, 2016 WL 3543699, 11 at *8 (S.D. Cal. June 29, 2016) (holding that allegation of CIPA violation is sufficient to 12 confer standing). The alleged harm to all Plaintiffs—an invasion of their privacy rights—13 coupled with the additional harm to Plaintiffs Romero and Tiscareno of forfeiting the 14 protections of the attorney-client privilege, constitute a concrete and particularized injury 15 that is actual and imminent. Accordingly, the court finds that Plaintiffs have sufficiently 16 alleged an injury in fact to support standing and subject matter jurisdiction, and the court 17 denies Defendant’s motion to dismiss the FAC on those grounds.⁷

18 B. Administrative Remedies

19 Defendant next argues that Plaintiffs failed to exhaust available administrative 20 remedies, and thus, under California law, are barred from seeking judicial relief. Though 21

22
23 law can create interests that support standing in federal courts’ and ‘state statutes 24 constitute state law that can create such interests.’” Id. at *14 (quoting Cantrell v. City of Long Beach, 241 F.3d 674, 684 (9th Cir. 2001)).

25 ⁷ The court rejects Defendant’s argument that Plaintiffs lack standing to seek an 26 injunction. While Plaintiffs Romero and Tiscareno may no longer be incarcerated, 27 Plaintiff Elliott, as a criminal defense attorney, may require Defendant’s services to 28 communicate with other clients in the future. As standing is satisfied if at least one named plaintiff meets the requirements, Bates v. United Parcel Serv., Inc., 511 F.3d 974, 985 (9th Cir. 2007), Plaintiffs here have standing to seek an injunction.

1 Defendant states that the “exhaustion requirements applicable to Plaintiffs’ claims are 2 straightforward,” in reality they are anything but. It is true that the California Code of 3 Regulations sets forth appeals processes for prisoner grievances, but it is far from certain 4 that those processes apply to the claims in this case, and Defendant has presented no 5 authority that persuades the court of that position.

6 That is because this case is not like the Private Attorney General Act (“PAGA”)
7 case that Defendant cites in support of its argument, nor is it like other comparable 8 statutes. PAGA expressly provides, within the statute itself, that before commencing a 9 suit, an aggrieved employee must “give written notice . . . [to] the Labor and Workforce 10 Development Agency and . . . the employer of the specific provisions of this code alleged 11 to have been violated, including the facts and theories to support the alleged violation.” 12 Cal. Lab. Code § 2699.3. The employee must then wait a specified period of time or 13 until the Labor and Workforce Development Agency gives notice that it will not 14 investigate the grievance. Id. The California Fair Employment and Housing Act 15 (“FEHA”) is a similar example. FEHA provides that persons claiming violations must 16 file an administrative complaint with the Department of Fair Employment and Housing 17 and obtain a “right to sue” letter from the Department before commencing a civil action.
18 Cal. Gov’t Code §§ 12960, 965(b).

19 Here, by contrast, CIPA expressly provides a judicial remedy with no mention of 20 any preliminary administrative requirement. Cal. Penal Code § 636. Section 637.2 21 simply states that “[a]ny person who has been injured by a violation of this chapter may 22 bring an action against the person who committed the violation” Defendant did not 23 cite, nor is the court aware of, any CIPA case that even mentions a plaintiff’s duty to first 24 exhaust administrative remedies.⁸ The procedures Defendant cites are “intended to 25 provide a remedy for inmates and parolees with identified grievances and to provide an 26

27 ⁸ Even if the administrative procedures apply to the claims of Plaintiffs Romero and 28 Tiscareno, they certainly do not apply to Plaintiff Elliott.

1 administrative mechanism for review of departmental policies, decisions, actions, 2 conditions, or omissions that have a material adverse effect” upon inmates or parolees’ 3 “health, safety, or welfare.” Cal. Code Regs. tit. 15, § 3084.1. Thus, while the 4 regulations cover identified prison grievances relating to inmates’ welfare, there is no 5 indication they also cover violations of a generally applicable California privacy statute, 6 or allegations of fraud based on misrepresentations or omissions made far outside the 7 prison walls, or violations of section 17200 premised on either of those claims.

