UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS EASTERN DIVISION

98 C 5596

ORDER

Pending before the court are two motions brought by the City of Chicago: Motion to Transfer as Related Case (seeking the transfer of Godfrey v. City of Chicago, No. 12 C 08601, to this court as related to Lewis v. City of Chicago, 98 C 5596 [603] and Motion to Enforce Injunctive Order to Dismiss Godfrey Complaint [605]. Godfrey is brought by a number of plaintiffs (representative and individual) and a class, all alleged to be members of the Lewis class. They contend that as part of the injunctive order in the Lewis case, the City was required to hire 111 Lewis class members as firefighters; that persons including the Godfrey plaintiffs who were interested in being hired as one of the 111 were required to take a Physical Abilities Test ("PAT"), and that the PAT had an unjustified, disparate impact on women in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

The motion to reassign Godfrey to this court as a related case is denied. The definitions section of Local Rule 40.4 requires that for two or more cases to be found related, one of the following conditions must be satisfied: the cases must involve the same property, involve some of the same issues of fact or law, grow out of the same transaction or occurrence or involve the same classes. The City's brief talks about "overlap," which the court agrees exists, but it does not indicate how any of these four requirements is satisfied. Beyond the requirements of L.R. 40.4(a), the local rule governing the reassignment of cases as related has four requirements, all four of which must be satisfied: both cases are pending before this court, the handling of both cases by the same judge is likely to result in a substantial saving of judicial time and effort, the earlier case has not progressed to the point where designating a later filed case as related would be likely to delay the proceedings in the earlier case substantially; and the cases are susceptible of disposition in a single proceeding. L.R.40.4(b).

Godfrey flunks the relatedness test. While it is true that both Godfrey and Lewis are pending in this court and further true that this court is familiar with the nature of the relief ordered in Lewis, none of the other requirements of L.R.40.4(b) is satisfied. Lewis was tried in 2004; the issue tried and determined was whether the written test given to firefighter candidates had an illegal racially disparate impact. Godfrey is a new case, raising the question of whether the physical abilities test given to women members of the Lewis class who wished to be considered for hiring as firefighters had an illegal disparate impact on women, a separate, highly complex issue that was never considered or decided in Lewis. The handling of both cases by the same judge will result in no savings of judicial time and effort, as the issues in the cases are totally different and the Lewis case, except for some minor administrative loose ends involving the mailing of award checks, is completed; the jobs that were to be distributed have been distributed and people are holding them. The only reason why a transfer of Godfrey to this court would not result in substantial delay is that there is nothing to delay; Lewis is over. Of course, the court could decide to hold up the mailing of the award checks to the Lewis class while it decided the issues in Godfrey, thereby delaying unconscionably the resolution of Lewis for no good reason. Nor are the cases susceptible to disposition in a single proceeding. Lewis was tried nine years ago and Godrey is not close to ready for trial; without a time machine, this requirement cannot possibly be satisfied. The City's basic argument, that if the Godfrey case goes forward in the face of the Lewis injunction, the City might be subject to double liability strikes the court as fanciful. Nothing in the Lewis injunction was intended to insulate the City from what is alleged to have been an independent Title VII violation, and the judge presiding over Godfrey, in the event the plaintiffs succeed in proving what they have alleged, will be in a good position to protect the City from any such duplicative recovery. While it is possible, hypothetically, that a challenge to the fairness of the PAT could have been considered as part of the process of determining the relief to be given to members of the Lewis class, it is way too late to address the Godfrey issues as part of the Lewis case.

The City's motion to transfer Godfrey to this court as related is denied. Since the motion for a finding of relatedness is denied, the City's second motion, its Motion to Enforce Injunctive Order to Dismiss Godfrey Complaint ought probably to be considered by Judge Tharp as the judge presiding over the Godfrey litigation. This court, therefore denies the Motion to Enforce Injunctive Order to Dismiss Godfrey Complaint without prejudice to its being brought before Judge Tharp.

ENTER:

JOAN B. GOTTSCHALL United States District Judge

DATED: January 4, 2013