8 Simply put, this is not a traditional prison grievance case. Compare for example, 9 the issues that have served to generate some of the foremost California cases on this 10 topic: the suitability of medical treatment while in prison, see Wright v. State, 122 Cal.
11 App. 4th 659 (2004); Parthemore v. Col., 221 Cal. App. 4th 1372 (2013), or the ability of 12 prisoners to access to their inmate records, see In re Muszalski, 52 Cal. App. 3d 500 13 (1975). Those are prison grievance issues. This is not, and for that reason, the court 14 denies Defendant’s motion to dismiss on the grounds that Plaintiffs failed to exhaust 15 administrative remedies.

16 C. Failure to State a Claim

17 Defendant moves to dismiss the remainder of the FAC under Rule 12(b)(6) for 18 failure to state a claim.

19 1. Section 17200 claim

20 Section 17200, California’s unfair competition law, “prohibits any unfair 21 competition, which means ‘any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business act or practice.’” 22 In re Pomona Valley Med. Group, 476 F.3d 665, 674 (9th Cir. 2007) (quoting Cal. Bus.
23 & Prof. Code § 17200, et seq.). Section 17200’s coverage is “sweeping,” and its standard 24 for wrongful business conduct is “intentionally broad.” In re First Alliance Mortg. Co., 25 471 F.3d 977, 995 (9th Cir. 2006). Each prong of section 17200 provides a separate and 26 distinct theory of liability. Lozano v. AT & T Wireless Servs., Inc., 504 F.3d 718, 731
27 (9th Cir. 2007). “Injunctions are the primary form of relief available under [section 28 17200] to protect consumers from unfair business practices, while restitution is a type of 1 ancillary relief.” Kwikset Corp. v. Superior Court, 51 Cal. 4th 310, 337 (2011).

2 To pursue either an individual or a representative claim under section 17200, a 3 plaintiff “must have suffered an injury in fact and lost money or property as a result of 4 such unfair competition.” Hall v. Time Inc., 158 Cal. App. 4th 847, 849 (2008). The 5 court has already determined that Plaintiffs have adequately alleged an injury in fact 6 based on Defendant’s CIPA violations. The question, then, is whether Plaintiffs have 7 also properly alleged that they lost money or property as a result. In Kwikset, 51 Cal. 4th 8 310 (2011), the California Supreme Court recently clarified what constitutes “lost money 9 or property” for purposes of section 17200. The court in Kwikset held that a “consumer 10 who relies on a product label and challenges a misrepresentation contained therein can 11 satisfy the standing requirement of [section 17200] by alleging, as plaintiffs have here, 12 that he or she would not have bought the product but for the misrepresentation. That 13 assertion is sufficient to allege causation—the purchase would not have been made but 14 for the misrepresentation. It is also sufficient to allege economic injury.” Id. at 330.

15 While some courts prior to Kwikset held that there was no loss if a consumer got 16 what he or she paid for, see Hall, 158 Cal. App. 4th at 855, which is the thrust of 17 Defendant’s argument here, Kwikset explicitly rejected that “benefit of the bargain” 18 defense, see 51 Cal. 4th at 332; Hinojos v. Kohl’s Corp., 718 F.3d 1098, 1107 (9th Cir.
19 2013). As the Ninth Circuit stated in Hinojos, “the benefit of the bargain defense is 20 permissible only if the misrepresentation that the consumer alleges was not material. A 21 representation is material, however, if a reasonable consumer would attach importance to 22 it or if the maker of the representation knows or has reason to know that its recipient 23 regards or is likely to regard the matter as important in determining his choice of action.”
24 718 F.3d at 1107 (internal quotations omitted). “Furthermore, the materiality of a 25 misrepresentation is typically an issue of fact, and therefore should not be decided at the 26 motion to dismiss stage.” Id. n.7.

27 Here, Plaintiffs allege Defendant violated all three prongs of section 17200. (Doc.
28 No. 8 ¶¶ 121–23.) And Plaintiffs state that they “would not have paid for and used the

1 Securus telephone system for private and privileged phone conversations as they did, or 2 would not have paid as much for them, had they known” that Defendant was allegedly 3 fraudulently concealing facts (as discussed below) and recording their calls in violation of 4 CIPA. (Doc. No. 8 ¶ 126.) Following Kwikset, that is sufficient to state a claim for relief 5 under the unlawful and fraudulent⁹ prongs of section 17200. Cf. Stoba v.
6 Saveology.com, LLC, No. 13-CV-2925-BAS NLS, 2014 WL 3573404, at *5 (S.D. Cal.
7 July 18, 2014) (dismissing section 17200 claim based on CIPA violation because 8 plaintiffs “fail[ed] to direct this Court’s attention to any allegations in the complaint that 9 provide any facts plausibly demonstrating lost money or property”); Archer v. United 10 Rentals, Inc., 195 Cal. App. 4th 807, 816 (2011), as modified on denial of reh’g (June 13, 11 2011) (dismissing section 17200 claim where plaintiffs claimed “the unlawful collection 12 and recordation of their personal identification information, [which was] an invasion of 13 their right of privacy,” but “failed to demonstrate how such privacy violation translate[d] 14 into a loss of money or property”); Folgelstrom v. Lamps Plus, Inc., 195 Cal. App. 4th 15 986, 993 (2011), as modified (June 7, 2011) (stating that in the typical section 17200 16 case, a plaintiff alleges “that he made a purchase or otherwise parted with money on 17 account of [the defendant’s] allegedly unfair practices”). Moreover, because section 18 17200’s standing requirements do not apply to absent class members at this stage, In re
19 Tobacco II Cases, 46 Cal. 4th 298, 324 (2009), nothing more is required right now.¹⁰

22 ⁹ “Generally, to be actionable under the UCL, a concealed fact must be material in the 23 sense that it is likely to deceive a reasonable consumer. Unlike a common law fraud 24 claim, a UCL fraud claim requires no proof that the plaintiff was actually deceived.
25 Instead, the plaintiff must produce evidence showing a likelihood of confounding an 26 appreciable number of reasonably prudent purchasers exercising ordinary care.” 27 Clemens v. DaimlerChrysler Corp., 534 F.3d 1017, 1025–26 (9th Cir. 2008); see also 28 Daugherty v. Am. Honda Motor Co., 144 Cal. App. 4th 824, 838 (2006), as modified (Nov. 8, 2006) (“In order to be deceived, members of the public must have had an expectation or an assumption about the matter in question.”).

¹⁰ It of course remains to be seen whether Plaintiffs can prove that they are entitled to “disgorgement and restitution of all monies acquired” by Defendant, (Doc. No. 8 ¶ 130),

1 2. Fraud Claims

2 The FAC alleges fraud in the form of both fraudulent concealment/intentional 3 omission of material facts, (Doc. No. 8 ¶¶ 131–139), and intentional misrepresentation, 4 (id. ¶¶ 140–150). The elements of fraud in California are: “(1) a misrepresentation (false 5 representation, concealment, or nondisclosure); (2) knowledge of falsity (or scienter); 6 (3) intent to defraud, i.e., to induce reliance; (4) justifiable reliance; and (5) resulting 7 damage.” Robinson Helicopter Co. v. Dana Corp., 34 Cal. 4th 979, 990 (2004). For an 8 omission to be actionable, “the omission must be contrary to a representation actually 9 made by the defendant, or an omission of a fact the defendant was obliged to 10 disclose.” Daugherty v. Am. Honda Motor Co., 144 Cal. App. 4th 824, 835 (2006). A 11 defendant may be obliged to disclose a fact “when the defendant has exclusive 12 knowledge of material facts not known or reasonably accessible to the plaintiff” or “when 13 the defendant actively conceals a material fact from the plaintiff.” Collins v. eMachines, 14 Inc., 134 Cal. Rptr. 3d 588, 593 (Cal. App. 3d Dist. 2011), as modified (Dec. 28, 2011).

15 Defendant contends Plaintiffs have failed to meet Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 16 9(b)’s heightened pleading requirement, which applies to state causes of action made in 17 federal court. Vess v. Ciba-Geigy Corp. USA, 317 F.3d 1097, 1103 (9th Cir. 2003).

18 Rule 9(b) provides that “[i]n alleging fraud or mistake, a party must state with 19 particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake,” although “[m]alice, intent, 20 knowledge, and other conditions of a person’s mind may be alleged generally.” In cases 21 involving misstatements, “[a]llegations of fraud must be accompanied by ‘the who, what, 22 when, where, and how’ of the misconduct charged.” Vess, 317 F.3d at 1106 (quoting 23 Cooper v. Pickett, 137 F.3d 616, 627 (9th Cir. 1997)). “A plaintiff must set forth more 24 than the neutral facts necessary to identify the transaction. The plaintiff must set forth

25 _____
26 by proving that they paid more than market rate for telephone calls or would not have 27 used Defendant’s services had they been aware of Defendant’s conduct. But for now, 28 given that the court must accept as true Plaintiffs’ allegations to that effect, Plaintiffs have adequately pled a section 17200 claim.

1 what is false or misleading about a statement, and why it is false.” Id. (internal 2 quotations and alterations omitted). “Where a fraudulent omission is at issue, the 3 requirements of Rule 9(b) are relaxed, but not eliminated.” UMG Recordings, Inc. v.
4 Glob. Eagle Entm’t, Inc., 117 F. Supp. 3d 1092, 1107 (C.D. Cal. 2015); see also Huntair, 5 Inc. v. Gladstone, 774 F. Supp. 2d 1035, 1044 (N.D. Cal. 2011) (stating that the Rule 9(b) 6 standard is somewhat relaxed when a claim rests on an alleged fraudulent omission 7 because “a plaintiff cannot plead either the specific time of [an] omission or the place, as 8 he is not alleging an act, but a failure to act”). Either way, “Rule 9(b) demands that . . .
9 the circumstances constituting the alleged fraud be specific enough to “give [Defendant] 10 notice of the particular misconduct so that [it] can defend against the charge and not just 11 deny that [it has] done anything wrong.” Vess, 317 F.3d at 1106 (internal quotations and 12 alterations omitted).

13 The court finds that Plaintiffs have met Rule 9(b)’s requirement as to their 14 omissions claim, but failed to meet Rule 9(b)’s requirements as to their false 15 representations claim. Regarding the omissions, Plaintiffs allege that sometime between 16 April 14, 2014, and August 21, 2014 (when), Defendant employee Christopher Hudson 17 (who) knew that Defendant was improperly recording attorney-client calls (what), in San 18 Diego (where), but failed to disclose this information to the victims or the general public 19 (how). Because Defendant had “exclusive knowledge of material facts not known or 20 reasonably accessible to the plaintiff,” Collins, 202 Cal. App. 4th at 255, Defendant owed 21 a duty to disclose these facts. This, along with Plaintiffs’ claims that they would not have 22 used Defendant’s services if the omitted facts had been disclosed, see Mirkin v.
23 Wasserman, 5 Cal. 4th 1082, 1093 (1993), satisfies Rule 9(b).

24 Regarding the false representations, however, while Plaintiffs allege that 25 Defendant pledged to follow state laws regarding confidentiality, they do not allege who 26 at Securus made that statement, when he made it, or that he knew Securus was in fact not 27 following California law. Similarly, while Plaintiffs allege Defendant issued a press 28 release stating that Securus “found absolutely no evidence of attorney-client calls that

1 were recorded without the knowledge and consent of those parties,” they fail to allege 2 who made that statement and when.¹¹ Finally, though Plaintiffs allege that Defendant 3 knew it was recording the calls of individuals who added their telephone numbers to a 4 “Do Not Record” list with the San Diego Sheriff’s Office, they do not plead that 5 Defendant made any active false statements in connection with that list.¹²

6 Thus, for the foregoing reasons, the court dismisses, with leave to amend, 7 Plaintiffs’ Fourth Cause of Action (Fraud and Intentional Misrepresentation).

8 3. Negligence Claims

9 Defendant does not directly address Plaintiffs’ negligence claim.¹³ (See generally 10 Doc. Nos. 11, 18.) Thus, the court presumes that in moving to dismiss this claim, 11 Defendant relies on its previously discussed argument that Plaintiffs have not suffered 12 damages and therefore lack an element of negligence under California law. See Brown v.
13 Ransweiler, 171 Cal. App. 4th 516, 534 (2009) (stating elements of negligence are (1) a 14 legal duty to use due care, (2) breach of that duty, (3) the breach was the proximate or 15 legal cause of the resulting injury, and (4) actual loss or damage resulting from the breach 16 of the duty of care). Because the court finds that Plaintiffs have satisfactorily alleged 17 damages in this case, the court denies Defendant’s motion to dismiss this claim.

18 4. Unjust Enrichment Claims

19 As Defendant correctly pointed out, there is not a standalone cause of action for 20 unjust enrichment in California. Durell v. Sharp Healthcare, 183 Cal. App. 4th 1350, 21 _____

22 ¹¹ The court notes that Plaintiffs attached documents to their opposition that may address 23 these insufficiencies. But Plaintiffs must satisfy Rule 9(b) in the pleading, not through 24 exhibits to their arguments.

25 ¹² Plaintiffs also allege that a brochure for Defendant’s “Video Visitation” service states 26 that those sessions will not be recorded or monitored, but that service is not at issue in 27 this case.

28 ¹³ Plaintiffs’ negligence claim is not subject to Rule 9(b)’s heightened pleading standard.
Kearns v. Ford Motor Co., 567 F.3d 1120, 1124 (9th Cir. 2009) (“Where fraud is not an essential element of a claim, only those allegations of a complaint which aver fraud are subject to Rule 9(b)’s heightened pleading standard.”).

1 1370 (2010). But unjust enrichment is synonymous with restitution, and when a plaintiff 2 alleges unjust enrichment, a court may “construe the cause of action as a quasi-contract 3 claim seeking restitution.” Rutherford Holdings, LLC v. Plaza Del Rey, 223 Cal. App.
4 4th 221, 231 (2014). There are “several potential bases for a cause of action seeking 5 restitution.” Durell, 183 Cal. App. 4th at 1370. For example, “restitution may be 6 awarded where the defendant obtained a benefit from the plaintiff by fraud, duress, 7 conversion, or similar conduct.” Id.

8 Plaintiffs are free to seek restitution in the alternative to their other claims, see 9 Astiana v. Hain Celestial Grp., Inc., 783 F.3d 753, 762 (9th Cir. 2015) (citing Fed. R.
10 Civ. P. 8(d)(2)), and one basis for restitution—a benefit obtained by fraud—is at issue 11 here. Accordingly, the court denies Defendant’s motion to dismiss this claim.

12 5. Conversion Claim

13 “Conversion is the wrongful exercise of dominion over the property of another.” 14 Welco Elecs., Inc. v. Mora, 223 Cal. App. 4th 202, 208 (2014), reh’g denied (Feb. 19, 15 2014). The elements of conversion are: “(1) the plaintiff’s ownership or right to 16 possession of the property; (2) the defendant’s conversion by a wrongful act or 17 disposition of property rights; and (3) damages.” Id. “Money may be the subject of 18 conversion if the claim involves a specific, identifiable sum.” Id.

19 “California cases permitting an action for conversion of money typically involve 20 those who have misappropriated, commingled, or misapplied specific funds held for the 21 benefit of others.” PCO, Inc. v. Christensen, Miller, Fink, Jacobs, Glaser, Weil & 22 Shapiro, LLP, 150 Cal. App. 4th 384, 396 (2007). That is not Plaintiffs’ claim here.
23 Instead, the crux of Plaintiffs’ claim is that Defendant charged them for services they 24 otherwise would not have used, or at a minimum, overcharged them. But as the 25 California Court of Appeal has noted, there is no support for the position that an 26 overcharge, without more, gives rise to a claim for conversion. McKell v. Washington 27 Mut., Inc., 142 Cal. App. 4th 1457, 1492 (2006); see also Gutierrez v. Wells Fargo &
28 Co., 622 F. Supp. 2d 946, 956 (N.D. Cal. 2009) (same). Accordingly, the court

1 dismisses, without leave to amend, Plaintiffs’ Seventh Cause of Action (Conversion).

2 II. MOTION TO STRIKE CLASS ACTION ALLEGATIONS

3 A. Legal Standards

4 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(f) states that a district court “may strike from a 5 pleading an insufficient defense or any redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous 6 matter.” “The function of a 12(f) motion to strike is to avoid the expenditure of time and 7 money that must arise from litigating spurious issues by dispensing with those issues 8 prior to trial.” Whittlestone, Inc. v. Handi-Craft Co., 618 F.3d 970, 973 (9th Cir. 2010) 9 (internal quotations omitted). “Motions to strike are generally regarded with disfavor 10 because of the limited importance of pleading in federal practice, and because they are 11 often used as a delaying tactic.” Varrasso v. Barksdale, No. 13-CV-1982-BAS-JLB, 12 2016 WL 1375594, at *1 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 5, 2016) (quoting Neilson v. Union Bank of 13 California, N.A., 290 F. Supp. 2d 1101, 1152 (C.D. Cal. 2003)). “The motion should not 14 be granted unless the matter to be stricken clearly could have no possible bearing on the 15 subject of the litigation. If there is any doubt the court should deny the motion.” Obesity 16 Research Inst., LLC v. Fiber Research Int’l, LLC, No. 15-CV-00595-BAS(MDD), 2016
17 WL 739795, at *3 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 25, 2016) (internal quotations and alterations omitted).
18 When deciding a Rule 12(f) motion, courts must accept the nonmoving party’s 19 allegations as true and liberally construe the pleadings in their favor. Multimedia Patent 20 Trust v. Microsoft Corp., 525 F. Supp. 2d 1200, 1211 (S.D. Cal. 2007).

21 B. Analysis

22 Class allegations are generally not tested at the pleadings stage and instead are 23 usually tested after one party has filed a motion for class certification. E.g., Thorpe v.
24 Abbott Labs., Inc., 534 F. Supp. 2d 1120, 1125 (N.D. Cal. 2008); In re Wal-Mart Stores, 25 Inc. Wage & Hour Litig., 505 F. Supp. 2d 609, 615 (N.D. Cal. 2007). As the Supreme 26 Court has explained, however, “[s]ometimes the issues are plain enough from the 27 pleadings to determine whether the interests of the absent parties are fairly encompassed 28 within the named plaintiff’s claim.” Gen. Tel. Co. of Sw. v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 160

1 (1982). Thus, the court may grant a motion to strike class allegations if it is clear from 2 the complaint that the class claims cannot be maintained. Sanders v. Apple, Inc., 672 F.
3 Supp. 2d 978, 990–91 (N.D. Cal. 2009).

4 Defendant argues that the court should strike Plaintiffs’ class allegations because 5 the putative class contains “persons who have no conceivable basis to claim injury.” This 6 is because, according to Defendant, the subclasses include inmates and attorneys who 7 may have had non-confidential attorney-client conversations listened to, eavesdropped 8 on, or recorded by Defendant, as well as attorneys who cannot assert the attorney-client 9 privilege for themselves.

10 These arguments miss the mark. First, Defendant ignores the plain language of 11 section 636, which does not require that conversations be confidential. See Cal. Penal 12 Code § 636. Thus, Defendant’s focus on the individualized inquiry required to determine 13 whether calls were confidential is completely misguided. The cases Defendant cites in 14 support of its argument dealt with claims under section 632, which, unlike section 636, is 15 only actionable for confidential calls. See Torres v. Nutrisystem, Inc., 289 F.R.D. 587
16 (C.D. Cal. 2013); NEI Contracting & Eng’g, Inc. v. Hanson Aggregates Pac. Sw., Inc., 17 No. 12-CV-01685-BAS JLB, 2015 WL 1309938, at *1 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 24, 2015), on 18 reconsideration, sub nom. NEI Contracting & Eng’g, Inc. v. Hanson Aggregates, Inc., 19 No. 12-CV-01685-BAS JLB, 2015 WL 4923510 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 18, 2015). Moreover, 20 those decisions came about at the class certification stage rather than the pleading stage, 21 further undermining their usefulness to Defendant. Second, as discussed in footnote 4, 22 the attorney class is alleging violations of section 636—not the attorney client-23 privilege—and thus the attorney subclass does not lack standing for that reason.

24 All told, Defendant’s motion to strike falls far short of the high threshold for 25 disposing of class action allegations under Rule 12(f). At this stage, the court simply 26 cannot be certain, from the face of the complaint, that the class claims cannot be 27 maintained. Thus, Defendant’s motion is premature, and a later motion for class 28 certification is the more appropriate vehicle for Defendant’s arguments. Given that 1 “[a]ny doubt concerning the import of the allegations to be stricken weighs in favor of 2 denying the motion to strike,” In re Wal-Mart, 505 F. Supp. 2d at 614, the court denies 3 Defendant’s motion to strike.

4 CONCLUSION

5 For the foregoing reasons, the court dismisses, with leave to amend, Plaintiffs’ 6 Fourth Cause of Action (Fraud and Intentional Misrepresentation). The court dismisses, 7 without leave to amend, Plaintiffs’ Seventh Cause of Action (Conversion). The court 8 denies the remainder of Defendant’s motion to dismiss, and the court denies Defendant’s 9 motion to strike. If Plaintiffs wish to file a second amended complaint to address their 10 claim for intentional misrepresentation, they must do so within fourteen days of the entry 11 of this order.

12 IT IS SO ORDERED.
